Summary

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Alan J. Goldberger and William A. Postelnik, two associated persons of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions because of Goldberger's and Postelnik's participation in the firm's efforts to conceal information from the Board, and to submit false information to the Board, in connection with a Board inspection. The Board is limiting these sanctions to censures because Goldberger and Postelnik promptly and voluntarily brought the matter to the Board's attention, disclosed their own misconduct and the misconduct of others, and made affirmative efforts to provide the Board with relevant information.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Alan J. Goldberger, CPA and William A. Postelnik, CPA (collectively, "Respondents").

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, the Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for the purpose of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, the Respondents each consent to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

ORDER

III.

On the basis of information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[1/] that:

1. Alan J. Goldberger is a certified public accountant licensed by the State of New York. During the relevant time period, Goldberger was a partner in Goldstein & Morris ("G&M" or "Firm"), a registered public accounting firm, and was an associated person of G&M, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

2. William A. Postelnik is a certified public accountant licensed by the State of New York. During the relevant time period, Postelnik was a partner in G&M and was an associated person of G&M, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

3. From about October 2003 through July 2004, G&M prepared the financial statements for New York Film Works, Inc. ("NYFW") and RTG Ventures, Inc. ("RTG"). During this same time period, NYFW and RTG each filed these financial statements with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under the cover of various Forms 10-KSB and 10-QSB. Both NYFW and RTG are issuers, as defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

4. G&M issued an audit report for NYFW, dated October 10, 2003, with respect to financial statements that G&M had prepared for NYFW.

5. G&M issued an audit report for RTG, dated December 9, 2003, with respect to financial statements that G&M had prepared for RTG.

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

ORDER

6. On or about September 20, 2004, the Board, through its Division of Registration and Inspections ("Inspections"), informed G&M that it would be conducting an inspection of the Firm during November 2004. In connection with the inspection, Inspections directed a request to the Firm in the care of the Firm's co-founder, president and managing partner ("the managing partner"). Among other things, the request called for the Firm to provide the Board in writing with the total number of engagement hours incurred by all of the Firm's accounting or professional personnel related to the Firm's audits of NYFW and RTG, the number of hours each person worked on the engagement, and certain other documents related to each engagement.

7. The managing partner discussed with the Respondents how to respond to the Board's request. The managing partner and the Respondents were aware that federal law prohibits a registered public accounting firm from providing its issuer audit clients with certain bookkeeping services,[2/] and they discussed what to do about the fact that the Firm had provided NYFW and RTG with the services described in paragraph 3 above. Ultimately, they formulated and carried out a plan to conceal from the Board information about some of the services that the Firm had provided to NYFW and RTG. Pursuant to that plan, on or about October 1, 2004, the Respondents prepared, and the Firm submitted to Inspections, a written response that omitted the number of hours worked by a G&M employee on the audits of NYFW and RTG. The Respondents intentionally omitted that information from the Firm's response because that employee had also worked on preparing the financial statements of NYFW and RTG, and the Respondents' were concerned that information about the employee's work on the audits might lead Inspections to discover that the Firm had also prepared the financial statements – a fact that the Respondents wished to conceal from the Board.

8. In addition, the Respondents and the managing partner discussed the possibility that the Board would find fault with the Firm because of the lack of certain audit documentation in the Firm's files. They therefore formulated and carried out a plan to create and back-date certain documents and place them in the Firm's audit files before Inspections reviewed the files. Specifically, on or about October 15, 2004, the Respondents and the managing partner generated purported management representation letters from both NYFW and RTG, back-dated them to dates in 2003 and 2004, and placed them in the Firm's audit files. In participating in this conduct, the

Respondents intended to conceal from the Board that the Firm had failed to comply with certain PCAOB standards in connection with the preparation and issuance of audit reports for NYFW and RTG.[3/]

9. Approximately two weeks after the Firm's submission of the written response described in paragraph 7 above, and before Inspections began its field work, the Respondents, through counsel, contacted Inspections and disclosed the conduct described in paragraphs 7 and 8 above. Within one day of that disclosure, the Respondents resigned their positions with the Firm. After resigning their positions, the Respondents made themselves available for voluntary interviews with the PCAOB's Division of Enforcement and Investigations ("Enforcement"). In addition, the Respondents each voluntarily produced to Enforcement documents and other relevant information.

10. PCAOB Rule 4006 states that –

> [e]very registered public accounting firm, and every associated person of a registered public accounting firm, shall cooperate with the Board in the performance of any Board inspection. Cooperation shall include, but is not limited to, cooperating and complying with any request, made in furtherance of the Board's authority and responsibilities under the Act, to – (1) provide access to, and the ability to copy, any record in the possession, custody, or control of such firm or person, and (2) provide information by oral interviews, written responses, or otherwise.

11. Inherent in the obligation to cooperate with requests for documents and information is both an obligation not to conceal requested documents or information and an obligation not to fabricate and provide false or misleading documents or information. When a request is made in furtherance of the Board's inspection authority, any associated person who participates in preparing or providing the response to that request has an obligation under Rule 4006 to cooperate with the request, including an obligation not to participate in concealing or fabricating information or documents. Through the conduct described in paragraphs 7 and 8 above, the Respondents breached their obligations to cooperate with a Board request for documents and information made in furtherance of the Board's authority and responsibilities under the Act. In doing so, the Respondents each violated PCAOB Rule 4006.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in the Respondents' Offers. Although the Board views the misconduct in which the Respondents participated as serious, the Board, in determining the appropriate sanction, has taken into account the Respondents' voluntary disclosure of that misconduct, as well as the fact that the Respondents disclosed the misconduct shortly after its occurrence and before the Board took any substantial steps in reliance upon the false information. In addition, the Board has taken into account the Respondents' affirmative efforts to provide Enforcement with all relevant information and documents. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

i. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Alan J. Goldberger is hereby censured; and

ii. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), William A. Postelnik is hereby censured.

Summary

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Goldstein and Morris CPAs, P.C., and barring Edward B. Morris from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions because of the respondents' conduct in concealing information from the Board, and submitting false information to the Board, in connection with a Board inspection.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Goldstein and Morris CPAs, P.C. ("G&M" or "Firm") and Edward B. Morris, CPA (collectively, "Respondents").

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Morris and the Firm have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for the purpose of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, the Respondents each consent to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[1/] that:

1. G&M is an accounting firm incorporated in the state of New York and registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102(a) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 2100. Its only office is located in New York City.

2. Edward B. Morris is a certified public accountant licensed by the State of New York. He is the co-founder, president and managing partner of G&M. Morris is an associated person of G&M, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

3. From about October 2003 through July 2004, the Firm prepared the financial statements for New York Film Works, Inc. ("NYFW") and RTG Ventures, Inc. ("RTG"). During this same time period, NYFW and RTG each filed these financial statements with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under the cover of various Forms 10-KSB and 10-QSB. Both NYFW and RTG are issuers, as defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

4. G&M issued an audit report for NYFW, dated October 10, 2003, with respect to financial statements that G&M had prepared for NYFW.

5. G&M issued an audit report for RTG, dated December 9, 2003, with respect to financial statements that G&M had prepared for RTG.

6. On or about September 20, 2004, the Board, through its Division of Registration and Inspections ("Inspections"), informed G&M that it would be conducting an inspection of the Firm during November 2004. In connection with the inspection,

ORDER

Inspections directed a request to Morris's attention that the Firm provide the Board with certain information. Among other things, Inspections requested that the Firm provide in writing the total number of engagement hours incurred by all of the Firm's accounting or professional personnel related to the Firm's audits of NYFW and RTG, the number of hours each person worked on the engagement, and certain other documents related to each engagement.

7. In considering how to respond to the Board's request, Morris was aware that federal law prohibits a registered public accounting firm from providing its issuer audit clients with certain bookkeeping services,[2/] and he and two subordinates discussed what to do about the fact that the Firm had provided NYFW and RTG with the services described in paragraph 3 above. Ultimately, they formulated and carried out a plan to conceal from the Board information about some of the services that the Firm had provided to NYFW and RTG. Pursuant to that plan, on or about October 1, 2004, the Firm submitted to Inspections a written response that omitted the number of hours worked by a G&M employee on the audits of NYFW and RTG. Morris intended and approved the omission of that information from the Firm's response because that employee had also worked on preparing the financial statements of NYFW and RTG, and Morris was concerned that information about the employee's work on the audits might lead Inspections to discover that the Firm had also prepared the financial statements – a fact that Morris wished to conceal from the Board.

8. In addition, Morris and the two subordinates discussed the possibility that the Board would find fault with the Firm because of the lack of certain audit documentation in the Firm's files. They therefore formulated and carried out a plan to create and back-date certain documents and place them in the Firm's audit files before Inspections reviewed the files. Specifically, on or about October 15, 2004, Morris and the two subordinates generated purported management representation letters from both NYFW and RTG, back-dated them to dates in 2003 and 2004, and placed them in the Firm's audit files. In approving and participating in this conduct, Morris intended to conceal from the Board that the Firm had failed to comply with certain PCAOB standards in connection with the preparation and issuance of audit reports for NYFW and RTG.[3/]

9. Under the Act, the Firm had an obligation, to which it assented in applying for registration with the Board, to cooperate in and comply with any request for documents or testimony made in furtherance of the Board's authority and responsibilities under the Act. The Firm also had, and assented to, an obligation to secure and enforce similar consents from its associated persons. Under the Act, such cooperation and compliance is a condition of the continuing effectiveness of a Firm's registration with the Board. In addition, PCAOB Rule 4006 states that –

> [e]very registered public accounting firm, and every associated person of a registered public accounting firm, shall cooperate with the Board in the performance of any Board inspection. Cooperation shall include, but is not limited to, cooperating and complying with any request, made in furtherance of the Board's authority and responsibilities under the Act, to – (1) provide access to, and the ability to copy, any record in the possession, custody, or control of such firm or person, and (2) provide information by oral interviews, written responses, or otherwise.

10. Inherent in the obligation to cooperate with requests for documents and information is both an obligation not to conceal requested documents or information and an obligation not to fabricate and provide untruthful or misleading documents or information. When a request is made in furtherance of the Board's inspection authority, any registered public accounting firm or associated person who participates in preparing or providing the response to that request has an obligation under Rule 4006 to cooperate with the request, including an obligation not to participate in concealing or fabricating information or documents. Through the conduct described in paragraphs 7 and 8 above, the Respondents breached their obligations to cooperate with a Board request for documents and information made in furtherance of the Board's authority and responsibilities under the Act. In doing so, the Firm violated a statutory condition to its continuing registration, and both Respondents violated PCAOB Rule 4006.

ORDER

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in the Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

i. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), Goldstein & Morris, CPAs, P.C.'s registration with the Board is revoked; and

ii. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Edward B. Morris is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS	PCAOB Release No. 2005-021 PCAOB No. 105-2005-003
In the Matter of Clyde Bailey, P.C., and Clyde B. Bailey, CPA,	November 22, 2005
Respondents.

Summary

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Clyde Bailey, P.C, and barring its sole shareholder, Clyde B. Bailey, CPA, from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning the respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of four issuer clients during 2004 and 2005.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Clyde Bailey, P.C., ("CBPC") and Clyde B. Bailey, CPA ("Bailey") (collectively, "Respondents").

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, CBPC and Bailey have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, the Respondents each consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondents

1. CBPC is an accounting firm incorporated in the state of Texas and licensed by the Texas State Board of Accountancy (license no. C02330). CBPC is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. Its only office is located in San Antonio, Texas.

2. Bailey, 50, of San Antonio, Texas, is a certified public accountant licensed by the state of Texas (license no. 023975). He has been the principal shareholder of CBPC since 1990. Bailey is an associated person of CBPC, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Respondents Violated PCAOB Auditing Standards

3. An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance PCAOB standards.[2/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[3/] In connection with their audits of the fiscal year ("FY") 2003 financial statements of four issuer clients, Respondents failed to exercise due professional care, failed to exercise professional skepticism, and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter. Specific instances of Respondents' conduct constituting violations of PCAOB standards are described below.

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of "intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard."

1. FY 2003 Audit of Endevco, Inc.

4. Endevco, Inc. ("Endevco") (formerly Adair International Oil and Gas, Inc.) is a Texas corporation with offices in Houston, Texas. Its common stock is registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and is dually quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. Endevco's public filings disclose that it is pursuing, among other things, oil and gas exploration and development opportunities in the United States and Colombia. Endevco is an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

5. CBPC was engaged as Endevco's independent auditor from March 2003 through July 2005. On January 26, 2004, CBPC issued an unqualified audit report on Endevco's consolidated financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2003.[4/] The report stated that the company's financial statements fairly presented its financial condition in all material respects in conformity with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP").[5/] CBPC's audit report was included in the Form 10-KSB filed by Endevco with the Commission on March 31, 2004.

[3/] See AU § 150.02, Generally Accepted Auditing Standards; § 230, Due Professional Care in the Performance of Work; § 326, Evidential Matter.

[4/] The audit report included an explanatory paragraph expressing substantial doubt as to Endevco's ability to continue as a going concern.

[5/] CBPC's audit reports for Endevco, Call Now, Inc., and Image Innovations Holdings, Inc. stated that its audits were conducted in accordance with U.S. generally accepted auditing standards ("GAAS"). Respondents were required to conduct those audits in accordance with the PCAOB's interim auditing standards pursuant to PCAOB Rule 3200T, which took effect on April 25, 2003. However, at the time those audits were performed, the PCAOB's interim auditing standards were the same as GAAS as it existed on April 16, 2003, and, until PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 1 took effect on May

a. Valuation of Options to Acquire Leasehold Interests

6. During FY 2003, Endevco disclosed that it acquired two options to acquire interests in certain oil and gas leasehold interests in Colombia and the Gulf of Mexico. The company stated that it acquired the options in exchange for a $500,000 note and 1.5 million shares of preferred stock valued at $1.00 per share. Endevco recorded those options as assets (characterized as "oil and gas properties and equipment under full cost method") valued at $2,000,000, representing 61 percent of the company's total reported assets at December 31, 2003. Other than obtaining the option agreements and reviewing the Board resolution authorizing the option purchases, Respondents performed no audit procedures to assess the values assigned by management to the option rights or to the preferred shares that were exchanged for those rights.

7. Moreover, other than relying on management's assurances, Respondents performed no audit procedures to test whether the option rights would result in a probable future economic benefit to Endevco.[6/] Respondents failed to perform such procedures despite the existence of several factors that cast doubt on Endevco's ability to exercise the options. As set forth in the option agreements included in Respondents' work papers, each option was exercisable by Endevco until June 30, 2005, at an exercise price of $2 million per option. That $4 million total exercise price, however, exceeded Endevco's total reported assets at year end 2003. In addition, even if Endevco had exercised the options, the company would have been obligated to execute a purchase agreement warranting that the company had a minimum of $5 million in current and unencumbered assets. At December 31, 2003, however, Endevco's balance sheet reflected current assets totaling only 11 percent of the required $5 million, and the company had not generated operating income for at least the preceding eight years. Finally, in prior periods, Endevco had written off assets associated with similar option contracts due to either non-performance or expiration of the option agreements.

24, 2004, it remained appropriate for auditors to refer to GAAS in their audit reports. Accordingly, while the references to GAAS in CBPC's reports for the aforementioned issuers were appropriate at the time, the standards pursuant to which those audits were required to be performed are more appropriately referred to as PCAOB auditing standards (or PCAOB standards), and that is how they are referred to in this Order.

6/ See FASB Concepts Statement No. 6, Elements of Financial Statements, paragraph 25 (asset defined as a "probable future economic benefit obtained or controlled by a particular entity as a result of past transactions or events").

ORDER

8. In the face of these "red flags" concerning Endevco's ability to exercise the options, Respondents relied exclusively on management's assurances that the company would be able to obtain from unidentified sources the funds needed for the exercise price and that the option sellers would waive the $5 million current asset requirement if the exercise price were paid. PCAOB standards provide that "representations from management are part of the evidential matter the independent auditor obtains, but they are not a substitute for the application of those audit procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements under audit."[7/] Respondents violated PCAOB standards by relying solely on representations made by Endevco's management and failing to perform other audit procedures sufficient to evaluate those representations.

b. Revenue Recognition

9. Endevco's consolidated financial statements reported that revenues increased from $2,286 in FY 2002 to $1,513,419 in FY 2003. Most of that increase related to a contract that, according to Endevco, provided for initial funding of $2 million to conduct a certain feasibility study. As of year end 2003, Endevco had recorded as received, and had recognized as revenue, approximately 75 percent of the initial funding.[8/] Endevco also recorded a subcontract cost in that same amount because, according to Endevco, it had entered into a fixed-price agreement with a consulting firm to have the consulting firm perform the feasibility study, and it had paid the consulting firm an amount equal to what Endevco had received ($1,496,500) on the contract.

10. Respondents failed to perform necessary audit procedures to evaluate whether it was appropriate for Endevco to recognize the recorded receipts under the contract as revenue in FY 2003. Respondents did not evaluate whether Endevco had earned the amounts recognized and did not evaluate whether the amounts met the revenue recognition criteria set forth in GAAP.[9/] In fact, Respondents ignored evidence suggesting that revenue recognition may not have been appropriate. Specifically,

[7/] AU § 333.02, Management Representations.

[8/] Endevco recorded a receivable for the remaining 25 percent and deferred recognition of such revenue.

[9/] SEC Staff Accounting Bulletin No. 101, Revenue Recognition ("SAB 101"), sets out relevant principles relating to revenue recognition.

ORDER

Respondents were aware that the feasibility study was not completed in FY 2003, and the contract made no provision for payment for partial performance, which are relevant factors in assessing the appropriateness of recognizing the revenue.

c. Related Party Transactions

11. Respondents failed to perform necessary audit procedures to evaluate whether Endevco had engaged in material related party transactions during FY 2003. In fact, Respondents ignored evidence in the work papers indicating that such transactions may have occurred.

12. Specifically, documents contained in Respondents' work papers identified one individual who served as president of four entities that had significant business relationships with Endevco during FY 2003, including the two entities that purportedly sold Endevco the leasehold options valued at $2 million on Endevco's balance sheet, the consulting firm to which Endevco purportedly subcontracted the contract feasibility study and to which Endevco purportedly paid $1,496,500, and a fourth entity to which Endevco issued 529,904 shares of preferred stock and that may thereby have effectively obtained voting control of the company.[10/] In addition, a schedule contained in Respondents' work papers indicated that the consulting firm controlled by this individual directly paid more than $180,000 of Endevco's operating expenses in FY 2003 (including more than $23,000 in audit-related fees paid to CBPC) and received preferred shares as repayment. The name of the expense-paying entity identified on the schedule was a truncated version of the consulting firm's full name. Respondents, however, performed no audit procedures to determine whether the entity identified on the schedule was the same as the consulting firm performing the feasibility study, beyond asking a member of Endevco's management and being told that they were not the same.

[10/] Endevco issued the preferred stock to that entity purportedly in return for the entity having directly paid certain Endevco operating expenses totaling $529,904. As disclosed in the notes to Endevco's financial statements, each share of Endevco's preferred stock was convertible into 1,000 shares of the company's common stock, and the preferred shares carried voting rights on an as-converted basis with the common stock. Thus, the 529,904 preferred shares held by the entity had voting rights equivalent to 529,904,000 common shares. With 150,000,000 shares of Endevco common stock issued and outstanding as of December 31, 2003, the information in Respondents' work papers should have indicated to Respondents that that entity's holdings of preferred stock may have given it voting control of the company.

ORDER

13. Documents evidencing the same individual's apparent involvement in the management of four entities having significant business relationships with Endevco, one of which may have had voting control of the company, should have caused Respondents to perform audit procedures to test whether Endevco's purchase of the leasehold options and its contract with the consulting firm constituted material related party transactions requiring disclosure under GAAP.[11/] Instead, Respondents ignored these "red flags," and in doing so, violated PCAOB standards requiring them to exercise due professional care and professional skepticism in their performance of the Endevco audit.

2. FY 2003 Audit of Call Now, Inc.

14. Call Now, Inc. ("Call Now") (formerly Phone One International, Inc.) is a Nevada corporation with offices in Selma, Texas. Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the Pink Sheets. Call Now's public filings disclose that its primary operation is the management, through an 80 percent owned subsidiary, of the Retama Horse Racing Facility in Selma, Texas. Call Now is an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

15. CBPC was engaged as Call Now's independent auditor from approximately 1998 through April 2005. On March 10, 2004, CBPC issued an unqualified audit report on Call Now's consolidated financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2003. The report stated that the company's financial statements fairly presented its financial condition in all material respects in conformity with GAAP. CBPC's audit report was included in the Form 10-KSB filed by Call Now with the Commission on March 31, 2004.

16. Call Now reported that it held marketable securities valued at $5,407,565, representing nearly 40 percent of total recorded assets at December 31, 2003. Respondents failed to perform audit procedures necessary to assess the valuation of those securities.

17. For example, one security (representing 81 percent of the total reported value of Call Now's marketable securities) was valued by management at an amount substantially less than the value reflected in a brokerage statement issued by the company's investment firm. While the investment firm priced that security (a bond issue) at $0.235 per unit, Call Now's management verbally informed Respondents that the appropriate price was $0.10 per unit. As a result of management's reduced valuation, Call Now reported the value of its holdings in that security as $4,396,250, rather than the $10,331,187.50 shown in the brokerage statement. Respondents accepted management's reduced valuation at face value without performing additional procedures necessary to test whether the valuation was appropriate.

3. FY 2003 Audit of Image Innovations Holdings, Inc.

18. Image Innovations Holdings, Inc. ("Image") (formerly Busanda Explorations, Inc.) is a Nevada corporation with a mailing address in New York, New York. Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is dually quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. Image's public filings disclose that it has facilities in New York and British Columbia, Canada, and that it is in the business of promotional licensing and branding of low-cost products. Image is an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

19. CBPC was engaged as Image's independent auditor from January 2003 to January 2005. On March 10, 2004, CBPC issued an unqualified audit report on Image's consolidated financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2003. The report stated that the company's financial statements fairly presented its financial condition in all material respects in conformity with GAAP. CBPC's audit report was included in the Form 10-KSB filed by Image with the Commission on April 14, 2004.

20. Although CBPC was engaged as Image's independent auditor at the time, the company separately engaged another audit firm to perform audit procedures on its FY 2003 consolidated financial statements. While the other firm did not issue an audit opinion, it provided copies of its work papers to CBPC for its review and acknowledged its understanding that CBPC intended to rely on its work as a component of its audit procedures. The audit evidence obtained through procedures performed by the other firm constituted substantially all of the audit evidence obtained to support CBPC's audit opinion.

21. The level of planning, testing, supervision, and review exercised by Respondents with regard to the other auditors' work was not sufficient to enable CBPC to use the work of the other auditor in the same manner as if it had been performed by

CBPC's own personnel.[12/] As a result, Respondents violated PCAOB standards in issuing an audit report on Image's FY 2003 consolidated financial statements.

4. FY 2003 Audit of Health Discovery Corporation

22. Health Discovery Corporation ("Health Discovery") (formerly Direct Wireless Communications, Inc.) is a Texas corporation with offices in Lorena, Texas and Savannah, Georgia. Health Discovery is required to file reports under Section 15(d) of the Exchange Act and its stock is dually quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. Health Discovery's public filings disclose that it is in the business of developing a product line of newly discovered biomarkers and pathways to assist pharmaceutical and diagnostic companies. Health Discovery is an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

23. On January 5, 2005, CBPC issued an unqualified audit report on the financial statements of Health Discovery for the year ended December 31, 2003.[13/] The report stated that CBPC had conducted an audit of those statements in accordance with PCAOB standards. The report also stated that Health Discovery's financial statements fairly presented its financial condition in all material respects in conformity with GAAP. CBPC's audit report was included in the Form 10-KSB/A filed by Health Discovery with the Commission on January 7, 2005.

24. CBPC was the second audit firm to report on Health Discovery's FY 2003 financial statements. The first audit firm (the "prior auditor") issued a report on those statements on February 27, 2004.[14/] As Health Discovery learned several months later, however, its prior auditor had never registered with the PCAOB as required by Section 102 of the Act. On December 15, 2004, Health Discovery filed a Form 8-K reporting that it had been notified by NASDAQ of the prior auditor's non-registered status. The company disclosed that, as a result, it was not in compliance with NASDAQ listing standards.

[12/] See AU § 230 and AU § 311, Planning and Supervision.

[13/] The audit report included an explanatory paragraph expressing substantial doubt as to Health Discovery's ability to continue as a going concern.

[14/] The prior auditor's report was included in the Form 10-KSB filed by Health Discovery on March 30, 2004.

ORDER

25. Although Health Discovery engaged a new independent auditor in August 2004,[15] the company did not use the new auditor to reaudit its FY 2003 financial statements. Instead, Health Discovery's prior auditor arranged for CBPC to issue a new FY 2003 audit report. One of the prior auditor's principals was a long-time business acquaintance of Bailey, and, during the last week of December 2004, he asked whether Bailey would review his work papers and issue a revised report on Health Discovery. Bailey agreed to do so, even though, according to Bailey, Health Discovery never paid him for the work. Bailey viewed the arrangement in terms of a barter transaction with the prior auditor, and testified that "I did this work for him and he's done some work for me . . . I felt it was more of a trade . . . ."

26. Where an auditor accepts an engagement to audit and report on financial statements that have been previously audited and reported on (i.e., a "reaudit"), "information obtained from [inquiries of the predecessor auditor] and any review of the predecessor auditor's report and working papers is not sufficient to afford a basis for expressing an opinion."[16] Instead, the auditor is required to plan and perform the reaudit in accordance with PCAOB standards, and is prohibited from assuming responsibility for the predecessor auditor's work.[17] Respondents did precisely the opposite. In lieu of planning and performing the required reaudit, they merely consulted with the prior auditor and relied on his work papers in issuing CBPC's audit opinion.[18] According to Bailey's

[17] AU § 315.16.

[18] On January 7, 2005, Health Discovery filed an amended Form 10-KSB for the year ended December 31, 2003, which substituted CBPC's audit report for that of the prior auditor. Health Discovery issued a contemporaneous press release announcing the amended filing and noting that "[n]o material changes were made to the financial information as originally filed." On July 18, 2005, Health Discovery filed a Form 8-K reporting that CBPC had withdrawn its audit report on the company's FY 2003 financial statements. The company disclosed that, as a result, its board of directors had concluded that those financial statements could not be relied upon. On August 16, 2005, Health Discovery filed a Form 8-K disclosing that it had engaged another auditor to re-audit its FY 2003 financial statements. On September 27, 2005, Health Discovery testimony, the only other work performed before issuing CBPC's audit report was a telephone call lasting "less than half an hour" with a Health Discovery employee and a review of the company's Form 8-K filings to evaluate events that occurred subsequent to December 31, 2003. Respondents did not do the audit planning or engage in the performance, supervision, or review of audit procedures necessary for CBPC to be able to issue an audit report on Health Discovery's FY 2003 financial statements. By issuing an audit report in those circumstances, Respondents violated PCAOB standards.[19/]

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules

27. PCAOB Rule 3100 requires that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with all applicable auditing and related professional practice standards. That requirement encompasses a requirement to comply with the PCAOB's interim auditing standards as described in PCAOB Rule 3200T. Respondents' failure to comply with PCAOB auditing standards, as described above, violated PCAOB Rules 3100 and 3200T.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

i. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), Clyde Bailey, P.C.'s registration with the Board is revoked; and filed an amended Form 10-KSB for the year ended December 31, 2004, which included re-audited financial statements for FY 2003.

19/ The egregiousness of Respondents' failure in this regard is highlighted by the fact that less than eight months before CBPC's issuance of the audit report on Health Discovery, during a Board inspection of CBPC, the Board's inspection team identified a similar deficiency in a different engagement and pointed out to Respondents the seriousness of the deficiency.

ORDER

ii. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Clyde B. Bailey is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Kenny H. Lee CPA Group, Inc., and barring its sole shareholder, Kwang Ho Lee, CPA, from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning the respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of two issuer clients in 2004, and their violations of PCAOB independence standards with respect to one of those clients in 2003.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Kenny H. Lee CPA Group ("KHL") and Kwang Ho Lee, CPA ("Lee") (collectively, "Respondents").

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, KHL and Lee have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, the Respondents each consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondents

1. KHL is an accounting firm incorporated in the state of California and licensed by the California Board of Accountancy (license no. 5185). KHL is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. Its only office is located in Los Angeles, California.

2. Lee (also known as Kenny H. Lee), 45, of Rancho Palos Verdes, California, is a certified public accountant licensed by the State of California (license no. 64155). Since 1993, Lee has been the chief executive officer and sole shareholder of KHL. Lee is an associated person of KHL, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Respondents Violated PCAOB Auditing Standards in the FY 2003 Audit of GSL Holdings, Inc.

3. GSL Holdings, Inc. ("GSL") (formerly Bethurum Laboratories, Inc.) is a British Virgin Islands corporation with offices in Los Angeles, California. Its common stock is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and is quoted on the Pink Sheets. GSL's public filings disclose that it has business operations in California and the People's Republic of China ("PRC"), and that it provides facilitation, credit and

1/ The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of "intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard."

logistical support to manufacturers and merchants engaged in trade between the PRC and the United States. GSL is an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

4. KHL was engaged as GSL's independent auditor beginning on February 6, 2003. KHL audited GSL's consolidated financial statements for the fiscal year ended December 31, 2003, and issued an unqualified audit report dated April 8, 2004.[2/] In that report, KHL stated that GSL's financial statements fairly presented its financial condition in all material respects in conformity with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP").[3/] KHL's audit report was included in the Form 10-KSB filed by GSL with the Commission on April 14, 2004. GSL's audit committee dismissed KHL on June 17, 2004.[4/]

[2/] The audit report included an explanatory paragraph expressing substantial doubt as to GSL's ability to continue as a going concern.

[3/] KHL's audit report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with U.S. generally accepted auditing standards ("GAAS"). Respondents were required to conduct this audit in accordance with the PCAOB's interim auditing standards pursuant to PCAOB Rule 3200T, which took effect on April 25, 2003. However, at the time of this audit, the PCAOB's interim auditing standards were the same as GAAS as it existed on April 16, 2003, and, until PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 1 took effect on May 24, 2004, it remained appropriate for auditors to refer to GAAS in their audit reports. Accordingly, while the reference to GAAS in KHL's report was an appropriate reference at the time, the standards pursuant to which the audit was required to be performed are more appropriately referred to as PCAOB auditing standards (or PCAOB standards), and that is how they are referred to in this Order.

[4/] Upon KHL's dismissal, GSL's audit committee engaged Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu (Hong Kong) ("DTT") as the company's auditor. On September 28, 2004, GSL filed a Form 8-K with the Commission disclosing that DTT had resigned on September 22, 2004, without issuing an audit report. GSL disclosed further that, "[p]rior to resigning, [DTT] advised [GSL] that the internal controls necessary for [GSL] to develop reliable financial statements do not exist and that information had come to the attention of DTT that, if investigated further, might materially impact the fairness or reliability of the report on [GSL's] consolidated financial statements for the fiscal year ended December 31, 2003[,] issued by the predecessor to [DTT], Kenny H. Lee CPA Group, Inc."

ORDER

5. An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance PCAOB standards.[5/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[6/] In connection with the audit of GSL's financial statements for FY 2003, Respondents failed to exercise due professional care, failed to exercise professional skepticism, and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter. Specific instances of Respondents' conduct constituting violations of PCAOB standards are described below.

1. GSL's FY 2003 Property Acquisitions

6. During FY 2003, GSL's total reported assets increased from $755,857 to $49,861,311. According to GSL's public filings, most of that increase related to GSL's acquisitions of two properties in the PRC. GSL disclosed that both properties were acquired from GSL's controlling shareholder, Everbright Development Overseas Limited ("Everbright"), a Beijing-based entity, in exchange for restricted shares of GSL's common stock. Specifically, GSL disclosed that, in September 2003, it issued more than 9.5 million shares of its common stock to Everbright in exchange for 350,370 square meters of undeveloped real property in the city of Nantong, PRC. GSL also disclosed that it completed the purchase of a 258,241 square-foot hotel in the city of Haimen, PRC, on December 29, 2003, and issued more than 6.4 million shares of its common stock to Everbright in January 2004 as consideration for the purchase. GSL's FY 2003 financial statements reported that the Nantong property was valued at $19,064,890 and the Haimen property was valued at $12,926,830. As reported in the financial statements, the aggregate value of these properties – $31,991,720 – represented 64 percent of GSL's total reported assets at December 31, 2003.

7. Respondents never obtained sufficient competent evidence to reasonably conclude that GSL had legally acquired the two properties. For example, Respondents never verified that final acquisition agreements were executed. In the case of one acquisition, Respondents reviewed a two-page memorandum of understanding ("MOU")

5/ See AU § 508.07, Reports on Audited Financial Statements.

6/ See AU § 150.02, Generally Accepted Auditing Standards; § 230, Due Professional Care in the Performance of Work; § 326, Evidential Matter.

ORDER

in which GSL and Everbright expressed a "present intent" to negotiate and execute a definitive agreement regarding sale of the property. The MOU expressly stated, however, that it was non-binding and that material terms and conditions remained to be negotiated. Despite the contingent nature of the MOU, Respondents neither obtained the definitive agreement contemplated by the MOU, nor otherwise corroborated that the transaction occurred or that GSL had rights to the property.

8. In addition, Respondents' audit procedures were insufficient to reasonably conclude that GSL had properly valued the properties in its financial statements. To support the values reported in its financial statements, GSL provided Respondents with appraisals purportedly obtained from independent appraisers located in the PRC.[7/] While Respondents relied on these appraisals during the audit, they never evaluated whether the appraisers had the requisite experience, certification or standing to perform the appraisals; never evaluated the assumptions and methodologies used by the appraisers; and never made inquiries concerning the appraisers' relationships, if any, to GSL or Everbright.[8/]

9. Respondents' failure to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning these property acquisitions is compounded by GSL's disclosure that both properties were acquired from its controlling shareholder, Everbright. At all relevant times, GSL's chairman was also the chairman and controlling shareholder of Everbright. PCAOB standards require auditors to employ a heightened standard in testing material transactions between related parties.[9/]

[7/] The property values reported in GSL's financial statements were based on the appraisals, and presumably were intended by GSL to represent the properties' fair value. However, because the transferor, Everbright, was also GSL's controlling shareholder, GAAP may have required GSL to record the properties at Everbright's carrying amount as of the date of transfer. The correct GAAP treatment depends on additional information that Respondents did not obtain or evaluate in performing the audit. See Statement of Financial Accounting Standards ("SFAS") No. 141, Business Combinations, paragraphs D11 & D12; see also EITF Issue No. 90-5, Exchanges of Ownership Interests Between Entities Under Common Control.

[9/] See, e.g., AU § 334.07, Related Parties ("The auditor should place emphasis on testing material transactions with parties he knows are related to the

ORDER

2. GSL's FY 2003 Contract Costs

10. GSL disclosed that, in the fourth quarter of FY 2003, it prepaid a PRC vendor for products and/or services related to the company's business operations in that country. GSL recorded these costs as an asset valued at $10,446,331, representing nearly 21 percent of GSL's total reported assets at December 31, 2003. Respondents failed to perform adequate audit procedures to test whether GSL had actually prepaid the vendor in FY 2003, and whether those costs were properly classified as an asset on GSL's balance sheet.

11. In addition, Respondents failed to perform adequate audit procedures to determine whether GSL's classification of those prepayment costs as an asset was consistent with GAAP. Specifically, Respondents did not take sufficient steps to obtain an understanding of the products and services in question to be able to assess whether those prepayment costs would result in a probable future economic benefit to GSL. Without an adequate understanding of the underlying products and services, Respondents had no reasonable way of assessing whether GSL's classification of the costs as an asset was appropriate.[10/] Moreover, even if it had been appropriate to classify the costs as an asset, Respondents should have, but did not, evaluate whether those costs were recoverable in light of, among other things, GSL's recurrent losses and lack of revenue history.[11/] reporting entity."); AU § 9334.18 ("The risk associated with management's assertions about related party transactions is often assessed as higher than for many other types of transactions because of the possibility that the parties to the transactions are motivated by reasons other than those that exist for most business transactions.").

[10/] To assess whether the classification of the prepayment costs as an asset was appropriate, Respondents needed to have sufficient understanding of the underlying products and services to be able to evaluate whether the prepayment costs would result in a probable future economic benefit to GSL. See FASB Concepts Statement No. 6, Elements of Financial Statements, paragraph 25 (asset defined as a "probable future economic benefit obtained or controlled by a particular entity as a result of past transactions or events").

[11/] See SFAS No. 144, Accounting for the Impairment or Disposal of Long-Lived Assets.

ORDER

3. GSL's Statement of Cash Flows

12. GSL included certain non-monetary exchanges involving property acquisitions in its statement of cash flows. This accounting treatment departed from GAAP, which requires the reporting of non-cash activities in related disclosures, not in the cash flow statement.[12/] As a result, GSL overstated its operating cash flow by approximately $32 million (reporting an operating cash flow of approximately $23.7 million instead of -$8.3 million). Respondents failed to identify this GAAP departure, and failed even to perform audit procedures necessary to evaluate whether this accounting treatment complied with GAAP.[13/]

4. GSL's Deferred Taxes and Related Valuation Reserve

13. GSL recorded deferred tax assets of $1,150,346, which it computed based solely on U.S. federal and California state tax rates, even though most of GSL's revenues and a significant portion of its losses were attributed to the foreign operations of GSL subsidiaries. Respondents failed to identify that this accounting departed from GAAP,[14/] and failed even to perform audit procedures necessary to evaluate whether this accounting treatment complied with GAAP.

[12/] See SFAS No. 95, Statement of Cash Flows, paragraph 32.

[13/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures, however, should not be understood as an indication that the Securities and Exchange Commission has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP.

[14/] See SFAS No. 109, Accounting for Income Taxes, paragraph 17 ("Deferred taxes shall be determined separately for each tax-paying component (an individual entity or group of entities that is consolidated for tax purposes) in each tax jurisdiction.").

ORDER

14. In addition, while the reduction of a deferred tax asset by a valuation allowance is required if it is more likely than not that some portion of the tax asset will not be realized in future periods,[15/] GSL recorded no valuation allowance and stated in the notes to the financial statements that, based on projections of future taxable income and the company's tax planning strategies, it was more likely than not that the deferred tax assets would be realized in future periods. GSL, however, had a consistent pattern of operating losses, and KHL's audit report included an explanatory paragraph expressing substantial doubt as to GSL's ability to continue as a going concern. Although these factors suggest that a valuation allowance may have been required, Respondents neither reviewed GSL's projections and strategies, nor otherwise evaluated whether a valuation allowance should have been recorded.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Independence Standards With Respect to the Axesstel Inc. Engagement in 2003

15. Axesstel, Inc. ("Axesstel") (formerly Miracom Industries, Inc.) is a Nevada corporation with offices in San Diego, California. Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is traded on the American Stock Exchange. Axesstel's public filings disclose that it has business operations in California and South Korea, and that it designs, manufactures and markets fixed wireless voice and data products. Axesstel is an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

16. KHL was engaged as Axesstel's independent auditor beginning in or about August 2002.[16/] During the fiscal year ended December 31, 2003, KHL performed interim reviews of Axesstel's financial statements for the quarters ended March 31 and June 30, 2003.

15/ Id.

16/ KHL originally served as the auditor for Miracom Industries, Inc. ("Miracom"), a public shell with few assets and no operations. In or about August 2002, Miracom entered into a reverse acquisition with Axesstel, Inc., a privately-held California company with operating assets ("Axesstel-California"). As a result of that merger, Miracom acquired all of the issued and outstanding stock of Axesstel-California and the former shareholders of Axesstel-California received 95 percent of Miracom's shares. Miracom then changed its name to Axesstel. Following the reverse acquisition, KHL was retained as Axesstel's auditor.

ORDER

17. On June 2, 2003, while KHL was engaged as Axesstel's independent auditor, Lee accepted an offer to serve on the company's board of directors. Following his acceptance of that offer, KHL continued its attest engagement for Axesstel. On August 5, 2003, KHL completed an interim review of Axesstel's financial statements for the quarter ended June 30, 2003. KHL's review report was included in the Form 10-QSB filed by Axesstel with the Commission on August 15, 2003. In late September 2003, Lee formally became a member of Axesstel's board of directors and became chairman of the board's audit committee. KHL's professional engagement as Axesstel's auditor continued until November 3, 2003.[17/]

18. At the time of the conduct at issue, PCAOB Rule 3600T, Interim Independence Standards, required registered public accounting firms and their associated persons to comply with the independence standard described in Rule 101 of the AICPA's Code of Professional Conduct, and interpretations and rulings thereunder, as in existence on April 16, 2003, in connection with the preparation and issuance of audit reports. That standard requires that an auditor "be independent in the performance of professional services."[18/] Interpretations of that standard provide that independence shall be considered impaired if, "[d]uring the period covered by the financial statements or during the period of the professional engagement, a . . . partner or professional employee of the firm was simultaneously associated with the client as a . . . director."[19/]

19. Accordingly, in light of the facts and circumstances described above, Respondents failed to maintain independence with respect to Axesstel during the professional engagement period, in violation of PCAOB interim independence standards and PCAOB Rule 3600T.

The report also stated that the restated financial statements fairly presented Axesstel's financial condition in all material respects in conformity with GAAP. KHL's audit report was included in a Form 10-KSB/A filed by Axesstel with the Commission on October 13, 2004, and in a Form SB-2 Registration Statement filed on October 15, 2004.

21. Before issuing the audit report, Respondents performed no audit procedures to determine whether the restated amounts proposed by management were fairly stated in conformity with GAAP.[22] Respondents merely accepted at face value the restatement journal entries proposed by Axesstel's management. Respondents' conduct violated the most fundamental PCAOB standards, which require an auditor to perform audit procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion and prohibit an [21] The restatement impact on Axesstel's FY 2002 financial statements included the following: (1) research and development expenses increased by 389 percent, from $162,909 to $796,742; (2) total assets decreased by six percent from $6,241,501 to $5,863,717; (3) gross profit decreased by 24 percent, from $4,588,136 to $3,490,226; (4) operating income decreased 82 percent, from $751,990 to $132,034; (5) net income decreased by 91 percent, from $635,626 to $55,265; (6) basic earnings per share decreased from $0.09 to $0.01; and (7) diluted earnings per share decreased from $0.06 to $0.01. See Axesstel Form 10-KSB/A (filed October 13, 2004).

[22] Respondents performed no audit procedures on the restated financial statements until they became aware in late October 2004 that the Board's Division of Enforcement and Investigations was investigating KHL's Axesstel audit engagements. After receiving a request for documents from the PCAOB staff, Lee requested documentation from Axesstel to support the restated financial statements and completed certain audit procedures on December 14, 2004 – two and a half months after KHL issued its September 30, 2004 audit report.

E. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules

22. PCAOB Rule 3100 requires that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with all applicable auditing and related professional practice standards. That requirement encompasses a requirement to comply with the PCAOB's interim auditing standards as described in PCAOB Rule 3200T and with the PCAOB's interim independence standards as described in PCAOB Rule 3600T. Respondents' failure to comply with PCAOB auditing standards, as described above, violated PCAOB Rules 3100 and 3200T. Respondents' failure to comply with PCAOB independence standards, as described above, violated PCAOB Rules 3100 and 3600T.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Reuben E. Price & Co. Public Accountancy Corp. The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings concerning the respondent's violation of Section 10A(b)(2) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 in failing to take prompt and appropriate steps in response to indications that an issuer audit client may have committed an illegal act.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Reuben E. Price & Co. Public Accountancy Corp. ("Respondent").

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for the purpose of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over it and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[1/] that:

Facts

1. Respondent is an accounting firm incorporated in the state of California and licensed by the California Board of Accountancy (license no. 3402). Its only office is located in San Francisco, California. Respondent is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules.

2. Universal Communication Systems Inc. ("Universal") is a Nevada corporation headquartered in Miami Beach, Florida. Universal's filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC" or "Commission") state that Universal is actively engaged in developing and marketing solar energy systems. Universal's common stock is registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is dually quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. At all relevant times, Universal was an "issuer" as defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

3. On January 13, 2004, Universal filed with the Commission its 2003 Form 10-KSB filing. In that filing, Universal included a document that it claimed was an audit report issued by Respondent with respect to Universal's FY 2003 financial statements. In fact, although Respondent had provided Universal with a draft audit report, Respondent had neither issued the audit report nor completed the audit.[2/] Also on January 13, 2004, Respondent learned of the unauthorized use of its name in connection with the financial statements included in Universal's Commission filing.

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2/] Universal acknowledged this point in a Form 8-K that it filed with the Commission on May 4, 2004.

ORDER

4. On the day that Respondent learned of Universal's unauthorized use of Respondent's name, Respondent notified Universal's management and a member of Universal's board of directors that its audit of Universal was not complete, and that it had not given Universal its permission to use its name in connection with the financial statements included in Universal's Commission filing.

5. During the 15 weeks following January 13, 2004, Respondent was aware that Universal's management failed to take appropriate remedial actions with respect to the unauthorized use of its name and the representation concerning an audit report, but Respondent took no further steps in response to that failure. On April 23, 2004, Respondent received notice that the PCAOB would be conducting an inspection of Respondent in May 2004. Shortly thereafter, Respondent sent a letter formally notifying Universal that the audits of Universal's financial statements had not been completed, advising Universal not to rely on the draft audit report, and stating that Universal should notify the Commission of the situation. On May 4, 2004, Universal filed with the Commission a Form 8-K disclosing that Respondent was unwilling to be associated with the financial statements Universal filed with the Commission on January 13, 2004, because it had not completed its audit procedures relating to those financial statements.[3/]

Violations

6. When conducting audits of issuer financial statements required pursuant to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"), auditors must comply with the requirements of Section 10A of the Exchange Act. Section 10A(b) requires an auditor to take certain actions if, in the course of an audit, the auditor detects or otherwise becomes aware of information indicating that an illegal act has or may have occurred. Unless the illegal act is clearly inconsequential, Section 10A(b)(1) requires that the auditor inform the appropriate level of management about the illegal act and assure itself that the issuer's

[3/] Universal acknowledged in its Form 8-K that "[n]otwithstanding the fact that [Respondent] had not completed its audit and the Financial Statements were only in draft form, the 2003 Report, including the Financial Statements and the Firm's preliminary report thereon, was filed with the SEC." On June 30, 2004, Universal filed an amended report on Form 10-KSB/A that included Respondent's audit report dated June 2, 2004.

audit committee, or board of directors in the absence of an audit committee, is adequately informed with respect to the illegal act.

7. In addition, under Section 10A(b)(1) and PCAOB auditing standards, if an auditor concludes that it is likely that an illegal act occurred, the auditor must consider the effect of the illegal act on the issuer's financial statements.[4/] If the auditor concludes that the illegal act has a material effect on the financial statements, that senior management has not taken (and the board of directors has not caused them to take) timely and appropriate remedial actions, and that the absence of remedial action is reasonably expected to warrant departure from a standard report of the auditor, when made, or warrant resignation from the engagement, then Section 10A(b)(2) requires the auditor to report those conclusions to the board of directors as soon as practicable. If the board of directors fails to take certain required actions in response to such a report, Section 10A(b)(3) requires the auditor to resign from the engagement or report its Section 10A(b)(2) conclusions to the Commission.[5/]

8. When Respondent learned, on January 13, 2004, that Universal filed an unauthorized audit report falsely representing that the FY 2003 financial statements had been audited by Respondent, Respondent became aware that Universal had or may have violated federal securities laws and regulations. Those laws and regulations include a requirement that small business issuers file audited financial statements as part of their annual reports on Form 10-KSB,[6/] and a requirement that periodic reports contain all information necessary to ensure that statements made in such reports are not materially misleading.[7/]

9. Respondent knew that the apparently illegal act had a material effect on Universal's financial statements.[8/] During the 15 weeks following its notification to Universal's management and a member of Universal's board, Respondent also knew that Universal did not take appropriate remedial action. Finally, Respondent realized that Universal's failure to take remedial action would warrant Respondent's resignation from the engagement. Under Section 10A(b)(2), Respondent was obligated to directly report those conclusions to Universal's board of directors "as soon as practicable." Respondent, however, waited 15 weeks before taking any further action to address the matter, and then did so only when prompted by the prospect of an imminent PCAOB inspection. In failing to take appropriate steps sooner, Respondent violated section 10A(b)(2) of the Exchange Act.

7/ See Exchange Act Rule 12b-20; see also SEC v. Parklane Hosiery, Inc., 558 F.2d 1083, 1085 n.1 (2d Cir. 1977) (implicit in requirement to file annual report is requirement that report not be materially false or misleading).

8/ Universal's representation that its financial statements were audited, as the law and Commission regulations required them to be, was material to the financial statements. Cf. SEC Staff Accounting Bulletin No. 99, Materiality (materiality not limited to quantitative degree of misstatement but also encompasses matters that affect the registrant's compliance with regulatory requirements).

ORDER

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in the Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

i. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Reuben E. Price & Co. Public Accountancy Corp. is censured.

	December 19, 2006
In the Matter of Armando C. Ibarra, P.C., Armando C. Ibarra, Sr., and Armando C. Ibarra, Jr.
Respondents.

Summary

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Armando C. Ibarra, P.C. (the "Ibarra Firm") and barring its two partners, Armando C. Ibarra, Sr. ("Ibarra Sr.") and Armando C. Ibarra, Jr. ("Ibarra Jr.") from being associated persons of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning the respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of four issuer clients from 2003 to 2005.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against the Ibarra Firm, Ibarra Sr. and Ibarra Jr. (collectively, "Respondents").

[1/] The Ibarra Firm may reapply for registration after two (2) years from the date of this Order. Ibarra Sr. and Ibarra Jr. each may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, the Ibarra Firm, Ibarra Sr. and Ibarra Jr. have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, the Respondents each consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. The Ibarra Firm is an accounting firm incorporated in the state of California and licensed by the California Board of Accountancy (license no. 4318). The Ibarra Firm is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. Its office is located in Chula Vista, California.

2. Ibarra Sr., 66, of Chula Vista, California, is a certified public accountant licensed by the California Board of Accountancy (license no. 41710). He has been the principal shareholder of the Ibarra Firm at all times relevant to this matter. Ibarra Sr. is an associated person of the Ibarra Firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

3. Ibarra Jr., 39, of Bonita, California, is a certified public accountant licensed by the California Board of Accountancy (license no. 68766). He joined the Ibarra Firm in

1985 and was a shareholder of the firm at all times relevant to this matter. Ibarra Jr. is an associated person of the Ibarra Firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Respondents Violated PCAOB Auditing Standards

4. An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[3/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements, and prepare appropriate audit documentation.[4/] In addition, those standards require an auditor to take appropriate actions to assess the importance of audit deficiencies identified after the date of the audit report to the auditor's present ability to support its previously expressed opinions.[5/]

5. In connection with the audits of the fiscal year ("FY") 2003 financial statements of four issuer clients, Respondents failed to exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, obtain sufficient competent evidential matter, and prepare appropriate audit documentation. In May 2004, through a PCAOB inspection, Respondents were notified in writing of various audit deficiencies relating to those audits. Respondents failed, however, to take appropriate actions to assess the importance of those deficiencies to Respondents' ability to support the previously expressed opinions on those financial statements. Moreover, Respondents' audit work on those issuers' FY 2004 financial statements, less than a year after the inspection, suffered from several of those same deficiencies. Specific instances of Respondents' conduct constituting violations of PCAOB standards are described below.

FY 2003 and 2004 Audits of Triad Industries, Inc.

6. Triad Industries, Inc. (n/k/a Direct Equity International, Inc.) ("Triad") is a Nevada corporation with offices in Newbury Park, California. Its common stock is registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and is dually quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. Triad's public filings disclose that at all times relevant to this matter it operated a merger and acquisition consulting business and various real estate ventures through wholly owned subsidiaries. At all relevant times, Triad was an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

7. The Ibarra Firm was engaged as Triad's independent auditor from 2002 through 2006. The Ibarra Firm issued an audit report dated March 19, 2004, and included in Triad's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on March 26, 2004, in which it expressed an unqualified audit opinion on Triad's consolidated financial statements for FY 2003 and FY 2002. The Ibarra Firm subsequently issued an audit report dated March 22, 2004,[6/] and included in Triad's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on March 31, 2005, in which it expressed an unqualified audit opinion on Triad's consolidated financial statements for FY 2004 and FY 2003. The Ibarra Firm's reports stated that the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP"). For the audits related to those audit reports, Ibarra Sr. was the engagement partner, and Ibarra Jr. served as the concurring review partner.

8. Although Triad's FY 2003 consolidated financial statements state that all "significant intercompany transactions have been eliminated,"[7/] Triad's reported revenue of $227,171 included $90,000 of inter-company transactions that overstated the company's revenue on a consolidated basis by nearly 66% and its reported gross profit by approximately 600%. Triad's failure to eliminate those inter-company transactions from the financial statements constituted a departure from GAAP,[8/] and Respondents should have identified and appropriately addressed that departure.[9/]

9. In addition, although Triad reported accounts receivable of $88,142, or approximately 10% of total assets, as of the end of FY 2003, Respondents did not confirm accounts receivable and did not document how they overcame the presumption that they would confirm accounts receivable.[10/] Indeed, Respondents did not perform any procedures to audit accounts receivable aside from obtaining management representations.

10. The departures from PCAOB standards described in paragraphs 8 and 9 were brought to Respondents attention during a PCAOB inspection in May 2004. Respondents then separately violated other PCAOB standards by failing to take action to assess the importance of those points to their ability to support the previously expressed audit opinion on the FY 2003 financial statements.[11/] Moreover, in performing their next audit of Triad's financial statements, less than a year after receiving the inspection feedback, Respondents again failed in precisely the same respects as they had failed in the earlier audit. Triad continued not to eliminate FY 2003's inter-company revenue transactions from the financial statements, and Respondents again failed to address Triad's continuing failure to eliminate inter-company revenue transactions from the FY 2003 financial statements. Respondents again performed no procedures concerning accounts receivable other than obtaining management representations. This failure was even more notable in this later audit, because, among other things, the Firm failed to evaluate the appropriateness of Triad's failure to record any bad debt expense even though many of the accounts that were 12 months overdue as of the end of FY 2003 remained unpaid and were 24 months overdue as of the end of FY 2004.[12/]

[9/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures, however, should not be understood as an indication that the Commission has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP.

11. The Ibarra Firm's March 19, 2004 audit report included a going concern explanatory paragraph that failed to use certain required language. PCAOB standards require the use of the phrase "'substantial doubt about its (the entity's) ability to continue as a going concern' [or similar wording that includes the terms substantial doubt and going concern]."[13/] Despite this exact issue being identified for Respondents by PCAOB inspectors in May 2004, Respondents violated this PCAOB standard in the March 22, 2005 audit report, which stated that the "accompanying financial statements do not include any adjustments to the financial statements that might be necessary should the Company continue as a going concern." The going concern language was identical to that of the March 19, 2004 audit report and again failed to include the required language.

12. In connection with the audit of Triad's FY 2003 financial statements, Respondents also failed, in a number of instances, to prepare the required audit documentation.[14/] For example, Respondents' work papers failed to document that Triad's FY 2003 audit was properly planned and supervised. The work papers do not document a discussion among engagement personnel regarding the risk of material misstatement due to fraud, which is required during an audit's planning stage.[15/] In addition, there was no indication in the work papers that either Ibarra Sr., the engagement partner, or Ibarra Jr., the concurring review partner, reviewed the work papers for Triad's FY 2003 audit.

[12/] A write-off, if appropriate, of Triad's entire FYE 2004 accounts receivable balance of $61,566 would represent approximately 33% of FY 2004 reported net loss.

[13/] AU § 341.12, An Entity's Ability to Continue as a Going Concern.

[14/] During the relevant timeframe PCAOB standards required that, among other things, audit documentation be sufficient to: a) document that the work was adequately planned and supervised; b) enable other engagement team members to understand the nature, timing, extent, and results of procedures performed; c) indicate the engagement team members who performed and reviewed the work; and d) show that accounting records agree or reconcile with the financial statements. See AU § 339, Audit Documentation.

FY 2003 and 2004 Audit of Naturewell, Inc.

13. Naturewell, Inc. ("Naturewell") is a Delaware corporation with offices in San Diego, California. Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is dually quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. Naturewell's public filings disclose that it is engaged in the research and development of healthcare products. At all relevant times, Naturewell was an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

14. The Ibarra Firm was engaged as Naturewell's independent auditor from 2002 through 2006. The Ibarra Firm issued an audit report dated October 15, 2003, and included in Naturewell's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on October 17, 2003, in which it expressed an unqualified audit opinion on Naturewell's consolidated financial statements for the years ended June 30, 2003 and 2002. The Ibarra Firm also issued an audit report dated September 22, 2004, and included in Naturewell's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on October 13, 2004, in which it expressed an unqualified audit opinion on Naturewell's consolidated financial statements for the years ended June 30, 2004 and 2003. The audit reports stated that the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. GAAP. For the audits related to those audit reports, Ibarra Jr. was the engagement partner, and Ibarra Sr. served as the concurring review partner.

15. Naturewell's consolidated balance sheet as of June 30, 2003, reported long-term liabilities of $1,695,541, or approximately 35% of total liabilities. The footnotes to Naturewell's financial statements, however, disclosed that at least $855,000, or approximately 50%, of the liabilities reported as long-term, were in fact due within one year of the June 30, 2003 balance sheet date and had not been renegotiated under long-term arrangements.[16/] Under GAAP, those liabilities should have been reported as short-term liabilities. valued at the lower of cost or market value.[18/] Naturewell's consolidated balance sheet as of June 30, 2004 reported inventory of $356,973, or approximately 95% of total assets. Based on cost of goods actually sold during FY 2004, Naturewell's inventory balance represented approximately 22 years worth of sales, which should have increased Respondent's skepticism concerning the inventory's utility and stated value.[19/] Instead, Respondents relied solely on management's representation of the valuation of inventory.

17. Respondents' failure to identify and address the issues described in paragraphs 15 and 16 was brought to Respondents' attention in May 2004 by PCAOB inspectors. Respondents then separately violated other PCAOB standards by failing to take action to assess the importance of those points to their ability to support the previously expressed audit opinion on the FY 2003 financial statements.[20/] Moreover, in performing their next audit of Naturewell's financial statements, less than a year after receiving the inspection feedback, Respondents again failed to address Naturewell's FY 2003 classification of short-term debt as long-term in its FY 2004 financial statements.

18. Respondents also failed to prepare the required audit documentation while conducting their FY 2003 Naturewell audit.[21/] Respondents' work papers failed to document, among other things, consideration of whether and how Naturewell's accounting records agreed or reconciled with its financial statements. For example, the work papers contain no documentation related to reconciliation of Naturewell's reported long-term debt and inventory to the company's related general ledger balances.

an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

20. The Ibarra Firm was engaged as CCA's independent auditor from 2004 through 2006. The Ibarra Firm issued an audit report dated March 31, 2004, and included in CCA's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on April 8, 2004, in which it expressed an unqualified audit opinion on CCA's consolidated financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2003 and 2002. The Ibarra Firm reissued its report dual dated June 22, 2004, and that dual-dated report was included in CCA's Form 10-KSB/A filed with the Commission on June 29, 2004. The Ibarra Firm again reissued its report dated July 14, 2004, and that reissued report was included in CCA's Form 10-KSB/A filed with the Commission on July 15, 2004. The Ibarra Firm subsequently issued an audit report dated March 4, 2005, and included in CCA's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on April 15, 2005, in which it expressed an unqualified audit opinion on CCA's consolidated financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2004 and 2003. Each of these audit reports stated that the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. GAAP. For the audits related to those audit reports, Ibarra Jr. was the engagement partner, and Ibarra Sr. served as the concurring review partner.

21. In its Form 10-KSB filed April 8, 2004, CCA disclosed that on August 21, 2003 it acquired all of the assets of a business for $60,000, recording $40,000 as equipment and $20,000 as goodwill. As part of its FY 2003 audit, the Respondents performed no procedures to test whether the transaction was an asset purchase or a business combination. The Respondents also did not question CCA's recording of $20,000, or approximately 20% of CCA's total assets, as goodwill, even though recording of goodwill in an asset purchase transaction is not consistent with GAAP.[22/]

22. PCAOB standards require an auditor to obtain written representations from management concerning certain assertions.[23/] Contrary to these standards, during CCA's FY 2003 audit the Respondents failed to obtain written representations from management concerning (i) management's belief that the financial statements are fairly presented in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles, (ii) management's acknowledgement of its responsibility for the design and implementation of programs and FY 2003 and FY 2004 Audit of BoysToys.com, Inc.

23. BoysToys.com, Inc. ("BoysToys") is a Delaware corporation with offices in La Jolla, California. Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is dually quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. BoysToys' public filings disclose that before September 12, 2002 it owned and operated a nightclub in San Francisco, California, but currently is in bankruptcy and has no operations. At all relevant times, BoysToys was an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

24. The Ibarra Firm was engaged as BoysToys' independent auditor from 2000 through 2006. The Ibarra Firm issued an audit report dated February 3, 2004, and included in BoysToys' Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on March 30, 2004, in which it expressed an unqualified audit opinion on BoysToys' consolidated financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2003 and 2002. The Ibarra Firm reissued its audit report dual dated as of March 31, 2006, and that dual-dated report was included in BoysToys' FY 2003 Form 10-KSB/A filed with the Commission on April 14, 2006. The Ibarra Firm also issued an audit report dated February 8, 2005, and included in BoysToys' Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on April 13, 2005, in which it expressed an unqualified audit opinion on BoysToys' consolidated financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2004 and 2003. The Ibarra Firm reissued its audit report dual dated March 31, 2006, and that dual-dated report was included in BoysToys' FY 2004 Form 10-KSB/A filed with the Commission on April 14, 2006. Each of these audit reports stated that the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. GAAP. For the audits related to those audit reports, Ibarra Jr. was the engagement partner, and Ibarra Sr. served as the concurring review partner.

25. BoysToys' public filings disclose that the bankruptcy Court entered an order of liquidation on October 6, 2002. Ibarra Jr. concluded that a going concern explanatory paragraph should be included in the audit report on BoysToys' FY 2003 financial statements. Respondents nevertheless, in violation of PCAOB standards, failed to include a going concern paragraph in the February 3, 2004 audit report.[25/] Furthermore, Respondents also failed to include such disclosure in the February 8, 2005 audit report even though the company remained in bankruptcy.[26/]

26. Respondents also failed to audit BoysToys' cash balances as of December 31, 2003 and 2004. The company initially reported a cash balance of $687,971, representing approximately 95% of total assets, as of the end of FY 2003 and the end of FY 2004. Respondents' failed to test the cash balance or to search for unrecorded liabilities. In addition, Respondents expressed an unqualified audit opinion on BoysToys FY 2003 and 2004 financial statements even though those financial statements failed to classify the cash as restricted and Respondents knew that the cash was restricted.[27/] In 2006, BoysToys restated both its FY 2003 and 2004 financial statements, reducing its cash balance as of both fiscal year ends by approximately 17% and classifying it as restricted.

27. Respondents also failed with respect to auditing BoysToys' statements of cash flows. In 2003, when it returned artwork to the original artist, BoysToys wrote off its investment in fine art as a charge to the income statement. No cash was exchanged as a result of this transaction. In its FY 2003 statement of cash flows, BoysToys reported $25,320 of positive cash flow from investing activities related to the write off. The return of the fine art represented 100% of BoysToys' cash flows from investing activities and, as a noncash transaction, its classification as an investing activity is inconsistent with GAAP.[28/] As a result of the PCAOB's May 2004 inspection, Respondents became aware of this departure from GAAP. Nevertheless, BoysToys' FY 2003 statement of cash flows, on which the Ibarra Firm expressed an unqualified opinion in a report dated February 8,

That requirement encompasses a requirement to comply with the PCAOB's interim auditing standards as described in PCAOB Rule 3200T. Respondents' failure to comply with PCAOB auditing standards, as described above, violated PCAOB Rules 3100 and 3200T.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Turner Stone & Company, LLP and Edward Turner, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 2006-010 PCAOB No. 105-2006-002 December 19, 2006

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Turner, Stone & Company, LLP and barring Edward Turner, CPA, from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of one issuer client during 2004.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Turner, Stone & Company, LLP ("Turner Stone" or "the Firm") and Edward Turner, CPA ("Turner") (collectively, "Respondents").

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Turner Stone and Turner have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, [1/] Turner may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

ORDER

the Respondents each consent to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Turner Stone is a Texas limited liability partnership located in the state of Texas and licensed by the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy (License No. P04607). Turner Stone is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. Its office is located in Dallas, Texas.

2. Turner, 53, is a certified public accountant licensed by the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy (License No. 018002). He has been a principal owner of Turner Stone at all times relevant to this matter. Turner is an associated person of Turner Stone, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Respondents Violated PCAOB Auditing Standards

3. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm comply with the Board's auditing standards.[3/] Under those standards, an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[4/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[5/] In connection with their audit of the fiscal year ("FY") 2003 financial statements of 21st Century Technologies, Inc. ("21st Century" or the "Company"), Respondents failed to exercise due professional care, failed to exercise professional skepticism, and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter. Specific instances of Respondents' conduct constituting violations of PCAOB auditing standards are described below.

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing against Turner in this Order may be imposed only if Turner's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Turner's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of "intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard."

4. 21st Century is a Nevada corporation based in Las Vegas, Nevada. Its common stock is registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. 21st Century's public filings disclose that it is a business development company that provides long term debt and equity investment capital to support the expansion of companies in a variety of industries. At all relevant times, 21st Century was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

5. Turner Stone was engaged as 21st Century's independent auditor from 2000 through March 2005. Turner served as the lead engagement partner with ultimate responsibility to ensure that 21st Century's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

6. Turner Stone issued an audit report dated March 18, 2004, included in 21st Century's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 30, 2004, and in its Form 10-K/A filed with the Commission on December 3, 2004, in which it expressed an unqualified audit opinion on 21st Century's financial statements for FY 2003. The report stated that the Company's financial statements fairly presented its financial position in all material respects in conformity with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP").[6/] For the audit related to this audit report, Turner served as the lead engagement partner.

[5/] See AU § 150.02, Generally Accepted Auditing Standards; AU § 230, Due Professional Care in the Performance of Work; and AU § 326, Evidential Matter.

[6/] Turner Stone's audit report for 21st Century stated that its audit was conducted in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards in the United States of America ("GAAS"). Respondents were required to conduct the audit in accordance with the PCAOB's interim auditing standards pursuant to PCAOB Rule 3200T, which took effect on April 25, 2003. However, at the time Turner Stone performed the audit, the PCAOB's interim auditing standards were the same as GAAS

ORDER

1920 Bel Air LLC Transaction

7. 21st Century's consolidated FY 2003 financial statements reported that the Company loaned $1.25 million to an entity named 1920 Bel Air LLC ("1920 Bel Air"). The loan agreement, entered into on December 30, 2003, was for 90 days, with an interest rate of 10 percent per year. According to the documents contained in the audit work papers, 1920 Bel Air agreed to pay 21st Century both a loan origination fee and a mortgage fee, totaling $1 million, which was an amount equal to approximately 80 percent of the loan amount. On December 31, 2003, the last day of 21st Century's 2003 fiscal year, 21st Century recognized as revenue that $1 million, which represented approximately 300 percent of the Company's reported pretax income from continuing operations for fiscal year 2003.

8. At the time of the FY 2003 audit, Turner understood that GAAP required loan origination fees to be deferred and recognized over the life of the loan as an adjustment of yield,[7/] and he included in the work papers a memorandum describing the application of GAAP to the loan fees. During the audit, Turner reviewed the loan agreement. He also discussed the issue with management who, according to Turner's testimony, told him that the fees could be recognized as revenue, rather than deferred. Despite Turner's knowledge of the applicable GAAP, the timing of the transaction, its unusual terms, and its significance to reported income, Respondents merely deferred to management's position that recognizing the fees as revenue was appropriate. In doing so, Respondents failed to address appropriately this departure from GAAP.[8/] as it existed on April 16, 2003, and, until PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 1 took effect on May 24, 2004, it remained appropriate for auditors to refer to GAAS in their audit reports. Accordingly, although the reference to GAAS in Turner Stone's report for 21st Century was appropriate at the time, the standards pursuant to which the audit was required to be performed are more appropriately referred to as PCAOB auditing standards (or PCAOB standards), and that is how they are referred to in this Order.

[7/] The issue is addressed in Statement of Financial Accounting Standards 91, ¶ 5, Accounting for Nonrefundable Fees and Costs Associated with Originating or Acquiring Loans and Initial Direct Costs of Leases.

[8/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the

9. In addition, Respondents failed to evaluate adequately or address appropriately 21st Century's failure to disclose that the transaction with 1920 Bel Air was a related party transaction. An individual who served as a 21st Century officer and director was named as a Managing Member of 1920 Bel Air as a condition of the agreement, and that same individual signed the loan agreement on 1920 Bel Air's behalf. Turner was aware of these facts and originally determined that the transaction was a related party transaction that should have been disclosed. Eventually, however, Respondents deferred to management's assertion that 1920 Bel Air was not a related party because the individual had no ownership interest in 1920 Bel Air. In so doing, Respondents failed to evaluate properly the application of the GAAP disclosure requirement, which does not depend upon an ownership interest,[9/] and failed to address appropriately the Company's departure from that requirement.

10. Respondents also failed to evaluate adequately management's financial statement assertions concerning the 1920 Bel Air transaction. Respondents obtained from 1920 Bel Air a confirmation related to the outstanding loan amount and the fee receivable, but that confirmation was signed by the 21st Century officer and director who also served as 1920 Bel Air's Managing Member. Because the confirmation was signed by an individual who was a 21st Century officer and director, and because the transaction was an unusual year-end transaction with a material effect on the financial statements, Respondents should have exercised a heightened degree of professional skepticism and should have considered whether there was a sufficient basis to conclude that the confirmation provided meaningful and competent evidence,[10/] but they failed to do so.

TransOne Investment

11. 21st Century's consolidated FY 2003 financial statements reported an investment in the equity securities of TransOne, Inc. ("TransOne") with a fair value of Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures, however, should not be understood as an indication that the Commission has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP.

$930,000 as of December 31, 2003. The consolidated financial statements also reflect that 21st Century recorded an unrealized gain of $805,000 related to this investment on December 31, 2003, which was approximately 240 percent of the reported pre-tax income from continuing operations for the year ended December 31, 2003.[11/] These items related to the conversion of a debt that TransOne owed 21st Century into an equity investment that 21st Century had in TransOne. Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures related to the items in two significant respects.

12. First, Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures to evaluate management's representation that the conversion occurred before the end of FY 2003. Documents contained in Turner Stone's audit work papers describe a November 2003 agreement between the Company and TransOne to loan TransOne up to $500,000. The loan was collateralized by TransOne's stock and accrued interest at a rate of 22 percent per year. At December 31, 2003, 21st Century had advanced one fourth of the maximum loan amount to TransOne under the loan agreement. Documents in the work papers evidence a decision by the Company to convert the debt to equity in TransOne, and, on December 31, 2003, the Company recorded a gain related to this conversion. The evidence reviewed by Respondents, however, was insufficient to conclude that the equity conversion occurred earlier than February 2004. A stock certificate and ledger for the TransOne investment, both contained in the audit work papers, indicate that 21st Century received 527,000 shares of TransOne stock on or about February 28, 2004. Turner also reviewed a copy of a January 19, 2004, letter sent by an individual who purported to be TransOne's president to a 21st Century executive, from which it appeared that, as of the date of the letter, the stock transfer had not yet occurred, and TransOne was going to pay off the $125,000 debt by issuing 560,000 shares of common stock to the Company. Turner was also aware that the letter contained conflicting information about the number of shares issued. Despite his knowledge of this information, Turner failed to perform sufficient procedures to evaluate management's assertions about the existence of this transaction at year-end.

13. Second, Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures related to 21st Century's valuation of the equity investment in TransOne. 21st Century hired a specialist to value the TransOne investment, and the valuation report indicated that the fair value of the equity that the Company obtained in TransOne by converting the $125,000 debt was $930,000. The valuation report also contained revenue growth projections over five years that included 8,817 percent for the first year and 322 percent in the second year. Turner reviewed the valuation report and treated it as evidential matter in evaluating the assertion in the financial statements about the value of the investment in TransOne. In order to use the valuation report for that purpose, Respondents should have obtained an understanding of the methods and assumptions used by the specialist, and should have made appropriate tests of data provided to the specialist.[12/] Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures to obtain an understanding of the methods and assumptions used by the specialist. They also failed to test the data provided to the specialist by TransOne.

[11/] The Company converted to a business development company effective on October 1, 2003. The conversion resulted in certain changes in accounting principles used by the Company, including that the Company began to record changes in the fair value of its investments in its statement of operations. Accordingly, the gain related to this transaction was recorded in income, whereas if it had occurred in the first nine months of 2003, it would not have been.

Health Care Investors of America, Inc. Investment

14. 21st Century's consolidated FY 2003 financial statements reported an investment in Health Care Investors of America, Inc. ("HCIA"), a publicly traded issuer, with a fair value of $5.3 million as of December 31, 2003. The HCIA investment represented 39 percent of the total reported assets of 21st Century as of December 31, 2003. Documents in the audit work papers indicate that the reported fair value was based on a valuation report that the Company obtained from a specialist indicating that the fair value of certain HCIA preferred stock owned by the Company was $5.3 million.

15. Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures related to 21st Century's valuation of the equity investment in HCIA. Respondents failed to obtain an understanding of the methods and assumptions used by the specialist regarding HCIA, in violation of PCAOB Standards.[13/] Respondents also failed to perform any procedures related to the data provided by HCIA to the specialist.

16. In addition, Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures related to the confirmation of the existence of the HCIA investment. In lieu of sending a confirmation, Turner allowed a 21st Century executive to e-mail confirmation questions to an HCIA official. The e-mail questions did not directly address confirmation of 21st Century's ownership of the preferred stock and, in any event, Turner never received or learned of any response to the e-mail. In light of the non-response, Respondents should have performed alternative procedures to obtain the necessary evidence.[14/] Respondents, however, failed to perform any alternative procedures to obtain the necessary evidence concerning the investment.

Consideration of Fraud

17. The failures described above constitute departures from the PCAOB auditing standards cited above. In the specific circumstances of Respondents' audit of the Company's FY 2003 financial statements, those failures were compounded by Respondents' failure to respond appropriately to indicators of a risk of material misstatement due to fraud. An auditor's assessment of such risk should "be ongoing throughout the audit,"[15/] and an auditor should consider whether the "nature of auditing procedures performed may need to be changed to obtain evidence that is more reliable or to obtain additional corroborative information."[16/] Respondents not only failed to perform basic procedures adequately, but also failed to reassess the risks after learning about numerous facts that, either standing alone or in the context of other facts learned prior to the audit, warranted heightened scrutiny that should have alerted them to the possible need to extend or modify the audit tests. After being presented with numerous warning signs during the audit, such as the unusual, significant year-end transactions concerning 1920 Bel Air and TransOne, the related party nature of the 1920 Bel Air transaction, questionable confirmations, and conflicting evidential matter concerning the TransOne equity conversion, Respondents should have reassessed whether the nature of auditing procedures performed needed to be changed to obtain additional or more reliable corroborative information concerning 21st Century's revenues, accounts receivable, and investment valuations,[17/] but they failed to do so.

Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in the Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Turner, Stone & Company LLP is censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Edward Turner is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i);

C. After two (2) years from the date of this Order, Turner may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm.

In the Matter of Williams & Webster, P.S., Kevin J. Williams, CPA, and John G. Webster, CPA,	June 12, 2007
Respondents.

Summary

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Williams & Webster, P.S., barring Kevin J. Williams, CPA from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm,[1/] and suspending John G. Webster, CPA from being associated with a registered public accounting firm for a period of one (1) year from the date of this Order. The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings concerning the respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and standards in connection with an audit of the financial statements of one issuer client during 2004.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Williams & Webster, P.S. ("W&W"), Kevin J. Williams, CPA ("Williams"), and John G. Webster, CPA ("Webster") (collectively, "Respondents").

[1/] Williams may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have submitted Offers of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. W&W is an accounting firm incorporated in the state of Washington and licensed by the State of Washington Board of Accountancy (license no. 3552). W&W is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. Its office is located in Spokane, WA.

2. Williams, 59, of Spokane, WA, is a certified public accountant licensed by the State of Washington Board of Accountancy (license no. 13648). He is the founding shareholder of W&W and at all times relevant to this matter was the principal shareholder of W&W and an associated person of W&W, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Williams was the lead engagement partner on the audit that is the subject of this Order.

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Williams and on Webster in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Williams's conduct and Webster's conduct described in this Order meet the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of "intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard."

ORDER

3. Webster, 50, of Spokane, WA, is a certified public accountant licensed by the State of Washington Board of Accountancy (license no. 11301). He was a shareholder of W&W from 1996 until 2006 and at all times relevant to this matter was an associated person of W&W, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Webster was the concurring review partner on the audit that is the subject of this Order.

B. Respondents Violated PCAOB Auditing Standards in Auditing the 2003 Financial Statements of Diatect International Corporation

Summary of Violations

4. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards.[3/] Under the Board's auditing standards, an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[4/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[5/] In connection with the audit of the fiscal year ("FY") 2003 financial statements of Diatect International Corporation ("Diatect"), Respondents failed to exercise due professional care, failed to exercise professional skepticism, and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.

5. In particular, Williams failed to perform adequate audit procedures and failed to exercise due care and professional skepticism in the evaluation of evidential matter related to (1) Diatect's reported gain on the sale of mining rights; and (2) its reported revenue with respect to products for which a right of return existed. Webster failed to exercise due professional care and objectivity in the performance of his concurring partner review of the audit. Specifically, during the audit Webster raised issues about apparent departures from U.S. generally accepting accounting principles

("GAAP") and documented his concerns in a memorandum to Williams one month before the audit report date, but then he concurred with W&W's decision to issue its unqualified audit report even though those issues remained inadequately addressed.[6/]

The Audit of Diatect's 2003 Financial Statements

6. Diatect is a California corporation based in Heber City, Utah. Its common stock is registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and is quoted on the Pink Sheets. Diatect's public filings disclose that, at all times relevant to this matter, it was in the business of producing a variety of insecticide products. At all relevant times, Diatect was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

7. W&W was engaged as Diatect's independent auditor from 2000 through November 2004. W&W issued an audit report dated April 14, 2004, that was included in Diatect's Form 10-KSB/A filed with the Commission on April 29, 2004 and May 17, 2004, in which W&W expressed an unqualified audit opinion on Diatect's consolidated financial statements for FY 2003 and 2002. The report stated that the Company's financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the Company's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP.

Diatect's Sale of Mining Claims

8. According to minutes of a meeting of Diatect's board of directors, in 2001, four members of Diatect's management and their spouses acquired four unpatented mining claims from the U.S. Bureau of Land Management ("BLM Claims"). The minutes reflect that the BLM Claims covered 640 acres of land in Oregon that contained diatomaceous earth, a naturally occurring substance used in insecticide products that Diatect marketed and sold. The minutes also reflect that the Company intended to prepare the "appropriate quitclaim deeds" to transfer ownership of the BLM Claims to Diatect. Diatect recorded the BLM Claims on its FY 2001 balance sheet at the acquisition cost of $540.

6/ Before W&W issued the audit report, Webster concluded that, among other things, no matters had come to his attention that would cause him to believe that the financial statements were not in conformity with GAAP or that the audit was not performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. Based on this conclusion, he approved W&W's issuance of its audit report. In this Order, that conduct is described as Webster concurring with W&W's decision to issue its audit report.

ORDER

9. Two years later in July 2003, Diatect submitted second quarter financial information to W&W for review in which management had marked up the value of the BLM Claims to $34,584,000 based on a 1991 geologist's report ("1991 Geologist Report"). In response, Respondents told Diatect that in order to record a gain on the asset, it needed to sell the BLM Claims. A few days later, Diatect entered into a transaction to sell 90% of its BLM Claims for $31,125,600, or 90% of the marked up value. The buyer was a newly formed shell company called Diatomaceous Earth Deposits of Virginia, LLC ("DEDV") owned by Michael P. McQuade ("McQuade"), an outside director and shareholder of Diatect. Because McQuade was a Diatect director and sole owner of DEDV, the sale of the BLM Claims was a related party transaction.[7/]

10. DEDV paid no cash at the time of the transaction. Instead, Diatect accepted an 18-year promissory note ("Note") for the full purchase price. No payments under the Note were due until 2005. Diatect recorded a gain of $15,562,800, or 50% of the sale price, in its financial statements for the quarter ending September 30, 2003.[8/] The Company reduced the gain to $12 million in its FY 2003 financial statements.[9/] At year end, the Note represented 74% of the Company's reported assets and the gain was equal to 159% of its reported income before taxes.

11. During the FY 2003 audit, Williams became aware of significant facts indicating that Diatect's accounting for the BLM Claims transaction may have departed from GAAP. Specifically, Williams became aware of information indicating (1) that there may not have been a sale because the incidents of ownership of the BLM Claims may not, in substance, have been transferred to the buyer;[10/] and (2) that even if the

[7/] See Statement of Financial Accounting Standards ("SFAS") No. 57, Related Party Disclosures, at ¶ 1 and Appendix B.

[8/] Prior to the transaction, the BLM Claims were recorded on Diatect's balance sheet at $940, reflecting the 2001 acquisition cost and annual fees Diatect had paid since 2001 to maintain the claims.

[9/] The $12 million gain was based on Respondents' calculation of the present value of the Note using a 20% discount rate.

[10/] Determining whether a nonperforming asset has been transferred in substance involves an assessment as to whether "the risks and rewards of ownership have been transferred." Codification of Commission Staff Accounting Bulletins ("SAB") Topic 5.V, Question 1 (relating specifically to certain transfers of nonperforming assets by financial institutions). Circumstances that may indicate that the incidents of incidents of ownership had, in substance, transferred to the buyer, collection of the sale price may not have been reasonably assured. Either way, the information raised the possibility that Diatect should not have recognized a gain on the purported sale.[11/] The audit work papers reflect Williams's understanding that DEDV had no financial investment in the BLM Claims, having made no down payment. Williams also concluded that DEDV did not have the financial means to pay the Note because it was a newly formed shell company with no operations or assets, and payment of the Note was not guaranteed by McQuade or others. As Williams described in the work papers, "[b]uyer is newly formed entity, with no operating history, no financial statements and no experience in minerals extraction. This represents substantial risk of nonperformance on note."

12. Williams also was aware of facts indicating that there was substantial doubt as to whether DEDV could generate sufficient income from the BLM Claims to pay the Note. The work papers reflect Williams's conclusion that Diatect had never mined the property or otherwise generated any revenue from the BLM Claims. In an e-mail dated one month before W&W's audit report, one of Diatect's outside directors reported that DEDV "has not presented a business plan, financials, or an operation plan for the mine—no schedule for investment or ramping up." The e-mail requested that W&W prepare a letter to Diatect management setting forth any concerns the auditors' had related to, among other things, the BLM Claims transaction. In a letter to Diatect the following day, Williams questioned whether it is "realistic to expect that a minerals site—as yet not producing—can actually generate 7 million in cash in only 18 months in order to make the first note payment to Diatect?"

13. Williams failed to properly address these issues during the audit. No procedures were performed to determine whether Diatect owned the BLM Claims, even though Board meeting minutes reflect that four members of Diatect's management and their spouses acquired the BLM Claims, not Diatect. No inquiries were made of DEDV ownership, in substance, have not been transferred to the buyer, include (1) the absence of a significant financial investment by the buyer; and (2) that repayment of the debt that constitutes the principal consideration in the transaction is dependent on future successful operations of the business. ORDER or McQuade concerning the transaction, DEDV's apparent lack of investment in the BLM Claims, DEDV's ability to repay the Note, or DEDV's ability to successfully mine the BLM Claims. Instead, Williams relied on Diatect's management's representations concerning DEDV's operational and financial plans. Under the circumstances, including the related party nature of the transaction, such reliance on management representations was insufficient to support the audit opinion.[12/] Although Williams informed Diatect in writing that he wanted to review the due diligence documentation "in order to objectively evaluate the collectibility of this enormous receivable," Williams neither received nor reviewed such documentation. Moreover, W&W received a confirmation reply, stating that the original amount of the Note was $15,562,800, which was only 50 percent of the Note's stated value. Although the reply contradicted Diatect's management's representations, Williams failed to address this inconsistency. Finally, Williams failed to obtain or review the 1991 Geologist Report, even though it was incorporated into the BLM Claims sale agreement and he was urged to review the report by one of Diatect's directors who described it to Williams in November 2003 as the "'maximus opus' on the mine." In the audit work papers, Williams identified the 1991 Geologist Report and a 1996 unsigned letter by a second geologist ("1996 Letter") concerning the BLM Claims as supporting the value of the Note's collateral.[13/] Williams, however, made no effort to contact either geologist or to otherwise determine whether the 8 and 13 year-old reports accurately reflected the current value of the BLM Claims.

[12/] See AU § 334.07 & .09, Related Parties ("The auditor should place emphasis on testing material transactions with parties he knows are related to the reporting entity." "The procedures should be directed toward obtaining and evaluating sufficient competent evidential matter and should extend beyond inquiry of management."); AU § 9334.18 ("The risk associated with management's assertions about related party transactions is often assessed as higher than for many other types of transactions because of the possibility that the parties to the transactions are motivated by reasons other than those that exist for most business transactions.").

[13/] Despite using the conclusions of both the 1991 Geologist Report and the 1996 Letter as evidential matter concerning the value of the BLM Claims, Williams did not perform procedures to ascertain the qualifications of the geologists, the geologists' relationships to Diatect, or the methods or assumptions used by the geologists. PCAOB standards required Williams to perform such procedures in order to use the geologists' conclusions as evidential matter. See AU § 336, Using the Work of a Specialist. Williams also failed to identify and analyze the circumstances giving rise to the 1996 Letter, why the 1996 Letter was not signed, or whether the 1996 Letter covered the same mining claims Diatect purportedly sold in 2003.

ORDER

14. Webster, as the concurring partner reviewer, was aware of significant questions relating to Diatect's accounting for the BLM Claims transaction. In September 2003 and February 2004, the Commission staff issued comments on an SB-2 registration statement Diatect had filed ("SB-2 Comments").[14/] The SB-2 Comments raised questions concerning the BLM Claims transaction, which Webster addressed in a W&W internal memorandum to Williams dated March 18, 2004 ("Webster Memo"). The Webster Memo noted that DEDV was "thinly capitalized and may not be able to finish the development [of the mine] within two years to generate an income stream."[15/] The Webster Memo also noted that any gain could be "deemed not to be recognized until cash or a close substitute is received." Webster, however, concurred with W&W's decision to issue its audit report even though these issues were not properly addressed.[16/]

Diatect's Revenue Recognition and Accounting for Product Returns

15. According to Diatect's public filings, it recognized revenue when it shipped product to its customers, and its customers could return product at any time and receive a credit for the full amount. Respondents became aware of evidence suggesting that Diatect's revenue recognition practices may not have complied with GAAP, including evidence that (1) certain transactions recorded as sales may in fact have been consignments; (2) Diatect may have lacked the ability to make a reasonable estimate of future returns, thus making it inappropriate to recognize revenue upon shipment; (3) Diatect failed to establish any reserve for estimated future returns; and (4) Diatect failed to reduce revenue for product returns.

[14/] Respondents received the SB-2 Comments from Diatect before W&W's April 14, 2004 audit report was issued.

[15/] SAB Topic 5.U describes considerations that may cause the SEC staff to question gain recognition on a sale to a highly leveraged business (relating specifically to sale of a business or operating assets), including considerations that were present in Diatect's sale of the BLM Claims to DEDV. This accounting guidance was included in W&W's work papers.

[16/] In 2005, Diatect restated its FY 2003 financial statements, reversing the $12 million gain, explaining that it "considered the agreement to be non-substantive as the buyer is thinly capitalized and has only made minimal investments in the property." See Diatect's 2004 10-KSB/A filed with the Commission on May 6, 2005.

ORDER

16. During the FY 2003 audit, Williams became aware of evidence that transactions Diatect recorded as sales were in fact consignments.[17/] Diatect promoted its products to various high school chapters of the Future Farmers of America ("FFA") under its "Got Bugs" fundraising program. Diatect's reported sales to various FFA chapters represented approximately 35% of total sales in FY 2002 and 12% in FY 2003. During the FY 2003 audit, Williams obtained copies of Diatect's marketing materials, contracts, and remittance forms for the "Got Bugs" program. The marketing materials describe the program as "Risk Free—Free shipping. No out of pocket expense. Pay only for what you've sold." The contracts permitted the FFA chapters to remit the purchase price "weekly as product is sold," and the remittance forms were consistent with consignment payment terms. In addition, W&W documented the results of conversations with Diatect's customers evidencing that at least 50% of the accounts receivable selected for confirmation were the result of consignment arrangements, not sales.[18/] The confirmation results were sent to Diatect, and Williams documented the consignment issue in a letter to Diatect's management: "Many audit items which we have endeavored to confirm are either not coming back to us or not as expected. Many more are coming back with problems (e.g., consignments rather than sales) and need your firm's attention to satisfactorily resolve."

17. In addition, even to the extent that Diatect's transactions were sales, Williams was aware of evidence that Diatect's practices may not have complied with GAAP concerning product sales where a right of return exists. First, revenue from such sales can be recognized at the time of the shipment (Diatect's practice) only if, among other things, the company has the ability to make a reasonable estimate of future returns.[19/] Williams was aware of the presence of factors that GAAP identifies as tending to impair the ability to make such estimates, but he performed no evaluation to determine whether Diatect had that ability.[20/] Second, if revenue is recognized at the

[17/] Products shipped pursuant to a consignment arrangement "are not sales and do not qualify for revenue recognition until a sale occurs." SAB Topic 13.A.2, Question 2.

[18/] W&W also received accounts receivable confirmation replies from some customers that expressly indicated a consignment arrangement during the FY 2002 audit.

[19/] See SFAS 48, Revenue Recognition When Right of Return Exists, at ¶ 6(f); SAB Topic 13.A.4(b), Question 5.

[20/] For example, in audited financial statements for FY 2002 and 2001, Diatect disclosed that it lacked a sufficient sales history to be able to establish an time of shipment, the company must establish a reserve for estimated future returns.[21/] Williams was aware that Diatect did not establish a reserve for estimated future returns as of December 31, 2003, even though it had a history of receiving significant product returns.[22/]

18. Finally, Williams was aware that Diatect's accounting for actual product returns was inconsistent with comments Diatect had received from the Commission staff. In its September 2003 SB-2 Comments, the Commission staff questioned Diatect's revenue recognition policy and, among other things, suggested that Diatect record product returns as a reduction of revenue. In response, Diatect added a footnote disclosure to its FY 2002 and 2001 financial statements that sales credits were treated as a reduction of revenues, but then reclassified its FY 2001 product returns as an increase to cost of sales in the financial statements included in its Form SB-2/A filed with the Commission on January 22, 2004. In its February 2004 SB-2 Comments, the Commission staff commented that Diatect should record product returns as a decrease to revenue, not an increase in cost of sales. Despite the Commission staff's SB-2 Comments, Diatect classified its FY 2003 returns – which totaled 28% of reported sales – as bad debt expense. Even though Williams was aware of the views expressed by the Commission staff on the proper accounting for the product returns, he performed no analysis to assess the appropriateness of the different accounting that Diatect used.

19. As part of his concurring review, Webster became aware of each of these revenue recognition issues, two of which he addressed in the Webster Memo. Aware of the Commission's SB-2 Comments, Webster informed Williams that the "S.E.C. is going to be adamant that [the 2001 and 2003 product returns] are treated as sales returns." Webster also noted that Diatect's return policy may be an obstacle to recognizing estimate for returns and allowances. See Diatect's Form SB-2/A filed with the Commission on January 22, 2004. Diatect's 2003 financial statements include no such disclosure, but Williams failed to assess whether circumstances had changed such that Diatect did, in 2003, have an ability to establish such an estimate. Williams was also aware, as described below, that Diatect had not, in fact, established any allowance for returns.

revenue on sales at the time of shipment. Webster, however, concurred with W&W's decision to issue its report even though those issues remained inadequately addressed.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Williams & Webster, P.S. is censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Kevin J. Williams is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i);

C. After two (2) years from the date of this Order, Williams may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm;

D. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), John G. Webster is suspended for one (1) year from the date of this Order from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i)

Summary

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Thomas Benson, and barring its owner, Thomas Benson, CPA, from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning the respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with an audit of the financial statements of one issuer client during 2006.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against the registered firm, Thomas Benson ("the Firm") and Thomas Benson, CPA ("Benson") (collectively, "Respondents").

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents each consent to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondents

1. The firm Thomas Benson is a sole proprietorship located in the state of Michigan and is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. Its office is located in Okemos, Michigan.

2. Benson, 48, of Okemos, Michigan, is a certified public accountant licensed by the Michigan State Board of Accountancy (License No. 1101017000). He is the Chief Operating Officer of the Firm and at all times relevant to this matter was an associated person of the Firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Prior to performing the audit described in this Order, Benson had never audited the financial statements of an issuer. Up until the time of the conduct described in this Order, Benson spent most of his professional career working for the state of Michigan in various internal auditing positions.

The sanctions that the Board is imposing against Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of "intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard."

with the Board's auditing standards.[2/] Under the Board's auditing standards, an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[3/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due care and professional skepticism, obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements, and respond appropriately to indicators of a risk of material misstatement due to fraud.[4/] In connection with the Firm's audit of the fiscal year ("FY") 2006 financial statements of Conversion Solutions Holdings Corp. ("Conversion Solutions" or "the Company"), Respondents failed to exercise due professional care, failed to exercise professional skepticism, and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidence.

4. Specifically, Respondents failed to perform adequate audit procedures, and failed to exercise due care and professional skepticism related to: (1) financial statement assertions that the Company had rights to $500 million in Venezuelan bonds and approximately $19.9 million in related interest; (2) financial statement assertions about the existence and valuation of a $310 million note; and (3) the inclusion of certain non-monetary exchanges involving the aforementioned assets in the Company's statement of cash flows.

Background

5. Conversion Solutions is a Delaware corporation based in Kennesaw, Georgia. Its common stock is registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC" or "Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Conversion Solutions' public filings disclose that, at all times relevant to this Order, it was a diversified holdings company that was "formed to originate, fund and source funding for asset-based transactions in the private market." Conversions Solutions was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).[5/]

6. In April 2006, Conversion Solutions' Chief Financial Officer, a colleague of Benson's for over 20 years, asked Benson if he would be interested in auditing the Company's FY 2006 financial statements.[6/] Benson's engagement as the new auditor of record was in anticipation of a reverse merger transaction with Fronthaul Group, Inc., where Conversion Solutions would become an issuer and be required to file financial statements with the Commission.

7. On July 8, 2006, Conversion Solutions executed the reverse merger transaction and became an issuer. Around this time, Benson agreed to audit the Company's FY 2006 financial statements. After being advised by Conversion Solutions' CFO of the legal requirement that the Company's auditor be registered with the PCAOB, Benson submitted an application for registration, which the Board approved.

8. On September 28, 2006, the Firm issued its audit report on Conversion Solutions' FY 2006 financial statements, which was included in the Company's Form 8-K filed with the Commission on September 29, 2006, in the Company's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on October 16, 2006, and in two Forms 10-K/A filed with the Commission on October 17, 2006, and October 19, 2006, respectively. In the audit report, the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion on Conversion Solutions' financial statements for FY 2006. The report stated that the Company's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the

On October 25, 2006, the Commission's Division of Enforcement filed a complaint in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia against Conversion Solutions and its Chief Executive Officer, Rufus Paul Harris. Company as of June 30, 2006 and the results of its operations and its cash flows for the year ended June 30, 2006 in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the Unites States of America. In addition, the report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with the auditing standards of the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board.[7/]

The Audit of Conversion Solutions' FY 2006 Financial Statements

$500 Million of Venezuelan Bonds

9. In its FY 2006 financial statements, Conversion Solutions disclosed that on March 15, 2006, it acquired from the Republic of Venezuela full ownership of bonds with a principal amount of $500 million, and the Company's statement of cash flows disclosed a $500 million payment. The Company recorded the bonds as a $500 million asset on its balance sheet. The bonds represented 60 percent of the total reported assets of Conversion Solutions as of June 30, 2006.

10. Conversion Solutions also disclosed that it was due to receive its first interest payment on the bonds on August 8, 2006. Accordingly, the Company accrued approximately $19.9 million of interest and reported that amount as a receivable on its balance sheet. Inconsistently with that, the Company's statement of cash flows treated that interest as having been received. Moreover, the Company reported the interest receivable as interest revenue on the statement of operations, which represented 100 percent of the Company's total reported revenue for the fiscal year ended June 30, 2006.

11. Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures to evaluate the financial statement assertions concerning the $500 million in Venezuelan bonds and approximately $19.9 million of accrued interest. Other than management representations and documents provided by management, Respondents obtained no

7/ In confining that statement to "auditing standards" of the PCAOB, the report was inconsistent with the requirements of PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 1, References in Auditors' Reports to the Standards of the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, which requires a representation that the audit was conducted in accordance with "the standards" of the PCAOB, which include both auditing standards and related professional practice standards.

audit evidence relevant to evaluating the assertions, and Respondents failed to follow up on evidence that cast doubt on the assertions. For example, Respondents obtained no evidence that the Company had in fact made a $500 million cash payment as described in the statement of cash flows. Moreover, despite making repeated requests to management for an opportunity to physically inspect the bond certificates, Respondents were never given that opportunity and never saw any such certificates. In addition, despite the Company's assertion that it was entitled to an interest payment of approximately $19.9 million on August 8, 2006, Respondents understood at the time of the September 28, 2006 audit report that the Company had received no interest payment.[8/] Finally, although the Company asserted that it acquired the bonds on March 15, 2006, the documents that Respondents obtained from management suggested that the bonds had been issued and sold to other investors during 1998.[9/]

$310 Million UCC Security Note

12. In its FY 2006 financial statements, Conversion Solutions disclosed that it had acquired what it called a UCC Security Note ("Note") when it merged with Waatle Holdings Corp. ("Waatle"). According to the Company's disclosures, the Note had previously been assigned to Waatle for $40 million, neither the Company nor Waatle had paid any of the $40 million, and the Note was to be returned to the assignor in 2009. Respondents accepted management's assertion that the Note entitled the holder to the recovery on a legal judgment issued by a Washington State court, and that the obligation reflected in the Note was secured by liens on real estate owned by, among others, various Washington State judges and attorneys ("the purported lien debtors"). The Company reported the Note in its financial statements as an asset valued at approximately $310 million – $172 million in principal and $138 million in accrued interest. The Note represented 37 percent of the total reported assets of Conversion Solutions as of June 30, 2006. The Company's statement of cash flows also reported a cash payment of approximately $310 million related to the Note.

[8/] Respondents also failed to take any steps to address or resolve the apparent inconsistencies in the Company's financial statements concerning whether the interest payment was a receivable or had been received.

[9/] Those documents also included the bonds' CUSIP information, which Respondents could have used to obtain independent information as to the bonds' current owners, but Respondents made no attempt to do so.

ORDER

13. Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures to evaluate the financial statement assertions about the existence of the obligation described in the Note and the Company's rights relative to that obligation. Again, other than management representations and documents provided by management, – documents that Respondents acknowledge that they did not sufficiently understand – Respondents obtained no audit evidence relevant to evaluating the existence of the obligation or whether the Company had any related rights. Respondents took no steps to attempt to clarify the nature and meaning of the documents that they did not understand, or to determine whether a Washington State court actually had issued a judgment related to the purported lien debtors, or to determine whether there were any liens on the purported lien debtors' property. Moreover, Respondents' obtained no evidence of a $310 million payment as described in the Company's statement of cash flows.

14. Respondents also failed to perform sufficient procedures to evaluate the valuation of the Note. Respondents obtained representations and documents from management, had a telephone conversation with a party that Respondents understood to be the original holder of the Note, and obtained a list of real estate holdings that Respondents understood to be the property that secured the obligation in the Note. Respondents took no other steps to evaluate the Company's $310 million valuation even though (1) Respondents' list of the real estate holdings indicated that the properties were worth only approximately $60 million; (2) Respondents identified uncertainty about whether some of those properties were even within the Washington State court's jurisdiction; (3) Respondents understood that the $40 million that Waatle had purportedly agreed to pay for the Note had never been paid; (4) Respondents understood that the Company was only an assignee of the Note for a five-year period; and (5) Respondents understood that the Company had never received any of the $138 million of interest that had purportedly accrued on the Note.

Non-Cash Activities in Statement of Cash Flows

15. Conversion Solutions' reported several non-cash activities in the financing activities section of its statement of cash flows, which is contrary to GAAP.[10/] Non-cash activities reported in the statement of cash flows included approximately $771 million in accumulated other comprehensive income and $36 million in an entry titled, "Long-Term Note." Respondents failed to identify and appropriately address this GAAP departure.[11/]

Consideration of Fraud

16. Respondents' failures also involved failures to comply with PCAOB auditing standards concerning responding appropriately to indicators of a risk of material misstatement due to fraud. An auditor's assessment of such risk should "be ongoing throughout the audit,"[12/] and an auditor should consider whether the "nature of auditing procedures performed may need to be changed to obtain evidence that is more reliable or to obtain additional corroborative information."[13/] Respondents not only failed to perform basic procedures adequately, but also failed to reassess the risks after learning about numerous facts that, either standing alone or in the context of other facts learned prior to the audit, warranted heightened scrutiny that should have alerted them to the possible need to extend or modify the audit tests. After being presented with numerous warning signs during the audit, such as the failure to inspect either the Venezuelan bond certificates or the judgment supporting the Note, the Company's failure to receive any interest contractually due on the Venezuelan Bonds, and the Company's failure to pay any consideration for either of the two assets, Respondents should have reassessed whether the nature of auditing procedures performed needed to be changed to obtain additional or more reliable corroborative information concerning Conversion Solutions' assets and revenues.[14/] They failed to do so.

[11/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB Standards. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures, however, should not be understood as an indication that the Commission has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP.

ORDER

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Thomas Benson is revoked; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Thomas Benson, CPA is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Susan E. Birkert Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2007-003 November 14, 2007

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is barring Susan E. Birkert from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings concerning Birkert's violations of PCAOB rules and standards relating to independence in connection with an audit of the financial statements of one issuer client.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Susan E. Birkert ("Birkert" or "Respondent").

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over her and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Birkert, 27, of Levittown, New York, joined KPMG LLP ("KPMG") in November 2002. From May 2004 until November 28, 2006, she was a member of KPMG's Comtech Telecommunications Corp. ("Comtech") audit engagement team, first as an Associate and then as a Lead Senior on KPMG's fiscal year ("FY") 2004, FY2005 and FY2006 year-end audits of Comtech and on KPMG's quarterly Comtech reviews. Respondent is not a CPA, but, at all times relevant to this matter, Respondent was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm (KPMG), as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary of Violations

2. PCAOB rules and standards require associated persons of registered public accounting firms to comply with certain independence restrictions, including

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondent in this Order may be imposed only if Respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of "intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard."

ORDER

restrictions against committing to acquire a financial interest in an audit client[3/] Respondent violated these requirements by directing $5,000 toward the purchase of Comtech stock while she was a member of the KPMG Comtech audit engagement team.

C. Discussion

3. Comtech is a Delaware corporation headquartered in Melville, New York. Its common stock is registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"). Comtech's public filings disclose that it was, at all times relevant to this matter, in the business of communications products, systems and services, including telecommunications transmission, mobile data communications and RF microwave amplifiers. At all relevant times, Comtech was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

4. Respondent was a member of the KPMG audit engagement team that audited and reviewed Comtech's financial statements for the fiscal year ended July 31, 2006. During that audit, she served as the Lead Senior conducting audit and review work.

5. In November 2005, during a period when Respondent was participating in KPMG's Comtech review work for the quarter ended October 31, 2005, Respondent, in conversation with an acquaintance from Respondent's previous employer, mentioned that Comtech was the largest public audit client that she was working on. The acquaintance asked whether Respondent thought that Comtech was a good company in which to invest, and Respondent said that it was. The acquaintance then asked whether Respondent wanted him to purchase any Comtech stock for Respondent. Respondent replied affirmatively and said that she would give the acquaintance $5,000 to buy Comtech stock for her.

[3/] See PCAOB Rules 3100, 3200T (incorporating requirements of certain AICPA auditing standards as in existence on April 16, 2003, including AU § 220, Independence), and 3600T (incorporating requirements of certain AICPA independence standards as in existence on April 16, 2003, including ET § 101 and interpretations thereunder).

PCAOB

ORDER

6. Shortly after that discussion, the acquaintance told Respondent that he had purchased the Comtech stock for her. On or about December 12, 2005, Respondent delivered to the acquaintance a $5,000 check, payable to the acquaintance, for the Comtech stock purchase.[4/] Respondent understood at the time she gave the acquaintance the $5,000 check that owning stock in an audit client was a violation of independence rules.

7. Subsequent to delivery of the $5,000 check, Respondent continued to work on KPMG's audit and reviews of Comtech. Respondent performed work on KPMG's reviews of Comtech's financial statements for the second and third quarters ended January 31, 2006 and April 30, 2006; KPMG's audit of Comtech's financial statements for the fiscal year ended July 31, 2006; and KPMG's review of Comtech's financial statements for the first quarter ended October 31, 2006.[5/]

8. As an associated person of KPMG, Respondent was required to comply with the Board's interim auditing standards and interim independence standards in connection with the Comtech audit.[6/] Those standards required that Respondent maintain independence from Comtech,[7/] and provided, among other things, that her independence would be considered impaired if she "committed to acquire any direct . . .

[4/] Although Respondent understood that the acquaintance deposited the $5,000 check, she never obtained or saw any documentation that the acquaintance had purchased Comtech stock.

[5/] In May of 2006, Respondent falsely acknowledged to KPMG that she was in compliance with KPMG independence policies and PCAOB independence requirements for the period April 1, 2005 through March 31, 2006. Later in 2006, following a KPMG internal investigation prompted by an anonymous tip, Respondent admitted to providing the $5,000 check for the purchase of Comtech stock, and KPMG terminated her employment. Comtech disclosed in its Form 10-Q for its FY2007 first quarter ended October 31, 2006, filed with the Commission on December 4, 2006, that KPMG advised Comtech in November 2006 that it believed that a KPMG accountant who worked on the engagement to audit Comtech's financial statements made an investment in its common stock.

financial interest" in Comtech during the period of the professional engagement.[8/] The steps she took to acquire such an interest, through her acquaintance, violated the standards requiring that she remain independent.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Susan E. Birkert is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i); and

B. After one year from the date of this Order, Birkert may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS

In the Matter of Timothy L. Steers, CPA, LLC, and Timothy L. Steers, CPA, Respondents.

November 14, 2007

Summary

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Timothy L. Steers, CPA, LLC and barring the Firm's sole owner, Timothy L. Steers, from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning the respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with audits of the financial statements of two issuer clients during 2004.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Timothy L. Steers, CPA, LLC (the "Firm") and Timothy L. Steers ("Steers") (collectively, "Respondents").

[1/] The Firm may reapply for registration after two (2) years from the date of this Order. Steers may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Timothy L. Steers, CPA, LLC, a limited liability company licensed in Oregon (license no. 1113), is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules. Its office is located in Portland, Oregon.

2. Timothy L. Steers ("Steers") is a certified public accountant licensed in the State of Oregon (license no. 4939). He is the Managing Executive and sole owner of the Firm. At all times relevant to this matter, he was an associated person of the Firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a Respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of "intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard."

ORDER

B. Respondents Violated PCAOB Auditing Standards in Auditing the 2003 Financial Statements of CyberAds, Inc. and Nova Communications Ltd.

Summary of Violations

3. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards.[3/] Under the Board's auditing standards, an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[4/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[5/] In connection with the audits of the fiscal year ("FY") 2003 financial statements of CyberAds, Inc. ("CyberAds") and Nova Communications Ltd. ("Nova"), Respondents failed to exercise due professional care, failed to exercise professional skepticism, and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.

4. In particular, Respondents failed to adhere to PCAOB standards in connection with CyberAds' financial statement assertions concerning ownership rights to, and valuation and disclosure of, a material asset. In addition, Respondents subsequently issued a consent allowing CyberAds to incorporate by reference into a Form S-8 the Firm's audit report on CyberAds' 2003 financial statements even though Respondents knew that CyberAds had announced that it intended to restate those financial statements to eliminate the only significant reported asset.

5. Furthermore, Respondents failed to exercise due professional care and professional skepticism and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidence related to Nova's financial statement assertions regarding certain "advances receivable," an obligation to a third party, and a "payable to related parties."

2003 Audit of CyberAds, Inc.

6. CyberAds, Inc. (n/k/a Rhino Outdoor International, Inc.) is a Nevada corporation headquartered in Henderson, Nevada. Its common stock is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and is dually quoted on the Pink Sheets and OTC Bulletin Board. CyberAds' 2003 Form 10KSB/A filed on April 22, 2004 disclosed that its business involved using member lists compiled through its website to market cellular phone services. At all relevant times, CyberAds was an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

7. The Firm was engaged as CyberAds' independent auditor beginning in 2003 and issued an audit report dated April 6, 2004, that was included in CyberAds' Form 10KSB/A filed with the Commission on April 22, 2004, in which the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion on CyberAds' consolidated financial statements for 2003.[6/] The report stated that CyberAds' financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, CyberAds' financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP").

Ownership Rights in a Material Asset

8. CyberAds' 2003 financial statements reported a $10.7 million asset that was disclosed as "a 22% interest in a limited liability company that owns real estate." That asset, which represented approximately one hundred percent of the company's assets, resulted from a purported assignment to CyberAds' wholly-owned subsidiary from a related party.

9. Respondents failed to perform adequate audit procedures to evaluate whether the assignment was consummated in 2003, despite being aware of significant evidence suggesting that it was not consummated in 2003. Despite that evidence, Respondents relied on management's representations and an unsigned assignment agreement as the only evidence that the transaction resulted in a CyberAds' asset as of December 31, 2003.[7/]

[6/] The audit report included an explanatory paragraph expressing substantial doubt as to CyberAds' ability to continue as a going concern.

[7/] In a Form 10-KSB/A filed on April 15, 2005, CyberAds restated its 2003 financial statements to remove the $10.7 million investment. CyberAds initially announced its intention to restate its 2003 financial statements in a Form 8-K filed on January 31, 2005.

PCAOB

ORDER

10. Respondents were aware of evidence suggesting that CyberAds did not acquire rights to the asset during 2003. For example, CyberAds filed a Form 8-K/A on January 26, 2004 stating that the assignment of the interest in the LLC had not yet been consummated as of December 31, 2003. Indeed, it stated that CyberAds' Board of Directors and the transferor had not yet agreed on the number of CyberAds shares to be issued to the transferor as consideration for the assignment. The Form 8-K/A further stated that "[i]n the unlikely event that the Board of Directors and [the transferor] cannot agree, the assignment will be rescinded. A subsequent report will be filed upon consummation of the assignment with respect to the consideration to be received by [the transferor]." (Emphasis added).[8/] Additionally, a March 2004 handwritten note in Respondents' work papers stated that "the actual number of shares [of CyberAds' stock to be issued in exchange for the interest in the LLC] is still being negotiated." Respondents failed to address this audit evidence and improperly relied on management's representations that the asset was acquired in 2003.[9/]

Valuation of the Reported Asset

11. Respondents also failed to adequately evaluate the $10.7 million value management assigned to the reported asset. Respondents purported to have used the work of a specialist retained by management to appraise the reported investment. The appraisal, however, was of a different asset than that which CyberAds was to acquire in that the appraisal valued the underlying real estate owned by the LLC, but did not appraise the value of the LLC. Moreover, the appraisal reported a significantly higher value for the appraised property than the value that CyberAds assigned to the asset. Notwithstanding these discrepancies, Respondents failed to obtain the financial statements of the LLC or to perform any other procedures to test CyberAds' valuation of the asset.[10/]

[8/] CyberAds first filed a Form 8-K announcing the agreement on January 23, 2004. That Form 8-K did not attach a copy of the assignment agreement, because it was "not available" as of that date. See Form 8-K/A filed on Jan. 26, 2004.

12. Furthermore, in using the conclusions of the appraisal as evidential matter concerning the value of the reported asset, Respondents failed to perform procedures to evaluate the professional qualifications of the appraiser. Respondents made no inquiries regarding the appraiser's professional certification, reputation, or experience. Respondents also failed to obtain an understanding of the nature of the work performed by the appraiser and failed to evaluate the appraiser's relationship to CyberAds.[11/]

Disclosures

13. Although GAAP requires disclosure of material related party transactions,[12/] CyberAds failed to disclose the assignment as a related party transaction. Respondents knew that the purported assignment was from CyberAds' majority shareholder, but Respondents failed to identify and appropriately address CyberAds' departure from the GAAP disclosure requirement.[13/]

14. In addition, CyberAds' disclosures included representations that were contrary to information that Respondents had. Specifically, CyberAds' disclosures included representations that it had already issued a specific number of shares in exchange for the interest in the LLC.[14/] Although Respondents were aware of information to the contrary, Respondents failed to follow up on or resolve the discrepancy between that information and the disclosures.

Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is dually quoted on the Pink Sheets and the OTC Bulletin Board. Nova's 2003 financial statements disclosed that it was in the business of acquiring ownership interests in developing companies in a wide range of industries and providing financing and managerial assistance to those companies. At all relevant times, Nova was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

17. The Firm was engaged as Nova's independent auditor beginning for fiscal year 1999. The Firm issued an audit report dated April 10, 2004, that was included in Nova's 2003 Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on May 14, 2004, in which the Firm expressed an unqualified opinion on Nova's financial statements for 2003.[17/] This audit report stated that Nova's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Nova's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP.

Advances Receivable

18. Nova's 2003 balance sheet included an asset titled "advances receivable" of $513,506, which represented more than 85% of Nova's total assets. Nova disclosed that the receivable resulted from it advancing funds to another party for cash flow purposes and that the advances were unsecured, non-interest bearing, and payable on demand. Nova reported the full value of the advances as a receivable and did not accrue any loss or disclose any contingency related to the collectibility of the receivable.

19. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to determine whether Nova's disclosures concerning the advanced funds were accurate and adequate. In addition, Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures to evaluate the collectibility of the receivable.[18/] Respondents' procedures were limited to obtaining uncorroborated representations from management and reviewing an interim balance sheet of the other party, which reflected cash of $2,174, current assets of $48,191, current liabilities of $1,508,915, and a $203,875 line item titled "Out-Of-Balance." This audit evidence was insufficient to support an opinion that the $513,506 was properly reported as a receivable.

Reclassification of Liability

20. Nova's 2002 financial statements reflected a liability of $736,427 described as a note payable and accrued interest due to another party. Nova's 2003 financial statements reclassified this obligation, now valued at $753,927, as equity. Specifically, Nova's consolidated statement of changes in stockholders' deficit reflected

21. Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures to be able to evaluate whether this reclassification complied with GAAP.[20/] Respondents were aware of evidence, including a board resolution, indicating that before the other party would release Nova from its obligation, it required consideration in addition to the issuance of Nova's common stock, and it also required satisfaction of certain conditions. Other than uncorroborated management representations, however, Respondents had no basis for concluding that the conditions to extinguish the liability had been satisfied as of December 31, 2003. Respondents, therefore, had an inadequate basis for an audit opinion that the reclassification of the liability complied with GAAP.

Payable to Related Party

22. Nova's 2003 financial statements reported a related party payable in the amount of $760,905, or approximately 43 percent of total reported liabilities. The financial statement footnotes described the payable as "due to a company related to the president of the Company. The advances are unsecured, non-interest bearing, and due on demand however, this company has agreed not to demand repayment before April 2005."[21/]

23. Respondents failed to exercise due professional care and professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter related to the nature of the reported related party payable. Nova's 2003 Form 10-KSB disclosed the existence of

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Deloitte & Touche LLP, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No.105-2007-005 December 10, 2007

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Deloitte & Touche LLP ("Deloitte," or "Respondent"), imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000,000, and requiring Respondent to undertake certain actions. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the 2003 financial statements of one issuer client.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent.

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Deloitte is a public accounting firm organized as a limited liability partnership under the laws of the State of Delaware and headquartered in New York City. Respondent has offices in multiple locations, including San Diego, California, and is licensed by, among others, the California Board of Accountancy (license no. 6515). Respondent is registered with the Board under Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. Its public company audit practice includes over 800 audit partners and more than 8,000 other audit professionals.

B. Summary

2. This matter concerns Deloitte's violations of certain PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of Ligand Pharmaceuticals Incorporated ("Ligand" or "the Company") for 2003 and the improper issuance by Deloitte of a standard report expressing the opinion that these financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Ligand's financial position in conformity with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP"). Deloitte assigned final responsibility for its Ligand audit engagements to the same partner (the "Engagement Partner") beginning with its review for the third quarter of 2000 through its review for the first quarter of 2004. Beginning in the summer of 2003 and continuing into 2004, certain members of Deloitte's management became aware of facts and circumstances that raised serious questions about the Engagement Partner's competence and proficiency as an auditor. Various Deloitte partners, including partners at the practice office level, at the regional management level, at Deloitte's national office and within its quality assurance group each were aware of certain of these facts and circumstances before Deloitte issued its report on Ligand's financial statements for 2003. During this period, Deloitte determined that the Engagement Partner should not be assigned to public company audit engagements and that he should resign from the firm. Despite these determinations and, as discussed below, the assessment that the 2003 Ligand audit presented "greater than normal" risk, Deloitte left the Engagement Partner in charge of the engagement without taking appropriate and timely steps under the circumstances to assure that the audit was performed in accordance with applicable PCAOB rules and professional standards.

3. As discussed in more detail below, Deloitte failed to exercise due professional care in the performance of the audit and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support the opinion expressed in the audit report. Deloitte failed to perform appropriate and adequate audit procedures related to the revenue reported by Ligand for sales of products for which a right of return existed. Deloitte failed to perform procedures that adequately took into account the existence of various factors documented in the audit work papers that indicated Ligand's ability to make reasonable estimates of product returns may have been impaired. These factors included Ligand's limited historical return experience, Ligand's limited visibility into its distribution channels, and periodic significant increases in, or excess levels of product in, Ligand's distribution channels. Moreover, in evaluating the reasonableness of Ligand's estimates of future returns, Deloitte failed to perform procedures that adequately took into account the extent to which the audit evidence indicated Ligand had consistently and substantially underestimated its product returns. Deloitte failed to perform or failed to perform adequately certain relevant planned procedures that were required by PCAOB auditing standards and incorporated into Deloitte's written audit plan. Deloitte also failed to identify and appropriately address a material departure from GAAP resulting from Ligand's policy of excluding certain types of returns from its estimates of future returns and the omission from Ligand's financial statements of any disclosure of this accounting policy.[2/]

[2/] More than a year after the 2003 Ligand audit, Ligand announced that it would restate its financial statements for 2003 and other periods because its recognition of revenue from product sales upon shipment was not in accordance with GAAP. See Ligand's Form 8-K, filed May 20, 2005, at Exhibit 99.1. In restating for 2003, Ligand recognized approximately $59 million less in revenues from product sales than originally recognized in that year (a decrease of approximately 52 percent), and reported a net loss more than 2.5 times the net loss originally reported. See Ligand's Form 10-K for the year ending December 31, 2004, filed November 18, 2005, which reflects adjustments for earlier periods. At the same time, Ligand restated the revenues and net loss reported in its 2002 financial statements, which Deloitte had also audited, and in quarterly reports in 2003 and 2004, which Deloitte had reviewed.

C. Deloitte Failed to Comply With Certain PCAOB Auditing Standards

4. Ligand is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware with headquarters in San Diego. Its common stock is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and is listed on the NASDAQ Stock Market LLC. Ligand's public filings disclose that, at all times relevant to this matter, it was in the business of discovering, developing, and marketing pharmaceutical drugs. At all relevant times, Ligand was an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). As of June 30, 2004, the end of the last reporting period for which Deloitte served as its auditor, Ligand disclosed that its market capitalization was approximately $1.27 billion.

5. Deloitte was Ligand's independent auditor from October 31, 2000, until its resignation effective August 5, 2004. In an audit report dated March 10, 2004, Deloitte expressed an unqualified opinion on Ligand's consolidated balance sheets as of December 31, 2003 and 2002, and the related consolidated statements of operations, stockholders' equity (deficit), and cash flows for each of the three years in the period ended December 31, 2003. Deloitte's audit report stated that, in the firm's opinion, the Company's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the Company's financial position in conformity with GAAP.

6. Deloitte's audit engagements for Ligand were performed by personnel located in its San Diego office. Deloitte's audit personnel included the Engagement Partner, a concurring review partner, an advisory partner, an audit manager, an audit senior and other staff auditors, each of whom was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i) at all relevant times. Deloitte's San Diego office audit practice was under the supervision of a Managing Partner for Audit and Enterprise Risk Services (the "San Diego Audit Managing Partner"), who reported to the Regional Managing Partner for Audit and Enterprise Risk Services for Deloitte's Pacific Southwest Region ("Regional Audit Managing Partner"), located in Los Angeles, California, and who in turn reported to the National Managing Partner of Audit and Enterprise Risk Services ("National Audit Managing Partner"), located in New York City. In addition, Deloitte's Professional Practice Director for its San Diego office ("San Diego Office PPD") was responsible for concurring in the assignment of engagement partners and for monitoring compliance with Deloitte's audit policies and procedures.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Deloitte Failed to Staff the 2003 Ligand Audit Engagement Appropriately

7. PCAOB rules require that registered public accounting firms and their associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[3/] Among other things, PCAOB auditing standards require that auditors "be assigned to tasks and supervised commensurate with their level of knowledge, skill and ability so that they can evaluate the audit evidence they are examining."[4/] The auditor with final responsibility for the audit should know, at a minimum, the relevant professional accounting and auditing standards and should be knowledgeable about the client.[5/] Deloitte failed to staff the 2003 Ligand audit engagement in accordance with these requirements.

8. Deloitte assigned responsibility for the conduct of all audit professional services for each of its audits and reviews for Ligand through the quarter ended March 31, 2004, to the Engagement Partner, whom Deloitte designated as its "Lead Client Service Partner," or "Engagement Partner." The responsibilities Deloitte assigned to the Engagement Partner in this role were set forth in Deloitte's Accounting and Auditing Practice Manual Series (the "AAPMS") which stated, among other things, that:

> It is the responsibility of the Engagement Partner to form the audit opinion, or to disclaim an opinion, on the financial statements. The Firm delegates to the Engagement Partner the necessary authority to fulfill that role….
> The Engagement Partner has the final responsibility for the planning and performance of the audit engagement, including the assignment, on-the-job training, and audit work of professional staff, and the implementation of decisions concerning matters that have been the subject of consultation.…
> The knowledge and skills of an Engagement Partner should be matched with the needs and characteristics of the engagement.

The Engagement Partner led Deloitte's audit engagement team, had final responsibility for the audit as that phrase is used in AU § 311, Planning and Supervision, and authorized the issuance of the March 10, 2004, audit report.

ORDER

9. Deloitte's policies and procedures further provided that, particularly where audit engagement risk is assessed as greater than normal, the firm needed to ensure that the partners assigned to the audit engagement possessed the requisite skills and experience. Deloitte assessed the engagement risk for its 2002 and 2003 Ligand audit engagements as greater than normal.

10. Months before Deloitte issued its audit report for the 2003 Ligand audit engagement, certain members of Deloitte's management became aware of facts and circumstances that began to raise serious questions about the Engagement Partner's competence and proficiency as an auditor. These developments led certain members of Deloitte's management first to conclude that the Engagement Partner should be removed from public company audit engagements and ultimately to seek the Engagement Partner's resignation from the firm.

11. During the summer of 2003, Deloitte conducted an internal practice office review that included its San Diego practice office and selected one of the Engagement Partner's public company audits for review ("Engagement A"). Deloitte's personnel who conducted this review were critical of the Engagement Partner's work and relayed their concerns to the San Diego Office PPD, the Regional Audit Managing Partner and Deloitte's national office. Also in the summer of 2003, another of Deloitte's issuer audit clients that was assigned to the Engagement Partner ("Engagement B") was placed into Deloitte's Risk Management Program, which was administered by Deloitte's National Office Quality Assurance Group in Wilton, Connecticut.

12. By the fall of 2003, certain members of Deloitte's management were suggesting that the Engagement Partner be removed from his public company audit engagements. In a meeting in or around October 2003, the San Diego Audit Managing Partner informed the Engagement Partner of the concerns about his work. Nevertheless, Deloitte allowed the Engagement Partner to remain in charge of the Ligand engagement until May 2004, without any significant additional supervision or resources.

13. In February 2004, a partner responsible for Deloitte's risk management program (the "Risk Management Partner") communicated certain concerns about the Engagement Partner's work on Engagement B directly to the Regional Audit Managing Partner. Shortly after this communication, the Regional Audit Managing Partner reported the Risk Management Partner's concerns to the National Audit Managing Partner. The Regional Audit Managing Partner also communicated these concerns to the San Diego Audit Managing Partner, who in turn informed the Engagement Partner that he was perceived as a quality risk and counseled the Engagement Partner to resign from the firm.

14. On March 5, 2004, the San Diego Audit Managing Partner and the Regional Audit Managing Partner met with the Engagement Partner. The Regional Audit Managing Partner drafted an e-mail message to the National Audit Managing Partner summarizing the discussion at the meeting and efforts underway to counsel the Engagement Partner to resign from the firm and the reasons for doing so. Among the reasons given were the views of certain members of Deloitte's management that the Engagement Partner did not have the skills to adequately supervise public company engagements and other engagements with above-average risk profiles, and that the Engagement Partner was not suited to handling complex or risky engagements. The Regional Audit Managing Partner recommended that the National Audit Managing Partner consider an arrangement under which the firm would immediately begin to transition the Engagement Partner's clients and the Engagement Partner would resign from the firm.

15. PCAOB quality control standards emphasize the "significant responsibilities" of individuals who are responsible for supervising audit engagements and signing or authorizing the issuance of audit reports.[6/] PCAOB quality control standards further require firms to establish policies and procedures that "provide reasonable assurance that a practitioner-in-charge of an engagement possesses the competencies necessary to fulfill his or her engagement responsibilities."[7/] Deloitte's

As a result, despite the conclusions reached by Deloitte's management personnel about the Engagement Partner's competence and proficiency as an auditor, Deloitte left the Engagement Partner in charge of the 2003 Ligand audit without taking appropriate steps to assure that the audit was performed in accordance with applicable PCAOB rules and professional standards.[8/] product to their customers, including retail outlets such as pharmacies and prescribing facilities such as hospitals. In its 2003 financial statements, Ligand disclosed that it recognized revenue upon product delivery, net of allowances for, among other things, product returns. To evaluate whether Ligand's recognition of revenue upon product delivery complied with GAAP, Deloitte was required to assess, among other things, whether Ligand had the ability to make reasonable estimates of future product returns. Without this ability, companies that sell products with a right of return cannot, consistent with GAAP, recognize revenue from these sales until the right of return substantially expires or a reasonable estimate of the returns can be made.[12/]

As documented in the audit work papers, Deloitte assessed the engagement risk for the 2003 Ligand audit as greater than normal "due to events related to product sales and sales returns."[13/] Deloitte's audit personnel planned to perform "focused procedures" and to increase their professional skepticism to address this risk. As described below, Deloitte's audit personnel either failed to perform certain of the planned procedures or performed them without the due care and professional skepticism required by PCAOB standards.

Various factors, such as the newness of a product, lack of actual return history, limited visibility into distribution channels, and significant increases in or excess levels of inventory in a distribution channel, may impair an issuer's ability to make reasonable estimates of future product returns.[14/] In Ligand's case, Deloitte's audit personnel documented the existence of each of these factors but did not adequately analyze whether they impaired Ligand's ability to make reasonable estimates of returns.

evaluate the reasonableness of Ligand's estimates of future returns were not performed, were not performed with the due care and professional skepticism required by PCAOB standards, or generated audit evidence suggesting that Ligand's estimates of future returns were not reasonable. Deloitte's audit personnel did not adequately address the significant disparities between historical actual returns and Ligand's estimate of future returns. They also failed to compare Ligand's prior return estimates with subsequent results,[16/] even though this procedure was part of the audit plan and the audit work papers showed that Ligand had consistently and substantially underestimated its product returns. The audit plan provided for the evaluation of subsequent events to be performed before the audit report was issued. But the evaluation performed by Deloitte's audit personnel failed adequately to consider returns through completion of the audit.[17/]

21. According to the audit work papers, when Ligand learned in 2002 that one of its wholesalers was holding product nearing expiration and intended to make substantial returns, Ligand agreed to replace the returned product with new product at no additional charge. The work papers reflect that similar incidents occurred during 2003 and that Ligand's position was that it would replace product held by wholesalers that was approaching expiration with new product having a later expiration date (Ligand's "Replacement Policy"). According to the work papers, returns from such transactions during 2002 and 2003 totaled more than $17 million, or ten percent of the net product sales revenue Ligand originally reported during the same period. Deloitte's audit personnel understood that Ligand that did not treat such transactions as returns in Ligand had experienced significant, unexpected product returns during the period and that one or more wholesalers were returning a significant amount of product that was not included in the distribution channel data relied upon during the audit. PCAOB standards required Deloitte to consider whether this information would have affected the audit report had Deloitte known about it at the report date and whether persons currently relying or likely to rely on the financial statements would attach importance to the information.[24/] Deloitte's audit personnel did not address this issue adequately, relying on an analysis that was known to be incomplete, and inappropriately relying on management representations to conclude that Ligand's failure to make reasonable estimates of product returns did not cause Ligand's 2003 financial statements to be materially misstated.

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000,000 is imposed. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of James L. Fazio, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No.105-2007-006 December 10, 2007

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is barring James L. Fazio ("Respondent") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the 2003 financial statements of one issuer client.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent.

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

[1/] Fazio may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Fazio, 46, of San Diego, California, is a certified public accountant licensed by the California Board of Accountancy (Certificate No. CPA 51182). At all relevant times, he was a partner in the San Diego, California office of the registered public accounting firm of Deloitte & Touche LLP ("Deloitte") and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Respondent Failed to Comply with Certain PCAOB Auditing Standards in Auditing the Financial Statements of Ligand Pharmaceuticals Incorporated for 2003

Summary

2. This matter concerns Respondent's failure to perform appropriate and adequate audit procedures related to the revenue reported by Ligand Pharmaceuticals Incorporated ("Ligand" or "the Company") with respect to sales of products for which a right of return existed, and his failure to supervise others adequately to ensure the performance of such procedures. Respondent neither performed nor ensured the performance of procedures that adequately took into account the existence of various factors indicating that Ligand's ability to make reasonable estimates of product returns may have been impaired, such as Ligand's limited historical return experience, Ligand's limited visibility into its distribution channels, and periodic significant increases in, or excess levels of product in, Ligand's distribution channels. Moreover, in evaluating the reasonableness of Ligand's estimates of future returns, Respondent neither performed nor ensured the performance of procedures that adequately took into account the extent to which Ligand had consistently and substantially underestimated its product returns. In auditing Ligand's reported revenue, Respondent failed to evaluate these factors with the due care and professional skepticism required under the circumstances. He also did not identify and appropriately address issues concerning Ligand's policy of excluding certain types of returns from its estimates of future returns and the adequacy of Ligand's disclosure of this accounting policy.[3/]

The 2003 Ligand Audit

3. Ligand is a Delaware corporation based in San Diego. Its common stock is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and is listed on the NASDAQ Stock Market LLC. Ligand's public filings disclose that, at all times relevant to this matter, it was in the business of discovering, developing, and marketing pharmaceutical drugs. At all relevant times, Ligand was an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

4. Deloitte was Ligand's independent auditor from October 31, 2000, until it resigned effective August 5, 2004. Respondent was the engagement partner for each of Deloitte's audits and reviews of Ligand's financial statements through the quarter ended March 31, 2004. In an audit report dated March 10, 2004, Deloitte expressed an unqualified opinion on Ligand's consolidated balance sheets as of December 31, 2003 and 2002, and the related consolidated statements of operations, stockholders' equity

[3/] More than a year after the 2003 Ligand audit, Ligand announced that it would restate its financial statements for 2003 and other periods because its recognition of revenue from product sales upon shipment was not in accordance with GAAP. See Ligand's Form 8-K, filed May 20, 2005, at Exhibit 99.1. In restating for 2003, Ligand recognized approximately $59 million less in revenues from product sales than originally reported (a decrease of approximately 52 percent), and reported a net loss more than 2.5 times the net loss originally recognized in that year. See Ligand's Form 10-K for the year ending December 31, 2004, filed November 18, 2005, which reflects adjustments for earlier periods. At the same time, Ligand restated the revenues and net loss reported in its 2002 financial statements, which Respondent had also audited, and in quarterly reports in 2003 and 2004, which Respondent had reviewed.

(deficit), and cash flows for each of the three years in the period ended December 31, 2003. Deloitte's audit report stated that the Company's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the Company's financial position in conformity with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP"). Respondent led Deloitte's audit engagement team, had final responsibility for the audit as that phrase is used in AU § 311, Planning and Supervision, and authorized the issuance of the March 10, 2004, audit report.

5. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that associated persons of registered public accounting firms comply with the Board's auditing standards.[4/] Under these standards, an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[5/] Among other things, these standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements, evaluate subsequent events, and supervise assistants.[6/] Respondent failed to comply with these standards in connection with the audit on which the March 10, 2004, audit report was based (the "2003 Ligand audit").

6. At the time of the 2003 Ligand audit, Deloitte's written policies and procedures required engagement risk to be assessed annually as normal, greater than normal, or much greater than normal. The engagement team assessed the engagement risk for the 2003 Ligand audit as greater than normal. As documented in the audit work papers, the elevated risk assessment was "due to events related to product sales and sales returns." Among other things, the engagement team noted that in some instances management's estimates regarding sales returns and reserves had not been sufficient to cover the actual returns that were processed. In response to the elevated risk, the written audit plan called for the engagement team to perform "focused procedures" and increase their professional skepticism to address the specifically identified risk associated with Ligand's estimates of future returns. In several respects, however, Respondent failed to perform necessary audit procedures adequately or to ensure that they were adequately performed by others under his supervision.

Respondent Did Not Adequately Assess Whether Ligand Had the Ability to Reasonably Estimate Future Product Returns

7. According to Ligand's public filings, in 1999 and 2000 Ligand began selling four oncology products: ONTAK, Panretin Gel ("P-Gel"), Targretin Capsules ("T-Caps"), and Targretin Gel ("T-Gel"). Ligand began selling a fifth product, a pain medication called AVINZA, in the second quarter of 2002. Ligand sold most of its products to three large wholesalers, who in turn sold the product to hospitals, pharmacies, and other retailers. Ligand's 2003 financial statements disclosed that it recognized revenue upon product delivery, net of allowances for, among other things, product returns.

8. To evaluate whether Ligand's recognition of revenue upon product delivery complied with GAAP, Respondent needed to assess, among other things, whether Ligand had the ability to make reasonable estimates of future product returns. Without this ability, companies that sell products with a right of return cannot, consistent with GAAP, recognize revenue from these sales until the right of return substantially expires or a reasonable estimate of the returns can be made.[7/] Various factors, such as the newness of a product, lack of actual return history, limited visibility into distribution channels, and significant increases in or excess levels of inventory in a distribution channel, may impair an issuer's ability to make reasonable estimates of future product returns.[8/] In Ligand's case, Respondent was aware of the existence of each of these factors but did not adequately analyze whether they impaired Ligand's ability to make reasonable estimates of returns. Consequently, Respondent did not have a sufficient basis to support the conclusion that Ligand's recognition of revenue upon product delivery was appropriate.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

9. First, Respondent knew Ligand had little historical experience upon which to base estimates of future returns. For example, Ligand did not begin receiving returns on its 2002 initial AVINZA shipments until the third quarter of 2003, and these AVINZA lots[9/] were not closed to returns until April 2004. Ligand also had limited historical return data for its oncology products. As of December 31, 2003, Ligand had complete return data for only a small number of closed lots for each oncology product.[10/]

10. Second, Respondent knew that Ligand had limited visibility into its distribution channels at all times relevant to the 2003 Ligand audit. For example, according to the audit work papers, Ligand experienced episodes of significant unexpected product returns in 2002 and 2003. Ligand attributed its failure to have anticipated those returns to incomplete or inaccurate data about the quantity and expiration dates of product not yet sold to end users and therefore remaining in its distribution channels.[11/]

11. Third, Respondent was aware of periodic significant increases in, and excess levels of product in, Ligand's distribution channels. Ligand regularly announced price increases in advance and offered wholesalers payment and other incentives before these increases took effect. This practice resulted in significant increases of product levels in Ligand's distribution channels at the end of Ligand's quarterly financial reporting periods. For example, the audit work papers show that during the fourth quarter of 2003, Ligand recorded gross product sales of $1.1 million, $3.3 million, and $43.4 million for the months of October, November, and December, respectively. Similar patterns were evident from prior period work papers. In addition, according to

9/ Ligand manufactured its products in lots, with each lot constituting product that was manufactured at the same time and that shared the same expiration date.

10/ Ligand generally shipped its products at least 12 months before expiration. Ligand generally permitted returns during a period beginning three or six months before the expiration date, depending on the product, and ending six months after the expiration date. As used in this Order, the term "closed lot" refers to a lot for which the return period had ended.

11/ As early as 2002, a Deloitte partner assigned to the Ligand audits in an advisory role informed Respondent and others that an analysis of the expiration date(s) of wholesalers' inventories was essential for Ligand to make a reasonable estimate of future product returns.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

the audit work papers, Ligand's policy was to maintain a six month's supply of inventory in its distribution channels. But Respondent had available to him information indicating that in many instances Ligand's distributors had more than six months' supply of product on hand, and in some instances, more than one year's supply.[12/] Respondent requested and received from Ligand explanations for Ligand's excess levels of channel inventory, but he improperly relied on these explanations without performing other audit procedures sufficient to evaluate them.[13/]

Respondent Did Not Adequately Evaluate the Reasonableness of Ligand's Estimates of Future Returns

12. Even if Ligand's policy of recognizing revenue upon product delivery had been consistent with GAAP, Respondent still needed to evaluate the appropriateness of the amount of revenue that Ligand recognized. When Ligand recognized the revenue on these transactions, GAAP required Ligand to accrue costs or losses that it expected in connection with returns and to reduce reported sales revenue and cost of sales to reflect the estimated returns.[14/] Accordingly, Respondent needed to evaluate the reasonableness of Ligand's return estimates, among other things, to assess the appropriateness of Ligand's reported revenue.[15/]

13. Under PCAOB standards, an auditor is responsible for, among other things, evaluating the reasonableness of accounting estimates made by management in the context of the financial statements taken as a whole,[16/] which normally should

[12/] In fact, the amount of product in Ligand's distribution channels was significantly more than that reflected in the information Ligand's management made available to Respondent at the time of the 2003 Ligand audit. See ¶ 18 below.

[13/] PCAOB standards provide that "representations from management are part of the evidential matter the independent auditor obtains, but they are not a substitute for the application of those auditing procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements under audit." include consideration of the issuer's historical experience in making past estimates.[17/] Respondent planned audit procedures to evaluate the reasonableness of Ligand's return estimates. Respondent failed to assure, however, that these procedures were performed with the due care and professional skepticism required by PCAOB standards, and he failed to assure that certain procedures were performed at all. The procedures that were performed generated audit evidence suggesting that Ligand's estimates of future returns were not reasonable, but, as described below, Respondent did not adequately analyze or follow up on that evidence.

14. The audit work papers indicate that in 2003, Ligand's estimates of future returns for its products at the time of sale ranged from 1.5 percent to five percent of gross sales, but the work papers also indicate that Ligand in fact experienced significantly higher actual return rates. For example, as of December 31, 2003, Ligand had experienced a 12 percent overall return rate on closed lots of T-Caps (with returns for individual closed lots ranging from three percent to 41 percent) and a 25 percent overall return rate on closed lots of T-Gel (with returns for individual closed lots ranging from seven percent to 54 percent). As of December 31, 2003, no AVINZA lots were yet closed to returns, but the audit work papers reflected that Ligand had already experienced a 13 percent overall return rate on AVINZA (with returns for one lot exceeding 20 percent), well above Ligand's initial 2.5 percent estimate of future returns. Despite this historical experience, in the fourth quarter of 2003 Ligand reduced its returns estimates for recently sold lots of AVINZA from 2.5 percent to 1.5 percent[18/] and reduced its estimate of future returns for one of its three open T-Gel lots from 16 percent to three percent.[19/]

[17/] See AU § 342.09 ("The auditor normally should consider the historical experience of the entity in making past estimates…."); AU § 342.06e ("Comparison of prior accounting estimates with subsequent results to assess the reliability of the process used to develop estimates" is a relevant aspect of internal control).

[18/] This change, standing alone, resulted in a reduction of Ligand's returns reserve equal to approximately 11 percent of Ligand's originally reported net income for the fourth quarter of 2003.

15. On various occasions the engagement team requested and received from Ligand explanations for why actual return rates on certain lots were so much higher than estimates of future returns. Some of these explanations were documented in the work papers, in some cases along with other contradictory audit evidence. Respondent improperly relied on these explanations without adequate investigation.[20/]

16. Although Respondent's audit plan for the 2003 Ligand audit provided for the performance of a "retrospective review" of prior period estimates, the engagement team did not perform this procedure.[21/] Respondent did not adequately address whether Ligand's estimates of future returns were reasonable in light of the actual product returns experienced. Respondent also failed to address incomplete and contradictory data about product returns that appeared in the audit work papers. For example, the audit work papers include an analysis by Ligand of the balance accrued for future returns as of December 31, 2003, that reflected December sales of AVINZA but did not reflect any December returns of the product. In addition, the audit work papers include a lot-by-lot analysis by Ligand of its December 2003 return reserve that reflected significantly lower actual returns (through November 2003) for three AVINZA lots than the supporting data contained in the audit work papers.

17. In addition, Respondent failed to evaluate adequately certain events that occurred after the December 31, 2003, balance sheet date, but before the issuance of the audit report, that provided additional evidence concerning the estimates of future returns.[22/] Ligand's actual returns data for January and February 2004, which were available before the March 10, 2004, issuance of the audit report, showed that by the end of February 2004 Ligand had already exceeded the December 31, 2003, accruals for future returns from 20 of 26 lots that were open for returns at year-end.[23/] Respondent, however, failed to assure that appropriate procedures to evaluate subsequent events were performed before the audit report was issued, even though the written audit plan specifically called for the performance of such procedures.

Respondent Did Not Adequately Address the Subsequent Discovery of Facts Existing at the Date of the Auditor's Report

18. In April 2004, during Deloitte's interim review of Ligand's financial statements for the first quarter of 2004, Respondent had available to him information about the significant January and February 2004 product returns described above. He also learned that one or more wholesalers were returning a significant amount of AVINZA that was not included in the distribution channel data relied upon during the audit. PCAOB standards required Respondent to consider whether this information would have affected the audit report had Respondent known about it at the report date and whether persons currently relying or likely to rely on the financial statements would attach importance to the information.[24/] As described below, Respondent did not address this issue adequately.

[22/] If events occurring after the balance sheet date provide additional evidence about conditions that existed at the balance sheet date and affect the estimates inherent in the process of preparing the financial statements, an auditor must evaluate the information. See AU § 560.02-.03, Subsequent Events.

[23/] In January and February alone, returns of each of the initial 2002 lots of AVINZA exceeded the initial 2.5 percent estimate, and for one lot, were as high as nine percent. January and February returns of a single T-Gel lot, which were estimated at 3 percent as of December 31, 2003, totaled 21 percent.

[24/] See AU § 561.05, Subsequent Discovery of Facts Existing at the Date of the Auditor's Report. If, after considering these two factors, an auditor concludes that action should be taken to prevent future reliance on the audit report, the auditor should take certain additional steps. See AU § 561.06-.09.

ORDER

19. During Deloitte's interim review of Ligand's financial statements for the first quarter of 2004, the engagement team performed a retrospective review to assess the adequacy of the December 31, 2003, returns reserve. According to the work papers documenting this procedure, the engagement team "compared the sum of total returns as of 12/31/03 and estimated future returns as of 12/31/03, by product, to total returns [actually received] as of 3/31/04 for lots without any shipments in Q1." Based on this retrospective review, Respondent concluded that Ligand was under-reserved for product returns by $520,190, comprised of an under-reserve of $1,376,716 for AVINZA and an over-reserve of $856,526 for the oncology products. This analysis, however, was significantly flawed.

20. According to the audit work papers, the engagement team's retrospective review assumed Ligand would receive no additional returns after March 31, 2004, for the lots reviewed, even though other audit work papers reflected that Ligand was, at the time of the retrospective review, projecting $1,381,245 in post-March 31 returns for these same lots. Although the work papers acknowledged the impact of this assumption on the retrospective review, Respondent inappropriately relied on this assumption in reaching his conclusions. The work papers also reflect, without explanation, that the retrospective review excluded available information about certain product lots for which Ligand received significant returns during the first quarter of 2004. The returns received from the excluded lots and the post-March 31 returns Ligand was then projecting appeared elsewhere in the work papers. Had the retrospective review reflected this information, it would have shown that Ligand's returns reserve as of December 31, 2003, was understated not by $520,190 but rather by more than $3.1 million. The larger amount was equal to 66 percent of Ligand's returns reserve as of December 31, 2003. It equaled approximately 53 percent of Ligand's originally reported net income for the fourth quarter of 2003 and approximately 8.5 percent of its originally reported net loss for the year.

21. Moreover, even with respect to Respondent's inadequately supported conclusion that the extent of Ligand's under-reserve for product returns was $520,190, Respondent did not take appropriate further steps. Instead, Respondent relied on Ligand's representations that it had approximately $500,000 in other unused reserves that largely offset the under-reserve for product returns. On this basis, Respondent concluded that the under-reserve for product returns did not cause Ligand's 2003 financial statements to be materially misstated.

PCAOB

Respondent Did Not Identify and Appropriately Address Issues Concerning Ligand's Exclusion of Certain Types of Returns from its Estimates of Future Returns

22. According to the audit work papers, when Ligand learned in 2002 that one of its wholesalers intended to make substantial returns, Ligand agreed to replace the returned product with new product at no additional charge. The work papers reflect that similar incidents occurred during 2003 and that Ligand's position was that it would replace product held by wholesalers that was approaching expiration with new product having a later expiration date. Returns from such transactions during 2002 and 2003 combined totaled more than $17 million, or ten percent of the net product sales revenue Ligand originally reported during the same period. Ligand did not treat such transactions as returns in accordance with SFAS No. 48[25/] and did not reduce revenue recognized at the time of sale by an estimate of future returns from such transactions.[26/] Respondent failed to identify and appropriately address this apparent departure from GAAP.[27/]

23. In addition, Ligand did not disclose its accounting policy concerning such transactions in its financial statements. GAAP provides that "all significant accounting policies of the reporting entity should be included as an integral part of the financial statements."[28/] In particular "the disclosure should encompass important judgments as

This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), James L. Fazio is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i); and

B. After two years from the date of this Order, Mr. Fazio may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Ann Marie Fitzpatrick, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2007-007 December 14, 2007

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Ann Marie Fitzpatrick, CPA. The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and standards in connection with alterations of audit documentation relating to one audit.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Ann Marie Fitzpatrick ("Fitzpatrick" or "Respondent").

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over her and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Fitzpatrick, 36, of Vorhees, New Jersey, is a certified public accountant licensed by the Pennsylvania State Board of Accountancy (license no. CA034382L). At all times relevant to these proceedings, Fitzpatrick was an audit manager in the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania office of BDO Seidman, LLP ("BDO"), a registered public accounting firm, and an associated person of BDO, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). She voluntarily resigned from BDO in February 2006.

B. Respondent Violated PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3

2. In the late fall of 2004, Fitzpatrick was assigned as the manager for BDO's audit of the financial statements of Hemispherx Biopharma, Inc. ("Hemispherx") for the fiscal year ("FY") ended December 31, 2004. At all times relevant to these proceedings, Hemispherx, a Delaware corporation whose common stock is registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

3. Fitzpatrick was assigned to the Hemispherx FY 2004 audit by the BDO partner in charge of that engagement (the "Engagement Partner"). At all times relevant to these proceedings, the Engagement Partner was a partner in BDO's Philadelphia office, where he also served as the Practice Office Assurance Director. In the latter role, the Engagement Partner was responsible for, among other things, providing technical guidance to other partners and managers on audit engagements, coordinating the office's quality control activities, and overseeing the scheduling and assignment of audit personnel to audit engagements. At all times relevant to these proceedings, the Engagement Partner also directly supervised most of the audit managers and senior managers in the Philadelphia office, including Fitzpatrick. He also influenced promotion decisions affecting managers and other Philadelphia office audit personnel.

4. After Fitzpatrick completed the planning phase of the Hemispherx FY 2004 audit, the Engagement Partner directed her to cease all work on that audit so that she could concentrate her efforts on another larger engagement also supervised by the Engagement Partner. Following the Engagement Partner's direction, Fitzpatrick stopped all work on the Hemispherx audit. After Fitzpatrick ceased working on the engagement, she neither supervised nor reviewed any of the work performed by more junior members of the engagement team. The field work on the Hemispherx audit was completed by an audit senior without the supervision of an audit manager.

5. In the absence of an audit manager on the engagement, the work performed by the audit senior and other BDO staff was never subjected to a detailed review as required by BDO policy. For public audit engagements, BDO's Assurance Manual and Quality Control ("QC") Manual required, among other things, that a detailed review be completed before the audit report is released. The detailed review, which was required to include a review of all work papers, was intended to, among other things, ensure compliance with PCAOB auditing standards, generally accepted accounting principles, and BDO policies. The detailed review was required to be performed by either the engagement partner or manager provided that he or she does not review work that is primarily his or her own.

6. The Engagement Partner authorized issuance of BDO's audit report on Hemispherx's FY 2004 financial statements on March 16, 2005, and that report was included with the company's Form 10-K filed that day with the Commission. Thereafter, the audit senior on the engagement assembled a final set of audit documentation for retention and caused the audit documentation to be archived on or about May 1, 2005. At the time the audit senior completed the archiving, however, neither Fitzpatrick, nor the Engagement Partner, nor anyone else had done the detailed review required by BDO's policy, nor had Fitzpatrick initialed or signed the work papers to indicate that a detailed review had occurred.

7. BDO's Philadelphia office was scheduled for a weeklong internal inspection of selected audit engagements beginning on Monday, August 15, 2005. The inspection was pursuant to BDO QC policies and procedures requiring formal inspections ("QC Inspections") of local office audit practices on a rotating basis The QC Inspections were conducted by a review team ("QC reviewers") consisting of BDO partners from other offices of the firm. The purposes of the QC Inspections were, among other things, to determine the quality of work performed, to assess compliance with PCAOB auditing standards, generally accepted accounting principles, and BDO policy, to correct any identified deviations, and to provide recommendations for improvement. This was accomplished by reviewing, on a sample basis, the work papers and reports of selected audit and other engagements.

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

8. On Thursday, August 11, 2005, the Engagement Partner learned that the Hemispherx FY 2004 financial statement audit was among the engagements selected for the QC Inspection. Fitzpatrick, who had been on vacation the previous week, returned to the office the morning of Monday, August 15, 2005, the first day of the QC Inspection. Soon after Fitzpatrick arrived, the Engagement Partner entered her office and directed her to initial and sign the Hemispherx FY 2004 financial statement audit work papers to indicate that she had performed a timely detailed review. Fitzpatrick at first protested that she could not sign off as the detailed reviewer because she did not perform the work and could not address questions and issues that might be raised by the QC reviewers. Ultimately, however, Fitzpatrick acceded to the Engagement Partner's direction and affixed her initials and signatures to the Hemispherx audit work papers, which had been tabbed to indicate where initials and signatures were missing. She backdated her initials and signatures to dates preceding the March 16, 2005 issuance of BDO's audit report.

PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3

9. BDO's audit of Hemispherx's FY 2004 financial statements was subject to PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS No. 3"). AS No. 3 requires auditors to "document the procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached with respect to relevant financial statement assertions."[2/] Audit documentation must clearly demonstrate that the work was in fact performed.[3/] Audit documentation must contain sufficient information to enable an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with the engagement, to understand the nature, timing, extent, and results of the procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached, and to determine who performed the work and the date such work was completed, as well as the person who reviewed the work and the date of such review.[4/]

10. AS No. 3 additionally provides that a complete and final set of audit documentation should be assembled for retention as of a date not more than 45 days after the report release date (i.e., the "documentation completion date").[5/] In circumstances that may require additions to audit documentation after the report release date, "[a]udit documentation must not be deleted or discarded after the documentation completion date, however, information may be added. Any documentation added must indicate the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it."[6/]

11. In August 2005, three months after the Hemispherx FY 2004 audit work papers had been finalized for retention, Fitzpatrick, at the Engagement Partner's direction, altered the work papers by entering initials and signatures to falsely indicate that she had performed a timely detailed review. Fitzpatrick backdated her initials and signatures to dates preceding issuance of the audit report on March 16, 2005, failed to indicate that her initials and signatures were added in August 2005, and failed to explain why her initials and signatures were added in August 2005. This had the purpose and effect of leaving an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with the engagement (in this case, the BDO QC reviewer who reviewed the work papers in the course of a QC Inspection) with a false understanding of the nature, timing, and extent of the review procedures employed in the audit, and a false impression that Fitzpatrick had completed a timely detailed review of the work performed by more junior members of the engagement team. As a result of the foregoing, Fitzpatrick violated AS No. 3.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanction agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Ann Marie Fitzpatrick, CPA is censured.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Kantor, Geisler & Oppenheimer, P.A., Steven M. Kantor, CPA, and Thomas E. Sewell, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2007-009 December 14, 2007

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Kantor, Geisler & Oppenheimer, P.A. (formerly known as Kantor, Sewell & Oppenheimer, P.A.) and barring Thomas E. Sewell and Steven M. Kantor, CPA, from being associated persons of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning the respondents' violations of PCAOB rules, PCAOB auditing standards and independence standards, and federal securities laws in connection with the audits of the financial statements of two issuer clients from 2003 to 2005.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Kantor, Geisler & Oppenheimer, P.A. (the "Firm" or "KGO"), Steven M. Kantor, CPA ("Kantor"), and Thomas E. Sewell ("Sewell") (collectively, "Respondents").

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Kantor, Geisler & Oppenheimer, P.A. (formerly known as Kantor, Sewell & Oppenheimer, P.A.) is a public accounting firm located in Hollywood, Florida. At all relevant times, KGO was licensed under the laws of the state of Florida to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. AD63278).[3/] KGO is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

2. Sewell, 63, was a partner in KGO with a 47.5 percent ownership interest at all relevant times. He was licensed under the laws of the state of Florida as a certified public accountant (License No. AC0003739) until September 2005 when his license was revoked.[4/] At all relevant times, he was an associated person of KGO as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of "intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard."

[3/] KGO's license expired as of December 31, 2005.

[4/] In 2004, Sewell was convicted of conspiracy to commit mail fraud and for filing false tax returns. As a result of his involvement in a scheme leading to his conviction, which is unrelated to the findings of this Order, Sewell's CPA license was

3. Kantor, 54, licensed under the laws of the state of Florida as a certified public accountant (License No. AC0016410), was, at all relevant times, a partner in KGO with a 47.5 percent ownership interest and an associated person of KGO as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Kantor served as KGO's managing partner during the relevant period.

B. Summary

4. This matter involves violations of the Board's independence and auditing standards as well as certain violations of the Exchange Act. Specifically, in connection with audits of the financial statements of IWT Tesoro Corporation, KGO and Sewell failed to comply with independence requirements (relating to investments), failed to perform or reasonably to ensure the performance of sufficient audit procedures related to reported fixed assets, and failed to identify or appropriately address a departure from generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP") related to accounting for stock options issued to employees, and Kantor prepared false audit documentation. In connection with one audit of the financial statements of GeneThera, Inc., KGO and Sewell failed to comply with independence requirements (relating to prohibited activities) and failed to perform or reasonably to ensure the performance of sufficient audit procedures related to the client's reported fixed assets and its accounting for the forgiveness of a liability. KGO also violated Section 10A(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act")[5/] and PCAOB standards by failing to take certain steps when it became aware of information indicating that an illegal act by GeneThera may have occurred.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Professional Standards

5. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards, including independence standards.[6/] Under the Board's auditing standards, an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[7/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor maintain independence from its clients, exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements, and prepare appropriate audit documentation.[8/] Section 10A(g) of the Exchange Act prohibits a registered public accounting firm from providing certain bookkeeping services for an audit client. Finally, Section 10A(b) of the Exchange Act and PCAOB standards require such a firm to take certain steps when it detects or otherwise becomes aware of information indicating that an illegal act may have occurred. As described below, each Respondent violated one or more of these requirements.

Audit of IWT Tesoro Corporation's Initial 2003 Financial Statements

6. IWT Tesoro Corporation ("IWT") is a Nevada corporation with business operations in Florida and elsewhere and executive offices in Connecticut. Its common stock is registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and is dually quoted on the Pink Sheets and the OTC Bulletin Board. IWT's public filings disclose that its primary business is as a wholesale distributor of building materials, specifically ceramic tiles used for floor and wall coverings. At all relevant times, IWT was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

7. KGO was engaged as IWT's auditor beginning in December 2003. KGO issued an audit report dated January 23, 2004 that was included in IWT's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on March 30, 2004. The report indicated it was issued by an independent auditor, and it expressed an unqualified audit opinion on IWT's consolidated financial statements for 2003 and 2002. The report stated that IWT's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, IWT's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP. In addition, the report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards ("GAAS").[9/] Sewell was the engagement partner who had final responsibility for the audit.

Independence

8. PCAOB rules require registered public accounting firms and associated persons to comply with the Board's interim auditing standards and interim independence standards in connection with an audit, including standards that require independence from an audit client.[10/] Those standards provide, among other things, that independence is impaired when an individual participating on the engagement team has knowledge that a close relative, including a parent, has a financial interest in the client that is material to that relative.[11/]

[9/] Respondents were required to conduct the audit in accordance with the PCAOB's interim auditing standards pursuant to PCAOB Rule 3200T, which took effect on April 25, 2003. However, at the time Respondents performed the audit, the PCAOB's interim auditing standards were the same as GAAS as it existed on April 16, 2003, and, until PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 1 ("AS No. 1") took effect on May 24, 2004, it remained appropriate for auditors to refer to GAAS in their audit reports. Accordingly, although the reference to GAAS in KGO's audit report for IWT Tesoro Corporation was appropriate at the time, the standards pursuant to which the audit was required to be performed were PCAOB standards, and that is how they are referred to in this Order.

[10/] See PCAOB Rules 3100, 3200T (incorporating requirements of certain AICPA auditing standards as in existence on April 16, 2003, including AU § 220, Independence), and 3600T (incorporating requirements of certain AICPA independence standards as in existence on April 16, 2003, including ET § 101.01, Independence, and interpretations thereunder).

[11/] ET § 101.02 (Interpretation 101-1), Application of the Independence Rules to Close Relatives. As ET § 101.02 existed on April 16, 2003, "close relative" was a term defined (in ET § 92.04) to encompass, among other things, a parent.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

9. At the time of KGO's audit of IWT's 2003 financial statements, Sewell's mother owned IWT common stock and warrants to purchase IWT's common stock. Sewell knew of his mother's IWT holdings and that they were material to her. Sewell exercised administrative control over the purchase of the IWT securities before the commencement of the 2003 audit and over the ultimate disposition of the securities, which occurred after the issuance of the audit report. Therefore, KGO and Sewell failed to maintain the required independence with respect to IWT.

Audit Procedures Concerning Property and Equipment

10. KGO and Sewell failed to perform appropriate audit procedures to test the existence and the valuation of $3,128,750 in "sample boards" and $1,098,199 in "display boards" (collectively, the "boards") included in IWT's balance sheet as property and equipment. IWT stated in its public filings that the boards were used to market IWT products to end-user customers. KGO and Sewell were informed that IWT's accounting policy was to capitalize the cost of materials, labor, and overhead associated with making sample boards (ten-year depreciation period) and display boards (five-year depreciation period). The boards, in the aggregate, accounted for more than 15 percent of IWT's total assets at December 31, 2003.

11. During the planning phase of the audit, KGO and Sewell identified IWT's accounting for the boards as an aspect of the financial statements involving a significant risk of material misstatement due to fraud because of the potential for IWT to defer expenses and overstate assets by using lengthy depreciation periods for the boards. Despite identifying that fraud risk factor and having concerns in the audit planning stage about the lengthy depreciation period for the boards, KGO and Sewell performed no audit procedures to test the initial costs allocated to any of the boards, the existence of the boards, whether any boards had become obsolete, been abandoned, destroyed, stolen, transferred, or otherwise impaired, or to assess the appropriateness of IWT's accounting policy and assigned depreciation period. Instead, KGO and Sewell inappropriately relied on management's representations without performing additional testing.

Audit Procedures Concerning Stock Options Issued to Employees

12. IWT's 2003 financial statements included a disclosure concerning a November 23, 2002 stock option compensation plan granting options to IWT officers, which explained that certain percentages of the options vested upon the occurrence of three separate performance conditions. The disclosure further stated that "[a]t December 31, 2003, the options were 66% vested."

13. IWT was required under GAAP to recognize certain amounts as a compensation expense when the options vested because of the performance conditions set forth in the plan.[12/] IWT departed from GAAP because it did not recognize any such compensation expense.[13/] KGO and Sewell had evidence of this GAAP departure available to them, but they failed to identify and appropriately address it.[14/]

Audit Documentation

14. PCAOB audit documentation standards applicable to KGO's audit of IWT's 2003 financial statements stated that "[a]udit documentation is the principal record of auditing procedures applied, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached by the auditor in the engagement."[15/] The documentation standards further provide that audit working [13/] IWT subsequently restated its financial statements to recognize the vesting of these options as a compensation expense. The effect of this restatement adjustment was a reduction of previously reported net income by approximately $631,000 or 144 percent.

[14/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures, however, should not be understood as an indication that the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP.

papers must be sufficient to show, among other things, that the work has been adequately supervised and that sufficient competent evidential matter has been obtained through the auditing procedures applied to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion.[16/] Inherent in the requirement to prepare and maintain audit documentation is the requirement that such documentation be accurate. The creation of audit work papers reflecting procedures that were not, in fact, performed is a violation of these audit documentation standards.

15. After KGO issued its report on the audit of IWT's initial financial statements for 2003, Kantor, at Sewell's request, signed an audit working paper that represented that Kantor had performed certain supervisory duties, reviewed audit work papers, and approved audit procedures and working papers. Specifically, the working paper stated, among other things, that Kantor "reviewed all working papers prepared by personnel in [his] charge," "reviewed sufficient additional working papers to be satisfied with the adequacy of the audit," "reviewed completed audit programs," "reviewed the financial statements and [was] satisfied that they . . . ha[d] been prepared in conformity with [GAAP]," "reviewed the auditor's report and [was] satisfied it properly expresse[d] [KGO's] opinion in accordance with [GAAS]," and "reviewed documentation related to significant audit findings." However, Kantor performed no such procedures and had no significant role in the audit. Kantor signed the working paper at Sewell's request, believing Sewell could not sign the working paper as a result of his suspended CPA license. Kantor knowingly created a working paper reflecting that he performed certain audit procedures that he did not, in fact, perform in violation of PCAOB auditing standards.

Audit of IWT's Restated 2003 Financial Statements

16. In May 2004, as a result of a PCAOB inspection of KGO's 2003 audit of IWT's 2003 financial statements, KGO was notified in writing of apparent audit deficiencies related to, among other things, its audit procedures in connection with IWT's fixed asset assertions. Subsequently, IWT determined to restate its financial statements by, among other things, reducing the value of its fixed assets by less than $100,000 to account for obsolete boards. KGO issued an audit report dated August 12, 2004, with respect to the restated financial statements that was included in IWT's Form 10-KSB/A filed with the Commission on September 23, 2004. The report expressed an unqualified opinion on IWT's consolidated financial statements for 2003 and 2002. The report stated that IWT's restated financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, IWT's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP and that the audit was conducted in accordance with GAAS.[17/]

17. KGO's audit work on IWT's restated 2003 financial statements, less than six months after the PCAOB inspection, suffered from the same deficiencies as its audit work on IWT's initial 2003 financial statements with respect to IWT's sample boards and display boards. Specifically, in performing its audit of IWT's restated financial statements, KGO again failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning the boards and relied on management's representations without performing any testing of the existence, valuation, and financial statement presentation of the boards.

Audit of GeneThera, Inc.'s 2003 Financial Statements

18. GeneThera, Inc. ("GeneThera") is a Florida corporation with its principal place of business in Colorado. Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. During the relevant period, GeneThera's public filings disclosed that it was a development stage biotechnology company that was developing non-invasive techniques to test the blood of live animals for chronic diseases, such as mad cow disease. At all relevant times, GeneThera was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). KGO was engaged as GeneThera's auditor beginning with the audit of GeneThera's 2003 financial statements until the Firm resigned on March 4, 2006.

19. KGO issued an audit report dated February 15, 2004, that was included in GeneThera's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on April 14, 2004. The report expressed an unqualified opinion on GeneThera's consolidated financial statements for 2003 and 2002. The report stated that GeneThera's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, GeneThera's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP. In addition, the report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with GAAS.[18/] Sewell was the engagement partner who had final responsibility for the audit.

20. In connection with their audit of GeneThera's 2003 financial statements, KGO and Sewell failed to exercise due professional care, obtain sufficient competent evidential matter, and exercise professional skepticism concerning: (1) the valuation and existence of certain fixed assets and (2) the forgiveness of a liability. KGO also violated Section 10A of the Exchange Act by performing certain prohibited services.

Audit Procedures Concerning Property and Equipment

21. GeneThera's 2003 balance sheet included $702,199 in property and equipment, of which more than $525,000 was disclosed as laboratory equipment that GeneThera obtained in 2003. The laboratory equipment accounted for more than 65 percent of GeneThera's 2003 total reported assets. GeneThera double-counted certain assets, including three of its highest valued fixed assets, in determining the value of this laboratory equipment.[19/]

22. In the course of the audit, KGO and Sewell obtained a list of the laboratory equipment prepared by GeneThera's management. KGO and Sewell performed no audit procedures to test that the list was complete and accurate or to test whether the items included therein had been obtained in 2003 or in a previous reporting period. KGO and Sewell relied on management's assigned value for the laboratory equipment without performing any audit procedures to test its value. Lastly, no procedures were performed to determine whether the 10-year depreciation period used by GeneThera was reasonable with respect to any of GeneThera's laboratory equipment.

[18/] This audit was required to be conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards even though the reference to GAAS in the February 15, 2004, audit report was not inappropriate. See supra note 9.

[19/] After the PCAOB inspection notified KGO of deficiencies with KGO's audit procedures with respect to these fixed assets, KGO discovered that GeneThera had double-counted more than $230,000 in assets. In September 2004, GeneThera restated its financial statements to correct the error. See GeneThera's Form 10-KSB/A filed on September 13, 2004.

Audit Procedures Concerning Liabilities

23. In preparing its 2003 financial statements, GeneThera derecognized a $150,000 liability (approximately 11 percent of total liabilities) to a creditor that had resulted from money received pursuant to a loan agreement. GeneThera reported the $150,000 as "other income" in its 2003 financial statements. KGO and Sewell performed no procedures to determine whether GeneThera had paid the creditor to extinguish the liability. KGO and Sewell also did not perform any procedures to determine whether GeneThera had been released from the liability by the creditor or received a judicial release.[20/] Instead, KGO and Sewell inappropriately relied on management's representation that it did not owe $150,000 to the creditor.

Performance of Prohibited Services

24. Section 10A(g) of the Exchange Act prohibits registered public accounting firms from performing certain non-audit services including "bookkeeping or other services related to the accounting records or financial statements of the audit client."[21/] KGO violated Section 10A(g) of the Exchange Act by, during the course of the audit of GeneThera's 2003 financial statements, keeping GeneThera's books and records. Specifically, KGO, among other things, had direct access to GeneThera's accounting systems, made journal entries directly in the books and records of GeneThera, generated the trial balances for the financial statements, generated the financial statements and footnote disclosures, made accounting decisions for the issuer, computed depreciation for GeneThera's 2003 fixed assets, and performed other services related to keeping GeneThera's books and records.

[20/] Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 140, Accounting for Transfers and Servicing of Financial Assets and Extinguishments of Liabilities ¶16 states that "A debtor shall derecognize a liability if and only if it has been extinguished" either because the debtor has paid the creditor and been relieved of the obligation or because the debtor has been legally released from the liability either judicially or by the creditor.

Failure to Respond to Indications of Illegal Acts

26. After completion of its 2004 audit of GeneThera and in the course of performing 2005 quarterly review procedures,[24/] KGO discovered payments from GeneThera to a limited liability company and payments out of the limited liability company that appeared to have been used to pay for GeneThera executives' personal expenses. ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Stephen J. Nardi, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2007-008 December 14, 2007

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is barring Stephen J. Nardi, CPA, from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and standards in connection with alterations of audit documentation relating to one audit.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Stephen J. Nardi, CPA ("Nardi" or "Respondent").

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over him and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

[1/] Respondent may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after one (1) year from the date of this Order.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Nardi, 51, of Erial, New Jersey, is a certified public accountant licensed by the Pennsylvania State Board of Accountancy (license no. CA018378L). At all times relevant to these proceedings, Nardi was a partner in the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania office of BDO Seidman, LLP ("BDO"), a registered public accounting firm, and an associated person of BDO, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).[3/] At all times relevant to these proceedings, Nardi was also the Practice Office Assurance Director for BDO's Philadelphia office with responsibility for, among other things, providing technical guidance to other partners and managers on audit engagements, coordinating the office's quality control activities, and overseeing the scheduling and assignment of audit personnel to audit engagements. At all times relevant to these proceedings, Nardi directly supervised most of the audit managers and senior managers in the Philadelphia office. He also influenced promotion decisions affecting managers and other Philadelphia office audit personnel.

[3/] In part as a result of the conduct described in this Order, BDO asked Nardi to resign, and his separation from the firm became effective on March 21, 2006.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

B. Respondent Violated PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3

2. Nardi was the engagement partner for BDO's audit of the financial statements of Hemispherx Biopharma, Inc. ("Hemispherx") for the fiscal year ("FY") ended December 31, 2004. At all times relevant to these proceedings, Hemispherx, a Delaware corporation whose common stock is registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

3. In the late fall of 2004, Nardi assigned an audit manager in BDO's Philadelphia office (the "Manager") to manage the Hemispherx audit engagement. After completing the audit planning phase, Nardi directed the Manager to cease all work on the Hemispherx financial statement audit so that she could concentrate her efforts on another Nardi-supervised audit engagement for a larger issuer client. Following Nardi's direction, the Manager stopped all work on the Hemispherx audit. After the Manager ceased working on the engagement, she neither supervised nor reviewed any of the work performed by more junior members of the engagement team. The field work on the Hemispherx audit was completed by an audit senior without the supervision of an audit manager.

4. In the absence of an audit manager on the engagement, the work performed by the audit senior and other BDO staff was never subjected to a detailed review as required by BDO policy. For public audit engagements, BDO's Assurance Manual and Quality Control ("QC") Manual required, among other things, that a detailed review be completed before the audit report is released. The detailed review, which was required to include a review of all work papers, was intended to, among other things, ensure compliance with PCAOB auditing standards, generally accepted accounting principles, and BDO policies. The detailed review was required to be performed by either the engagement partner or manager provided that he or she does not review work that is primarily his or her own.

5. Nardi authorized issuance of BDO's audit report on Hemispherx's FY 2004 financial statements on March 16, 2005, and that report was included with the company's Form 10-K filed that day with the Commission. Thereafter, the audit senior on the engagement assembled a final set of audit documentation for retention and caused the audit documentation to be archived on or about May 1, 2005. At the time the audit senior completed the archiving, however, neither Nardi, nor the Manager, nor

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

anyone else had done the detailed review required by BDO's policy, nor had the Manager initialed or signed the work papers to indicate that a detailed review had occurred.

6. In the late spring of 2005, Nardi was formally notified that BDO would be performing a weeklong internal inspection of selected Philadelphia office audit engagements beginning on Monday, August 15, 2005. The inspection was pursuant to BDO QC policies and procedures requiring formal inspections ("QC Inspections") of local office audit practices on a rotating basis The QC Inspections were conducted by a review team ("QC reviewers") consisting of BDO partners from other offices of the firm. The purposes of the QC Inspections were, among other things, to determine the quality of work performed, to assess compliance with PCAOB auditing standards, generally accepted accounting principles, and BDO policy, to correct any identified deviations, and to provide recommendations for improvement. This was accomplished by reviewing, on a sample basis, the work papers and reports of selected audit and other engagements.

7. Upon learning of the impending QC Inspection, Nardi became concerned that staffing shortages experienced during the FY 2004 "busy season" (i.e., late fall 2004 to early spring 2005) may have resulted in documentation and other deficiencies in audit engagements falling within the inspection's scope.[4/] With this concern in mind, Nardi directed an effort in the Philadelphia office to perform "cold reviews" of work papers for public audit engagements he thought were likely candidates for selection by the QC reviewers. These "cold reviews" entailed reviews of audit work papers by managers not involved in the engagements for the purpose of identifying audit and work paper deficiencies that might be cited by the QC reviewers.

8. On Thursday, August 11, 2005, Nardi learned that the Hemispherx FY 2004 financial statement audit was among the engagements selected for QC Inspection the following week. Over that weekend, Nardi directed a subordinate in the Philadelphia office not previously familiar with the engagement to perform a "cold review" of the Hemispherx FY 2004 audit work papers. The subordinate noted, among other things, the absence of initials and signatures indicating that a detailed review had been performed.

[4/] Nardi was familiar with BDO's QC Inspection process because he had served as a QC reviewer on inspections of other BDO offices.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

9. The Manager, who had been on vacation the previous week, returned to the office the morning of Monday, August 15, 2005, the first day of the QC Inspection. Soon after she arrived, Nardi entered the Manager's office and directed her to initial and sign the Hemispherx FY 2004 financial statement audit work papers to indicate that she had performed a timely detailed review. The Manager at first protested that she could not sign off as the detailed reviewer because she did not perform the work and could not address questions and issues that might be raised by the QC reviewers. Ultimately, however, the Manager acceded to Nardi's direction and affixed her initials and signatures to the Hemispherx audit work papers, which had been tabbed to indicate where initials and signatures were missing. She backdated her initials and signatures to dates preceding the March 16, 2005 issuance of BDO's audit report.

10. When Nardi directed the Manager to initial and sign the Hemispherx FY 2004 work papers as the detailed reviewer, he knew that neither she nor any one else had done a detailed review of the work performed after the Manager ceased working on the engagement. Nardi further knew that such detailed reviews were required by BDO's Assurance and QC Manuals. After the Manager affixed her backdated initials and signatures to the work papers to falsely indicate that she had performed a timely detailed review, Nardi provided those work papers to the QC reviewers. In addition, Nardi initialed certain of the Hemispherx FY 2004 work papers in August 2005 before providing them to the QC reviewers. The initials added by Nardi in August 2005 were backdated to dates preceding the March 16, 2005 issuance of BDO's FY 2004 Hemispherx audit report.

PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3

11. BDO's audit of Hemispherx's FY 2004 financial statements was subject to PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS No. 3"). AS No. 3 requires auditors to "document the procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached with respect to relevant financial statement assertions."[5/] Audit documentation must clearly demonstrate that the work was in fact performed.[6/] Audit documentation must contain sufficient information to enable an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with the engagement, to understand the nature, timing, extent, and results of the procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached, and to determine who performed the work and the date such work was completed, as well as the person who reviewed the work and the date of such review.[7/]

12. AS No. 3 additionally provides that a complete and final set of audit documentation should be assembled for retention as of a date not more than 45 days after the report release date (i.e., the "documentation completion date").[8/] In circumstances that may require additions to audit documentation after the report release date, "[a]udit documentation must not be deleted or discarded after the documentation completion date, however, information may be added. Any documentation added must indicate the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it."[9/]

13. In August 2005, three months after the Hemispherx FY 2004 audit work papers had been finalized for retention, Nardi directed the Manager to alter the work papers by entering initials and signatures to falsely indicate that she had performed a timely detailed review. As Nardi was aware at the time, the initials and signatures affixed by the Manager were backdated to dates preceding issuance of the audit report on March 16, 2005, there was no indication that her initials and signatures were added in August 2005, and there was no explanation of why her initials and signatures were added in August 2005. This had the purpose and effect of leaving an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with the engagement (in this case, the BDO QC reviewer who reviewed the work papers in the course of a QC Inspection) with a false understanding of the nature, timing, and extent of the review procedures employed in the audit, and a false impression that the Manager had completed a timely detailed review of the work performed by more junior members of the engagement team. As a result of the foregoing, Nardi violated AS No. 3. Nardi also violated AS No. 3 when, in August 2005, he added and backdated his own initials to certain Hemispherx FY 2004 audit work papers and failed to document any reason for the addition.

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Stephen J. Nardi is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i); and

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Wieseneck, Andres & Company, P.A. and barring Thomas B. Andres, CPA, from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings concerning the respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and standards in connection with audits of the financial statements of one issuer client for fiscal years ending May 31, 2004 ("FY 2004") and May 31, 2005 ("FY 2005").

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Wieseneck, Andres & Company, P.A. (the "Firm" or "Wieseneck, Andres") and Thomas B. Andres, CPA ("Andres") (collectively, "Respondents").

[1/] Wieseneck, Andres & Company, P.A. may reapply for registration after two (2) years from the date of this Order. Andres may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Wieseneck, Andres & Company, P.A. is an accounting firm incorporated in the state of Florida and is licensed under the laws of the state of Florida (Florida Board of Accountancy License No. AD0016885). Wieseneck, Andres is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. Its office is located in North Palm Beach, Florida.

2. Andres, 64, of North Palm Beach, Florida, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the state of Florida (License No. AC0006827). He is the Firm's "Audit Principal" and, at all times relevant to this matter, was an associated person of the Firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

3. This matter involves violations of the Board's auditing standards. In particular, in auditing the FY 2004 financial statements of American Capital Holdings, Inc. ("ACHI"), Respondents failed to perform, or reasonably ensure the performance of, sufficient audit procedures to evaluate the existence and valuation of recorded goodwill, marketable securities, and intangible assets – totaling more than 97% of ACHI's reported assets – and to evaluate ACHI's determination not to consolidate the financial statements of an entity in which it disclosed having a 90% interest. In addition, in auditing ACHI's FY 2005 financial statements, Respondents failed to identify or appropriately address departures from Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP") relating to (1) recording the correction of an error in one period without recording it in the period in which the error occurred and (2) the misclassification of the value of certain declared dividends as an asset.[3/]

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Auditing Standards in Auditing the 2004 and 2005 Financial Statements of American Capital Holdings, Inc.

4. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards.[4/] Under the Board's auditing standards, an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[5/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[6/] In connection with the audits of the financial statements of ACHI for FY 2004 and FY 2005, Respondents failed to do so, as described in more detail below.

[3/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures, however, should not be understood as an indication that the Securities and Exchange Commission has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP.

5. ACHI is a Florida corporation headquartered in Palm Beach Gardens, Florida. Its common stock is registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"). ACHI's public filings disclose that it has been primarily in the business of developing and selling insurance-related financial products. At all relevant times, ACHI was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

6. The Firm was engaged as ACHI's independent auditor in June 2004. The Firm issued an audit report dated November 10, 2004, that was included in ACHI's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on February 1, 2005 and ACHI's Form 10-KSB/As filed with the Commission on April 29, 2005 and September 15, 2005. In the audit report, the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion on ACHI's consolidated financial statements for FY 2004. The report stated that ACHI's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, ACHI's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP. In addition, the report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with the auditing standards of the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board. Andres was the engagement partner who had final responsibility for the audit.

Goodwill

7. ACHI's FY 2004 financial statements reported goodwill of $8.21 million as of May 31, 2004, representing approximately 57% of ACHI's reported assets. According to ACHI disclosures, $7.2 million of this reported goodwill was acquired as part of a February 29, 2004 transaction in which ACHI "acquired [various specified assets], goodwill of $7.2 million and assumed $1,005,000 in debt for the issuance of [common stock]."[7/]

8. Those ACHI disclosures strongly suggested the possibility that the transaction described by ACHI involved a "business combination" for GAAP purposes.[8/] Under the circumstances, the specific nature of the transaction was significant because of its bearing on the appropriateness of ACHI recognizing the "acquired" goodwill and its bearing on the adequacy of ACHI's disclosures.[9/] Respondents understood that the $7.2 million in goodwill that ACHI disclosed as having acquired in the transaction was goodwill that had previously been recorded as goodwill by the other entity. Respondents, however, failed to evaluate the nature of the transaction, the appropriateness of recognizing the acquired goodwill, or the adequacy of the disclosures.[10/]

[7/] See ACHI May 31, 2004 Form 10-KSB, filed Feb. 1, 2005, at F-7.

[8/] For purposes of Statement of Financial Accounting Standards ("SFAS") No. 141, Business Combinations, "a business combination occurs when an entity acquires net assets that constitute a business or acquires equity interests of one or more other entities and obtains control over that entity or entities." SFAS No. 141, ¶ 9. (This Order's references to SFAS No. 141 refer to that standard as it existed at all times relevant to the conduct described here, and not to the standard as revised in 2007.)

[9/] If the transaction involved ACHI's acquisition of the net assets of another business, accounting for the goodwill would be governed by SFAS No. 141, Business Combinations, ¶ 38 (in a business combination, "an acquiring entity shall not recognize the goodwill previously recorded by an acquired entity"). Alternatively, if the transaction involved a reverse merger (albeit an inadequately disclosed reverse merger), continued recognition of the pre-existing goodwill might have been appropriate.

9. In addition, Respondents failed in a separate and distinct way to perform sufficient procedures as to all of ACHI's reported goodwill. Specifically, Respondents' procedures to test the existence and valuation of goodwill were limited to obtaining representations from management. Those representations alone were not sufficient audit evidence,[11/] and Respondents failed to perform any other procedures to test the existence and valuation of goodwill.[12/]

Investments

10. ACHI's FY 2004 financial statements reported "marketable securities" valued at $2.96 million as of May 31, 2004, representing approximately 20% of ACHI's reported assets. ACHI disclosed that over 90% of the value of these marketable securities related to "equity ownership positions" in ten development stage companies that had no quoted market price and in which ACHI had no controlling interest.[13/] Respondents reviewed a brokerage statement obtained from management with respect to approximately 10% of the stated total marketable securities balance, but they failed to perform any other procedures to test the existence and valuation of the reported Restatement"). Among other things, ACHI disclosed that it had determined that, for the year ended May 31, 2004, the $7.2 million in goodwill acquired on February 29, 2004, was impaired and that it was recognizing an impairment loss in that amount. See ACHI Form 10-KSB/A, filed December 2, 2005, at F-14.

[11/] PCAOB auditing standards provide that "representations from management are part of the evidential matter the independent auditor obtains, but they are not a substitute for the application of those audit procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements under audit." AU § 333.02, Management Representations.

[12/] In its 2004 Restatement, in addition to recognizing an impairment loss on $7.2 million of the goodwill as described above, ACHI reclassified $980,000 of the goodwill as "Insurance Licenses." See ACHI Form 10-KSB/A, filed Dec. 2, 2005, at F-14.

marketable securities.[14/] Respondents also failed to evaluate management's determination not to recognize an impairment loss on the stated marketable securities balance.[15/]

Intangible Assets

11. ACHI's FY 2004 financial statements reported intangible assets of $2.96 million as of May 31, 2004, representing approximately 20% of ACHI's reported assets. ACHI described 99% of these reported intangible assets as "intellectual property rights" and reported that they were acquired in connection with ACHI's acquisition of a 90% interest in another entity.[16/] Respondents failed to perform procedures to test either the existence or valuation of these reported "intellectual property rights."[17/]

[14/] In connection with its 2004 Restatement, ACHI reported that marketable securities reported in the amount of approximately $2.93 million as of May 31, 2004, had "no value." See ACHI Form 10-KSB/A, filed Dec. 2, 2005, at F-14.

[15/] PCAOB auditing standards provide that an auditor should evaluate management's conclusion about the need to recognize an impairment loss for an other-than-temporary decline in the fair value of such securities below their cost. AU § 332.27, Auditing Derivative Instruments, Hedging Activities, and Investments in Securities.

[16/] See ACHI FY 2004 Form 10-KSB, filed February 1, 2005, at F-13. See also ACHI FY 2004 Form 10-KSB/A, filed April 29, 2005, at F-13, in which ACHI reported the 90% interest.

[17/] Subsequently, in ACHI's FY 2004 Form 10-KSB/A, filed April 29, 2005, at F-13, ACHI reclassified the assets originally reported as "intellectual property rights" as marketable securities. ACHI continued to classify the "intellectual property rights" as marketable securities for FY 2004 in ACHI's FY 2005 Form 10-KSB. See ACHI FY 2005 Form 10-KSB, filed August 30, 2005, at F-3 and F-10. For FY 2005, however, ACHI reclassified the "intellectual property rights" as intangible assets, with a value of $434,000. See id. In ACHI's 2005 Restatement, ACHI wrote off this $434,000. See ACHI Form 10-KSB/A, filed Dec. 2, 2005, at F-14.

Consolidation

12. As described above, ACHI reported in April 2005 that it had obtained a 90% interest in another entity. ACHI, however, did not consolidate that entity's financial results into ACHI's FY 2004 financial statements. Respondents understood that ACHI had obtained this interest at the time of the November 10, 2004 audit report, but failed to evaluate ACHI's determination concerning whether to consolidate that entity's financial results.[18/]

13. The Firm issued an audit report dated August 26, 2005, that was included in ACHI's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on August 30, 2005. In the audit report, the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion on ACHI's financial statements for the fiscal year ended May 31, 2005. The report stated that ACHI's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, ACHI's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP. In addition, the report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with the auditing standards of the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board. Andres was the engagement partner who had final responsibility for the audit.

14. In its audit of ACHI's FY 2005 financial statements, Respondents failed to identify and appropriately address two separate departures from GAAP. First, although ACHI substantially reduced its marketable securities and goodwill as of the May 31, 2005 balance sheet date to $81,000 and,$980,000, respectively,[19/] ACHI incorrectly

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Jaspers + Hall, PC, Thomas M. Jaspers, CPA, and Patrick A. Hall, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2008-002 October 21, 2008

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Jaspers + Hall, PC and barring its two partners, Thomas M. Jaspers, CPA and Patrick A. Hall, CPA, from being associated persons of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of four issuer clients from 2005 to 2007.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Jaspers + Hall, PC ("J+H"), Thomas M. Jaspers, CPA ("Jaspers") and Patrick A. Hall, CPA ("Hall"), (collectively, "Respondents").

[1/] J+H may reapply for registration after five (5) years from the date of this Order. Jaspers and Hall each may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after five (5) years from the date of this Order.

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Jaspers + Hall, PC is a public accounting firm with offices in Colorado Springs, Colorado and Denver, Colorado. Jaspers and Hall formed J+H in October 2003 and are its only partners. At all relevant times, J+H was licensed under the laws of the State of Colorado to engage in the practice of public accounting (license no. FRM-12673). J+H is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

2. Jaspers, 54, of Denver, Colorado, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the state of Colorado (license no. CPA-21617). At all relevant times,

The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of "(A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard."

3. Hall, 43, of Castle Rock, Colorado, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the state of Colorado (license no. CPA-20449). At all relevant times, he was a partner in J+H and was an associated person of J+H as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

4. This matter involves numerous and repeated violations of PCAOB auditing standards by Respondents in the audits of the financial statements of four issuer clients from 2005 through 2007. As detailed below, during the course of these audits Respondents consistently failed to perform the most basic functions and procedures required to evaluate the financial statements of their issuer clients. Among other things, Respondents failed (1) to perform adequate, or sometimes any, audit procedures in areas such as cash, deferred revenue, business acquisition accounting, equity, income taxes, related party transactions, and using the work of specialists; (2) to plan the audits, prepare audit programs, and prepare audit completion documents; (3) to identify and appropriately address departures from Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP") concerning contingencies; and (4) to retain audit documentation for the required period of time.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Auditing Standards

5. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB Rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[3/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[4/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements, and prepare and maintain appropriate audit documentation.[5/] As detailed below, Respondents failed to meet these standards.

(1) Audits of Fiscal Year 2004, 2005, and 2006 Financial Statements of Force Protection, Inc.

6. Force Protection, Inc. ("Force Protection") is a Nevada corporation with principal offices in Ladson, South Carolina. At all relevant times, its common stock was registered under Section 12(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and was listed on the NASDAQ Stock Market. Force Protection's public filings disclose that it is a manufacturer of ballistic and blast protected vehicles. At all relevant times, Force Protection was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

7. J+H was engaged as Force Protection's independent auditor from 2005 to 2007.[6/] During that time, J+H issued several audit reports on Force Protection's financial statements. Each report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, expressed an unqualified audit opinion, and stated that, in J+H's opinion, the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. GAAP. The audit reports were dated April 8, 2005 (included in Force Protection's Form 10-KSB filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") on April 14, 2005), March 17, 2006 (included in Force Protection's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on April 13, 2006), March 2, 2007 (included in Force Protection's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 16, 2007), April 16, 2007 (a dual-dated reissue of the March 17, 2006 report, included in Force Protection's Form 10-K/A for FY 2005 filed with the Commission on June 27, 2007), and June 5, 2007 (a dual-dated reissue of the March 2, 2007 report, included in Force Protection's Form 10-K/A filed with the Commission on June 11, 2007). Audit of FY 2006 Financial Statements

8. J+H and Hall's audit of Force Protection's FY 2006 financial statements was deficient in several respects. First, they failed to perform sufficient procedures to verify the existence of approximately $155 million of cash, which represented 57 percent of Force Protection's reported assets. J+H's work papers include copies of Force Protection bank statements accounting for approximately two-thirds of the reported cash, but when J+H received no reply to a confirmation request sent to the bank, J+H and Hall failed to perform alternative procedures to verify that Force Protection had the cash. They also failed to perform any procedures or obtain any audit evidence concerning the other one-third of the reported cash.

9. J+H and Hall also failed to perform procedures to evaluate whether reported deferred revenue, which represented 22.7 percent of Force Protection's total liabilities, included all appropriate amounts, was appropriately classified as deferred revenue, and was reported in the appropriate period. J+H and Hall failed to perform such procedures even though that same failure in an earlier Force Protection audit had been brought to their attention, as an auditing deficiency, by PCAOB inspectors.

10. In addition, J+H and Hall failed to perform any procedures or gather any audit evidence concerning a reported deferred tax benefit that represented 67.7 percent of Force Protection's net earnings, and Hall has acknowledged that he did not understand the accounting for the deferred tax benefit.[8/]

[7/] With regard to Force Protection's restated financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2003, J+H's audit report covered only the adjustments that Force Protection had made to its original financial statements. J+H opined that those adjustments were "appropriate" and "properly applied."

11. The audit was deficient in various other respects as well. Specifically, J+H and Hall failed to comply with PCAOB standards that require an auditor (1) to obtain written representations from management concerning certain matters, including a representation concerning management's belief that the financial statements are fairly presented in conformity with GAAP;[9/] (2) to establish and document an understanding with the client regarding the services to be performed for each engagement;[10/] and (3) to prepare an engagement completion document identifying all significant findings or issues.[11/]

Audits of FY 2005, 2004, and 2003 Restated Financial Statements

12. J+H and Hall's audit of Force Protection's restated FY 2005, 2004, and 2003 financial statements also failed to comply with PCAOB standards. In particular, J+H and Hall used the work of a valuation specialist in performing that audit but, in violation of PCAOB standards (1) failed to evaluate the professional qualifications of the specialist, to determine whether he had the necessary skill or knowledge to perform the valuations in question; (2) failed to test in any respect the data provided to the specialist by Force Protection; and (3) failed to obtain an understanding of the assumptions used by the specialist in its valuations.[12/]

Audits of FY 2005 and 2004 Financial Statements and Retention of Certain Work Papers

13. J+H and Hall also violated PCAOB audit documentation retention requirements with respect to documentation for the FY 2005 and 2004 audits of Force Protection's financial statements. (2) Audit of FY 2005 Financial Statements of Bio-Warm Corporation (f/k/a Rapid Bio Tests Corp.)

14. Bio-Warm Corporation (f/k/a Rapid Bio Tests Corp.) ("Bio-Warm") was a Nevada corporation with principal offices in Huntington Beach, California. At all times relevant to this Order, Bio-Warm's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. Bio-Warm's public filings disclose that it was a development stage company pursuing the manufacturing and marketing of infrared conductive textile products. At all times relevant to this Order, Bio-Warm was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

15. J+H was engaged as Bio-Warm's independent auditor in 2005 and issued an audit report dated July 11, 2005 that was included in Bio-Warm's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on July 18, 2005. The report expressed an unqualified audit opinion on Bio-Warm's financial statements for the year ended February 28, 2005, and stated that, in J+H's opinion, the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. GAAP. The audit report also stated that J+H's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. For the audit related to that audit report, Jaspers was the engagement partner, and Hall served as the concurring review partner.

16. In its FY 2005 financial statements, Bio-Warm reported that, during FY 2005, it had acquired another entity, Mirae Tech, Ltd. ("Mirae Tech"), pursuant to a stock purchase agreement and accounted for the acquisition under the purchase method. According to Bio-Warm's FY 2005 financial statements, the tangible assets acquired in the transaction represented 99.9 percent of Bio-Warm's total assets at the end of FY 2005. Bio-Warm initially recorded $1,293,028 of goodwill in the Mirae Tech transaction. Three months later, however, Bio-Warm management determined to write off the goodwill, an expense that represented approximately 18 percent of Bio-Warm's net loss for 2005.

17. Other than obtaining a copy of the stock purchase agreement, J+H and Jaspers failed to perform any audit procedures with respect to the Mirae Tech transaction. Among other failures, J+H and Jaspers (1) failed to perform any procedures to test the values Bio-Warm assigned to the tangible assets acquired and the liabilities assumed in the business combination; (2) failed to perform any procedures concerning Bio-Warm's reported acquisition expenses, which accounted for 74.9 percent of Bio-Warm's net loss for FY 2005; (3) failed to resolve a material inconsistency between the number of shares that the stock purchase agreement stated Bio-Warm would issue in the transaction and the number of shares Bio-Warm actually reported issuing; and (4) failed to test in any way management's representation that Bio-Warm was the acquiring entity in the business combination.

18. J+H and Jaspers also failed to perform any audit procedures with respect to the goodwill that Bio-Warm initially recorded, upon consummating the business combination, but then completely wrote off only three months later. In particular, J+H and Jaspers did not review any impairment test on the goodwill prepared by Bio-Warm management, were not aware of any events or changes in circumstances that led Bio-Warm to write off the goodwill three months after recording it, and failed to perform any procedures to test management's conclusion that the goodwill should be written off.

(3) Audits of FY 2005 and 2006 Financial Statements of Siena Technologies, Inc. (f/k/a Network Installation Corp.)

19. Siena Technologies, Inc. (f/k/a Network Installation Corp.) ("Siena") is a Nevada corporation with principal offices in Las Vegas, Nevada. Its common stock is registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. Siena's public filings disclose that it specializes in the design, development, and integration of automated system networks for the gaming, entertainment, and luxury residential markets. At all relevant times, Siena was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

20. J+H was engaged as Siena's independent auditor in 2005.[14/] J+H issued an audit report dated April 12, 2006 that was included in Siena's Form 10-KSB filed with J+H also issued an audit report dated May 15, 2007 that was included in Siena's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on May 18, 2007, which also included restated financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2005. The report expressed an unqualified audit opinion on Siena's financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2006 and 2005 (as restated). The reports stated that, in J+H's opinion, the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. GAAP. Those audit reports also stated that J+H's audits were conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. For the audits related to those audit reports, Hall was the engagement partner, and Jaspers served as the concurring review partner.

21. J+H and Hall's audit of Siena's FY 2005 financial statements exhibited many of the same deficiencies that existed in the audit of Bio-Warm's FY 2005 financial statements. This occurred even though similar deficiencies in the Bio-Warm audit had been brought to the attention of Respondents by PCAOB inspectors before J+H and Hall began the Siena FY 2005 audit.

22. Specifically, J+H and Hall failed during the FY 2005 Siena audit to perform any procedures to test the values assigned to the assets acquired and the liabilities assumed in a significant business combination that Siena had undertaken in FY 2005.[15/] In addition, J+H and Hall failed to evaluate the appropriateness of Siena's almost immediate write-off of $3.8 million of the $11.1 million of goodwill Siena initially recorded in connection with the business combination.[16/]

23. During the FY 2006 Siena audit, J+H and Hall again failed to perform procedures concerning goodwill. As of the end of FY 2006, the goodwill remaining on Siena's balance sheet accounted for more than 67 percent of Siena's assets. Siena did not write off any additional goodwill during FY 2006. According to an analysis J+H had obtained from Siena during FY 2005, part of the reason Siena wrote off $3.8 million of goodwill in FY 2005 was a decline in Siena's stock price. Although Siena's stock price continued to decline during FY 2006, and Siena did not write off any additional goodwill, J+H and Hall failed to perform any procedures or obtain any audit evidence concerning the value of Siena's goodwill during the FY 2006 audit.

24. J+H and Hall's audit of Siena's restated FY 2005 financial statements also failed to comply with PCAOB standards. As they had in the audit of Force Protection's restated financial statements, J+H and Hall used the work of a valuation specialist in performing the audit of Siena's restated FY 2005 financial statements. In performing that Siena audit, J+H and Hall again failed to test, in any respect, the data upon which the specialist's valuations were based and again failed to obtain an understanding of either the specialist's methodology or the assumptions used in the specialist's valuations.[17/]

(4) Audits of FY 2005 and 2006 Financial Statements of GeneThera, Inc.

25. GeneThera, Inc. ("GeneThera") is a Florida corporation with principal offices in Wheat Ridge, Colorado. Its common stock is registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. GeneThera's public filings disclose that it is a development stage company engaged in the ongoing development of technology to detect the presence of infectious disease from the blood of live animals. At all relevant times, GeneThera was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

26. J+H was engaged as GeneThera's independent auditor on or about March 15, 2006. J+H issued an audit report dated May 22, 2006 that was included in an amended Form 10-KSB that GeneThera filed with the Commission on August 1, 2006. The report expressed an unqualified audit opinion on GeneThera's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2005. J+H subsequently issued an audit report dated April 18, 2007 that was included in an amended Form 10-KSB GeneThera filed with the Commission on May 2, 2007. The report expressed an unqualified audit opinion on GeneThera's financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2006 and 2005. The reports stated that, in J+H's opinion, the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. GAAP. Those reports also stated that J+H's audits were conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. For the audits related to those audit reports, Jaspers was the engagement partner.

27. J+H and Jaspers' audits of GeneThera's FY 2005 and 2006 financial statements were also deficient in numerous respects. First, in violation of PCAOB standards,[18/] J+H and Jaspers did not perform any planning procedures for either audit – indeed, they did not even prepare a written audit program.

28. Second, J+H and Jaspers failed to adequately evaluate GeneThera's reporting of a $101,000 "contingency liability" (representing approximately 7 percent of GeneThera's total liabilities) as of December 31, 2006 and GeneThera's simultaneous disclosure that it was "confident that the amount is currently not owed."[19/] Under GAAP, the reported liability and the disclosure could not both be appropriate.[20/] J+H and Jaspers failed to identify and appropriately address this inconsistency.[21/] Moreover,

[18/] PCAOB standards require that audit field work "be adequately planned." AU § 311.01, Planning and Supervision. In planning an audit, "the auditor should consider the nature, extent, and timing of work to be performed and should prepare a written audit program (or set of written audit programs) for every audit." AU § 311.05.

[19/] See GeneThera December 31, 2006 Form 10-KSB/A, filed May 2, 2007, at F-13.

[20/] Under GAAP, an estimated loss from a contingency should be recorded only if "[i]nformation available prior to issuance of the financial statements indicates that it is probable that . . . a liability had been incurred at the date of the financial statements" and "the amount of loss can be reasonably estimated." See Statement of Financial Accounting Standards ("SFAS") No. 5, ¶ 8, Accounting For Contingencies (emphasis added).

[21/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures, however, should not be understood as an indication that the other than obtaining representations from management, J+H and Jaspers did nothing to evaluate either GeneThera's contention that the "contingency liability" was "not owed" or the reasonableness of GeneThera's estimate as to the amount of the "contingency liability."

29. Third, J+H and Jaspers failed to obtain any audit evidence concerning at least 30 equity transactions into which GeneThera represented that it had entered during FY 2006. J+H and Jaspers failed to perform any audit procedures concerning those transactions even though (1) the transactions accounted for at least 30 percent of GeneThera's reported net loss for FY 2006; and (2) there were indications in J+H's work papers that one of the transactions was a material, undisclosed, related-party transaction.[22/]

30. Finally, during the FY 2005 audit of GeneThera's financial statements, J+H and Jaspers failed to adequately consider the risk of fraud. PCAOB standards concerning fraud risk require an auditor to "gain an understanding of the business rationale" for "transactions that are outside the normal course of business for the entity, or that otherwise appear to be unusual given the auditor's understanding of the entity and its environment."[23/] In violation of those standards, J+H and Jaspers failed to ascertain the business purpose of several unusual expenses reflected on GeneThera's FY 2005 credit card statements, including $9,000 in expenses GeneThera incurred at an art gallery, $1,000 in expenses GeneThera incurred for diamond earrings, and expenses GeneThera incurred for the purchase of what appear to be household groceries.[24/] In addition, J+H and Jaspers failed to evaluate whether those unusual expenses were individually, or in the aggregate, qualitatively material to GeneThera's financial statements.

Commission has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP.

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is (1) suspending Christopher E. Anderson, CPA, from being associated with a registered public accounting firm for a period of one year from the date of this Order; (2) restricting him to the role of "assistant," as that term is used in the Board's interim auditing standards, AU § 311.02(a), for an additional period of one year following expiration of his suspension; and (3) imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $25,000 against him. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the 2003 financial statements of one issuer client.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent.

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted,

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Respondent consents to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Anderson, 46, of Lake Forest, Illinois, is a certified public accountant licensed in Illinois (license no. 065027203), Iowa (license no. R04739), Wisconsin (license no. 20478-1), Michigan (license no. 1101029802), and Washington (license no. 15285). At all relevant times, he was a partner in the Chicago, Illinois office of the registered public accounting firm of Deloitte & Touche, LLP ("Deloitte") and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

2. This matter concerns Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the fiscal year ("FY") 2003 financial statements of Navistar Financial Corporation ("NFC"). Respondent's failures occurred in the context of NFC's discovery – shortly before NFC and its parent, Navistar International Corporation ("NIC"), planned to file their Forms 10-K – of approximately $19.7 million in apparent errors resulting in an overstatement of NFC's assets, revenues, and earnings (the "overstatement"). Upon discovery of the overstatement, NIC faced the prospect of having to report fourth-quarter earnings below those announced to analysts and investors two weeks before.

3. Faced with management's interest in avoiding a retraction of that announcement and in meeting the companies' internal target date for filing their Forms 10-K, Respondent violated PCAOB standards in auditing NFC's FY 2003 financial statements and authorizing an unqualified audit opinion. After discovery of the overstatement, Respondent (1) accepted a decision, made at Deloitte's NIC engagement team level, that the quantitative materiality threshold for the NFC audit should be increased by 50 percent, even though Respondent believed that the original threshold remained appropriate and understood that the increased threshold would make it easier to treat known misstatements as immaterial; (2) accepted, without a reasonable basis, NFC accounting decisions and adjustments that offset the effect of the overstatement; (3) authorized issuance of the audit opinion before NFC completed reconciliation of the accounts that were the source of the overstatement; and (4) otherwise failed to act with the requisite due professional care and professional skepticism.

C. Respondent Failed to Comply with PCAOB Auditing Standards in Auditing the Financial Statements of Navistar Financial Corporation for FY 2003

4. NFC is a Delaware corporation with principal executive offices in Rolling Meadows, Illinois. NFC issues debt securities in the public markets and is required to file reports under Section 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. At all relevant times, NFC was an "issuer" as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). At all times relevant to this Order, NFC, a second-tier, wholly-owned subsidiary of NIC,[2/] provided financing for new and used trucks sold by another NIC subsidiary and its dealers. NFC's results are consolidated into NIC's financial statements. At the time of the events described in this Order, Deloitte (and its

5. Respondent was the engagement partner for each of Deloitte's audits and reviews of NFC's financial statements from the beginning of FY 2000 through the end of FY 2003. In an audit report dated December 18, 2003, and included in NFC's Form 10-K filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission") on December 19, 2003, Deloitte expressed an unqualified opinion on NFC's statements of consolidated financial condition as of October 31, 2003 and October 31, 2002, and the related statements of consolidated income and cash flow for each of the three years in the period ended October 31, 2003. Deloitte's audit report stated that, in Deloitte's opinion, the audit had been conducted in accordance with U.S. generally accepted auditing standards[3/] and that NFC's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, its financial position in conformity with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP"). Respondent had final responsibility for the NFC audit as that phrase is used in AU § 311, Planning and Supervision, and authorized issuance of the audit report on December 18, 2003, concurrent with Deloitte's issuance of the NIC FY 2003 audit report.

6. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that associated persons of registered public accounting firms comply with the Board's auditing standards.[4/] Under these standards, an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[5/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[6/] Under PCAOB standards, representations from management are part of the evidential matter that an auditor obtains, but management representations are not a substitute for the application of those auditing procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for the auditor's opinion.[7/] PCAOB standards also provide that when information comes to an auditor's attention that differs significantly from the information on which the audit plan was based, the auditor may need to re-evaluate his or her audit procedures based on a revised consideration of audit risk and materiality.[8/] Respondent failed to comply with these standards in connection with NFC's FY 2003 audit.

Respondent was required to conduct the audit in accordance with the PCAOB's interim auditing standards pursuant to PCAOB Rule 3200T, which took effect on April 25, 2003. However, at the time of the FY 2003 NFC audit, the PCAOB's interim auditing standards were the same as GAAS as it existed on April 16, 2003, and, until PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 1 took effect on May 24, 2004, it remained appropriate for auditors to refer to GAAS in their audit reports. Accordingly, although the reference to GAAS in Deloitte's report for NFC was appropriate at the time, the standards pursuant to which the audit was required to be performed are more appropriately referred to as PCAOB auditing standards (or PCAOB standards), and that is how they are referred to in this Order.

Background

7. NFC disclosed that its business included securitizing and selling loans and leases through special purpose entities, which then issued securities to investors. NFC retained interests in, and continued to service, the securitized loans and leases. After the FY 2002 audit of NFC's financial statements, Deloitte issued a management letter which, among other things, noted significant unreconciled items in suspense accounts that NFC used to account for cash disbursements and collections related to the securitization transactions. The management letter recommended improvements to the reconciliation process and, in FY 2003, Deloitte's NFC engagement team ("the engagement team") informed NFC that NFC needed to complete the suspense account reconciliations before the end of the FY 2003 audit and issuance of the NFC audit report. In addition, by FY 2003, the engagement team had identified what it believed to be certain deficiencies in NFC's methodology for calculating gains on the securitization transactions.

8. In FY 2003, NFC sold a total of $1.705 billion of loans and leases in three separate securitization transactions. For both the "2002-B" transaction in the first quarter and the "2003-A" transaction in the third quarter, NFC calculated the gains using the same methodology and estimates it had previously been using. For the "2003-B" transaction, in the fourth quarter, NFC calculated the gains using a new methodology (devised in consultation with the engagement team) and certain new estimates. NFC also re-ran the gain calculation for the 2003-A securitization using its new methodology. The engagement team compared the results of that recalculation to the results NFC previously had reached and recorded using its old methodology. The engagement team found no material difference in the results and, as late as December 14, 2003, concluded that the estimates used in all the gain calculations for FY 2003 "appear reasonable in all material respects."

Earnings Announcement and Subsequent Discovery of Overstated Balances

9. On December 2, 2003, NIC management hosted a conference call with securities analysts to announce, among other things, NIC's fourth-quarter and year-end results. NIC informed analysts that its fourth-quarter net income from continuing operations, when adjusted for restructuring costs, was $0.72 per share. NIC management specifically noted that these results were "on the top side of the previous guidance we had provided" to the public at the end of the third quarter.[9/] Before the December 2 call, Deloitte had informed NIC that the FY 2003 audits of NIC and NFC were substantially completed and that unqualified opinions were expected to be issued.

10. By no later than December 8, 2003, Respondent expected that Deloitte's audit reports for NIC and NFC would be issued and NIC's and NFC's Forms 10-K would be filed with the Commission on or about December 19, 2003. This expectation was consistent with NIC's and NFC's goal, and past practice, of filing their Forms 10-K with the Commission before the Christmas holiday, several weeks in advance of the regulatory filing deadline (which in this case was January 29, 2004).

[9/] In August 2003, NIC management had informed analysts that "[w]e anticipate we will be solidly profitable in the fourth quarter with diluted earnings of between $0.65 and $0.75 per share from continuing operations."

ORDER

11. As of December 16, 2003, the engagement team was still awaiting NFC's suspense account reconciliations that had been noted in Deloitte's FY 2002 management letter. On the evening of December 16, 2003, Respondent was advised, as a result of the ongoing suspense account reconciliations, that the balances of certain NFC accounts were overstated. Specifically, Respondent was advised that cash outlays totaling approximately $17.7 million had not been appropriately recorded, and that an asset, now worthless, was recorded on NFC's books at approximately $2.0 million. Respondent concluded that these errors, totaling approximately $19.7 million, resulted in an overstatement of NFC's assets, revenue, and earnings.

NFC's Adjustments to Address the Overstatement

12. Because NFC's results are consolidated into NIC's financial statements, a write-off of the overstatement would reduce NIC's fourth-quarter earnings below what NIC had previously announced. Faced with that prospect, NFC, over December 17 and 18, made a series of accounting decisions that had the net result of avoiding any impact on NIC's reported earnings. First, NFC identified rationales for writing off less than half of the $19.7 million in 2003. Second, through recalculations of estimated gains, NFC recorded purported additional gains that offset those write-offs.

NFC's Decision to Write Off Only $7.294 Million in 2003

13. The overstatement of account balances had two basic components. One component was a $2,041,814 "hanging debit," which represented a recorded asset related to a FY 1999 securitization transaction (the 1999-B securitization). The debit was remaining (or "hanging") on NFC's balance sheet after the 1999-B securitization was settled in FY 2003. Because the securitization would not generate any future cash flows, the recorded asset was worthless. NFC wrote off this $2,041,814.

14. The remaining component—amounting to $17,645,115—involved what NFC had identified during the reconciliation process as incorrect accounting entries for cash outlays related to three securitization transactions (the 2000-C, 2001-B and 2002-B transactions). Respondent concluded that this component of the overstatement inflated the value of both an asset and a revenue account related to NFC's retained interests in the securitizations. Of the $17,645,115 component of the overstatement, NFC decided not to write off $7,768,145 related to the 2001-B and 2002-B transactions. The engagement team's work papers reflected that NFC's rationale for that decision was an analysis purportedly showing that the fair values of NFC's retained interests in

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

the 2001-B and 2002-B transactions exceeded their book values, even when all cash outlays were considered, thus purportedly rendering unnecessary any adjustment to the accounts related to those retained interests.

15. Of the $9,876,970 that related to the 2000-C transaction, the audit work papers reflected that, on the basis of the same type of analysis described above, NFC determined that $215,129 did not need to be written off. Of the remaining $9,661,841, NFC decided to write off only $5,173,512 in FY 2003, and indicated to Respondent that it would write off the remaining $4,488,329 in FY 2004.

16. In sum, of the $19.7 million in overstated account balances, NFC wrote off only $7,215,326 in FY 2003: the $2,041,814 hanging debit and $5,173,512 relating to the 2000-C transaction. At the same time, NFC made a separate, unexplained adjustment writing off an additional $78,674, bringing the total write-offs in FY 2003 to $7,294,000.

NFC's Adjustments that Offset $7.294 Million in Write-Offs

17. After identifying the overstatement, NFC recalculated the gains it previously had reported on sales related to the first two securitization transactions for FY 2003 – the 2002-B and 2003-A transactions. Whereas NFC had used its old methodology and estimates in initially calculating and reporting gains on those sales, NFC applied its new methodology and estimates in performing the recalculations. As a result, NFC arrived at an additional $6.259 million in gains.

18. NFC also made certain changes to the gain it initially calculated on sales related to the 2003-B transaction. Specifically, NFC reallocated certain transaction expenses between FY 2003 and FY 2004 and made certain interest rate adjustments. These changes resulted in additional gains of $1.035 million for FY 2003. Adding this $1.035 million to the $6.259 million derived from recalculating the 2002-B and 2003-A gains resulted in $7.294 million in additional gains.

19. Accordingly, in financial statements filed with NFC's Form 10-K on December 19, 2003 – three days after the $19.7 million overstatement was identified – the effect of the overstatement, including any potential impact on NIC's reported earnings, was neutralized by the decisions and adjustments described above. NFC's Form 10-K filing was accompanied by a Deloitte audit report, which Respondent authorized to be released on December 18, expressing an unqualified opinion on NFC's financial statements.

Respondent's Auditing Failures

20. Under the circumstances described above, an auditor proceeding in compliance with PCAOB standards would recognize the need to consider whether NFC's last-minute adjustments called for the auditor to revise his assessment of the risk of material misstatement due to fraud,[10/] or otherwise to reconsider the nature, timing, or extent of audit procedures[11/] in order to obtain the appropriate level of assurance concerning the financial statements. More generally, the due professional care required by PCAOB standards includes the element of professional skepticism, which is "an attitude that includes a questioning mind and a critical assessment of audit evidence" and an unwillingness to "be satisfied with less than persuasive evidence."[12/]

[10/] PCAOB standards require an auditor, without making assumptions about whether management is honest or dishonest (see AU § 230.09), to respond to certain events – including "last-minute adjustments by the entity that significantly affect financial results" and "undue time pressures imposed by management to resolve complex or contentious issues" – by factoring them into an objective assessment of the risk of material misstatement due to fraud. See AU § 316.68, Consideration of Fraud in a Financial Statement Audit. (In the predecessor version of AU § 316, which was in effect for the audit of NFC's FY 2003 financial statements, the corresponding provision is found at ¶ 25, rather than ¶ 68. See AU § 316A.25.)

[11/] Faced with factors suggesting an increased risk of material misstatement due to fraud, the application of appropriate professional skepticism involves such things as considering the need for additional procedures and additional corroboration of management's explanations or representations. See AU § 316.46. (In the predecessor version of AU 316, which was in effect for the audit of NFC's FY 2003 financial statements, the corresponding provision is found at ¶ 27, rather than ¶ 46. See AU § 316A.27.) Even apart from any risk of misstatement due to fraud, when information comes to an auditor's attention that differs significantly from the information on which the audit plan was based, the auditor may need to re-evaluate his or her audit procedures based on a revised consideration of audit risk and materiality. See AU § 312.33, Audit Risk and Materiality in Conducting an Audit.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

21. Following the December 16 discovery of the overstatement, however, Respondent did not comply with these standards. On each of the points described below, Respondent accepted, without reasonable basis, NFC's rationales for concluding that the overstatement did not affect earnings and, thus, failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support the unqualified opinion on NFC's financial statements.

22. In planning the audit, Respondent had set, at $4.1 million, the quantitative threshold used by the engagement team to, among other things, determine whether to treat a misstatement in NFC's financial statements as presumptively material. But shortly after the overstatement was discovered, he accepted a decision, made at Deloitte's NIC engagement team level, that the threshold for the NFC audit should be increased to $6.1 million. Respondent accepted that decision even though he had final responsibility for the NFC audit, believed that the original materiality threshold remained appropriate, and understood that the increased threshold would make it easier to treat known misstatements as immaterial.

23. The increased materiality threshold affected the engagement team's assessment of the approximately $4.5 million component of the overstatement related to the 2000-C transaction. Respondent understood that NFC intended to postpone the write-off of the $4.5 million to FY 2004, rather than take the write-off in FY 2003. He identified NFC's failure to write off the $4.5 million in FY 2003 as resulting in a misstatement. Had he applied the original $4.1 million materiality threshold, he would have been required by Deloitte internal guidance to treat that unadjusted audit difference as a presumptively material departure from GAAP.[13/] Applying the 50 percent higher threshold, however, Respondent treated the $4.5 million as presumptively immaterial on a quantitative basis. As a result, Respondent failed to evaluate with due care and professional skepticism whether the $4.5 million unadjusted audit difference was in fact material to NFC's financial statements.

[13/] Deloitte's internal guidance concerning evaluation of misstatements provided, in part: "If known misstatements (net of tax effects, if applicable), either individually or in the aggregate, exceed planning materiality, we generally conclude that the financial statements are materially misstated. In such event, the client needs to adjust some or all of the known misstatements until we can conclude that aggregate unadjusted misstatements are acceptably small."

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

24. Respondent also failed to evaluate with due care and professional skepticism NFC's approach to the approximately $7.8 million in errors related to the 2001-B and 2002-B transactions. Specifically, Respondent failed to evaluate whether, consistent with GAAP, NFC could avoid writing off the overstatement to income by identifying a purported unrealized gain on the fair value of a related asset.

25. Further, Respondent did not adequately assess the appropriateness of NFC's recalculation of gains on sales related to the three securitization transactions in 2003. Although Respondent knew that the recalculations resulted in $7.294 million of additional gains – which offset the portion of the overstatement that NFC had determined to write off – he did not evaluate with due care and professional skepticism whether that result might have been achieved by making inappropriate changes to previously reported estimates, including estimates that he knew had previously been judged by the engagement team to appear reasonable in all material respects. Moreover, even aside from that failure, Respondent noted that the recalculated gains were overstated by $1.5 million because of NFC's rounding of certain items to the nearest million, a practice which he specifically advised NFC to discontinue for future periods.[14/] Respondent neither caused NFC to reduce the additional recorded gains nor included the $1.5 million overstatement on the schedule of unadjusted audit differences.

26. Finally, even though he knew that the reconciliation process had already uncovered the approximately $19.7 million overstatement, Respondent authorized release of an unqualified audit opinion for FY 2003 before NFC had completed the suspense account reconciliations.[15/]

[14/] The new gain calculations also included several mathematical and input errors, all of which increased the recalculated gains, and none of which Respondent detected.

[15/] After the audit report was released and NFC's Form 10-K for FY 2003 was filed, the ongoing reconciliation process revealed that certain amounts partially written off in connection with the 2000-C securitization had not been recorded in error and need not have been written off.

ORDER

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanction agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Christopher E. Anderson is suspended for one (1) year from the date of this Order from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(1);

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(C) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(3), for one (1) year following the termination of the suspension ordered in paragraph A, Christopher E. Anderson's role in any audit of the financial statements of an issuer shall be restricted to that of "assistant," as that term is used in the Board's interim auditing standards, AU § 311.02(a), and may not include serving as the auditor with final responsibility for the audit (or any functionally equivalent but differently denominated role, such as "lead engagement partner" or "practitioner-in-charge") and may not include exercising authority either to sign a registered public accounting firm's name to an audit report or to consent to the use of a previously issued audit report for any issuer;

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $25,000 is imposed. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Anderson shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (b) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (c) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006; and (d) submitted under a cover letter which identifies Christopher E. Anderson as a respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Cordovano and Honeck, P.C. and Samuel D. Cordovano, CPA Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2008-004 December 18, 2008

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Cordovano and Honeck, P.C. (the "Firm" or "Cordovano and Honeck") and barring Samuel D. Cordovano, CPA ("Cordovano") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of one issuer client for its fiscal years ending December 31, 2003 ("FY 2003") and December 31, 2004 ("FY 2004") and one issuer client for its fiscal year ending June 30, 2004 ("FY 2004").

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Cordovano and Honeck, P.C. and Samuel D. Cordovano, CPA.

[1/] Cordovano may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after one (1) year from the date of this Order.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Cordovano and Honeck, P.C. is an accounting firm located in Denver, Colorado. At all relevant times, Cordovano and Honeck was licensed under the laws of the state of Colorado (Colorado State Board of Public Accountancy License No. FRM-736). Cordovano and Honeck is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board Rules.

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Cordovano in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Cordovano's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

2. Samuel D. Cordovano, 60, of Centennial, Colorado is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the state of Colorado (License No. CPA-6754). He is the Firm's President and, at all times relevant to this matter, was an associated person of the Firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

3. This matter involves violations of the PCAOB's auditing standards. As detailed below, in auditing the FY 2003 and FY 2004 financial statements of Celtron International, Inc. ("Celtron"),[3/] Respondents failed to perform, or reasonably ensure the performance of, sufficient audit procedures relating to Celtron's recognition of assets and liabilities connected with four purported acquisitions and failed to identify or appropriately address departures from generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP") related to the adequacy of Celtron's financial statement disclosures concerning the purported acquisitions and related to the recognition of an extraordinary gain on one transaction.[4/] In auditing the FY 2004 financial statements of Pinnacle Resources, Inc. ("Pinnacle"), Respondents failed to perform, or reasonably ensure the performance of, sufficient audit procedures relating to the valuation, presentation, and classification of certain research and development costs.

[3/] On or about May 22, 2006, Celtron changed its name to Satellite Security Corporation. On or about April 28, 2008, Satellite Security Corporation changed its name to Mobicom Corporation.

[4/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures, however, should not be understood as an indication that the Securities and Exchange Commission has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Professional Standards

4. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards and related professional practice standards.[5/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[6/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[7/] In connection with the audits of the financial statements of Celtron for FY 2003 and FY 2004 and Pinnacle for FY 2004, Respondents failed to do so, as described in more detail below.

Audit of Celtron's 2003 Financial Statements

5. Celtron is a Nevada corporation headquartered in Midrand, South Africa. Its common stock is registered under Section 12(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"). Celtron's public filings disclose that it has been primarily in the business of marketing vehicle locating and management systems and mobile technology solutions. At all relevant times, Celtron was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

6. The Firm was engaged as Celtron's auditor beginning with the audit of Celtron's financial statements for FY 2003. The Firm issued an audit report dated April 16, 2004, that was included in Celtron's Form 10-KSB/A filed with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") on May 26, 2004. In the audit report, the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion on Celtron's consolidated balance sheet as of December 31, 2003, and the related consolidated statement of operations, stockholders' equity (deficit), and cash flows for the period ended December 31, 2003. The Firm's audit report stated that Celtron's consolidated financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Celtron's financial position, results of operations and cash flows in conformity with U.S. GAAP. In addition, the report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America ("GAAS").[8/] Cordovano was the engagement partner who had final responsibility for the audit as that phrase is used in AU § 311, Planning and Supervision, and authorized the issuance of the audit report.

Failures to Perform Audit Procedures Concerning Reported Assets

7. In its FY 2003 Form 10-KSB/A, Celtron reported the following assets, valued in amounts totaling 61% of Celtron's total reported assets:

- $397,059 (26% of total assets) relating to license rights purportedly obtained in connection with Celtron's 2002 acquisition of Orbtech Holdings Ltd. ("Orbtech") from Celtron International, Ltd. ("CIL");
- $330,882 (22% of total assets) in goodwill relating to Celtron's acquisition of CJ Systems (Pty) Ltd ("CJ Systems"); and
- $199,265 (13% of total assets) in goodwill relating to Celtron's acquisition of MineWorx International (Pty) Ltd ("MineWorx").

[8/] The audit report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with GAAS. Respondents were required to conduct those audits in accordance with the PCAOB's interim auditing standards pursuant to PCAOB Rule 3200T, which took effect on April 25, 2003. However, at the time the audit was performed, the PCAOB's interim auditing standards were the same as GAAS as it existed on April 16, 2003, and, until PCAOB Auditing Standard No.1 took effect on May 24, 2004, it remained appropriate for auditors to refer to GAAS in their audit reports. Accordingly, while the reference to GAAS in the audit report was appropriate at the time, the standards pursuant to which the audit was required to be performed are more appropriately referred to as PCAOB auditing standards (or PCAOB standards), and that is how they are referred to in this Order.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

As described below, Respondents failed to perform sufficient audit procedures related to those reported assets.

8. Respondents failed to perform procedures to evaluate whether the license rights purportedly acquired in the Orbtech acquisition existed, were owned by Celtron, and were appropriately valued. Moreover, despite Orbtech's history of operating losses and negative cash flows, Respondents failed to evaluate whether the license rights were impaired. In addition, even though Respondents had information indicating that the Orbtech acquisition was a related party transaction,[9/] Respondents failed to take steps to determine whether it was a related party transaction and, if so, to satisfy themselves concerning the purpose and nature of the transaction and concerning the required accounting in the financial statements included in the FY 2003 Form 10-KSB/A.[10/]

9. Respondents also failed to perform sufficient audit procedures concerning the CJ Systems acquisition. First, despite being aware of inconsistent information concerning whether Celtron had issued any stock in connection with the transaction,[11/] Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures to evaluate whether and when Celtron owned CJ Systems. Respondents relied principally on an acquisition agreement purportedly signed on January 29, 2004 and obtained no audit evidence supporting a conclusion that Celtron owned CJ Systems as of Celtron's December 31, 2003 fiscal year end. Second, Respondents failed to evaluate the appropriateness of Celtron's valuation of its stock at approximately $.15 per share for purposes of reporting the purported acquisition, when the quoted market price of its stock on or about the date of the acquisition was never less than $.87 per share.[12/] Third, Respondents failed to test the reported goodwill related to the acquisition. Respondents obtained no evidence concerning whether Celtron obtained any assets or liabilities in the transaction, information without which Respondents could not evaluate the appropriateness of the recorded goodwill. More specifically, even though Celtron disclosed that it acquired CJ Systems to access certain distribution rights, Respondents did not evaluate whether those rights represented an identifiable intangible asset, and, if so, whether that asset should have been recognized apart from goodwill.[13/]

[9/] Celtron's public filings disclosed that CIL and Celtron were under common control at the time Celtron acquired Orbtech from CIL. See Celtron Form 8-K, filed June 20, 2001.

[10/] See AU § 334, Related Parties, ¶¶ .01 and .09.

[11/] Celtron disclosed in its FY 2003 Form 10-KSB/A that it had acquired CJ Systems through a subsidiary for 2,250,000 shares of stock. Respondents, however, had detailed shareholder lists for 2003 and 2004, and information from a transfer agent about total issued and outstanding shares, that appeared to be inconsistent with Celtron having issued any shares to acquire CJ Systems.

10. Similarly, Respondents failed to perform sufficient audit procedures concerning the MineWorx acquisition. First, Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures to evaluate whether Celtron owned MineWorx, relying principally on a document that referred to the possibility of an acquisition and failing to obtain sufficient evidence to support a conclusion that the transaction had occurred. Second, Respondents failed to test Celtron's valuation of the consideration provided in exchange for MineWorx, even despite the existence of significant conflicts in the information available to Respondents.[14/] Finally, Respondents failed to test the reported goodwill

[13/] GAAP describes criteria concerning whether to recognize an intangible asset apart from goodwill and states, among other things, that an intangible asset shall be recognized as an asset apart from goodwill if it arises from contractual or other legal rights or if it can be separated from the acquired entity and sold, transferred, licensed, rented, or exchanged. SFAS No. 141, ¶ 39.

[14/] Celtron disclosed that it acquired MineWorx for $200,000 and 262,500 shares of stock. Celtron's consolidated statement of shareholders' equity indicated zero value for the shares issued. Respondents, however, had information indicating that Celtron may have paid $46,324 in cash and that, for purposes of the goodwill computation, Celtron may have valued the shares issued at $152,941. In addition, even the $152,941 valuation would have reflected a per share value (approximately $.58) that related to the acquisition, again obtaining no evidence concerning whether Celtron obtained any assets or liabilities in the transaction.

Failure to Identify and Address Disclosure Issues

11. Pursuant to GAAP, Celtron's FY 2003 Form 10-KSB/A should have included various disclosures related to the acquisitions discussed above. As described below, Respondents, failed to identify and appropriately address certain disclosure issues in Celtron's financial statements.

12. The Orbtech acquisition was disclosed in Celtron's FY 2002 Form 10-KSB and related amended filings, but it was not until Celtron's third quarter of FY 2003 that Celtron first included the results of Orbtech's operations in its financial statements. In its FY 2003 Form 10-KSB/A, Celtron included a statement of operations for FY 2002 that included the results of Orbtech as if it had been a consolidated subsidiary since the beginning of FY 2002. Under GAAP, this constituted a change in the reporting entity,[15/] which should have been accompanied by a disclosure describing the nature of the change and the reason for it.[16/] Celtron provided no disclosure, however, as to why the manner of reporting had changed in FY 2003 or why the FY 2002 statement of operations included in the FY 2003 Form 10-KSB/A differed from the FY 2002 statement of operations presented in the FY 2002 Form 10-KSB. Respondents failed to identify and appropriately address this omission. In addition, as described above, Respondents had information indicating that the Orbtech acquisition was a related party transaction, but Respondents failed to take steps to determine whether it was a related party transaction and, if so, to satisfy themselves concerning the adequacy of Celtron's disclosures, including in the financial statements filed with the FY 2003 Form 10-KSB/A.[17]

ORDER

13. With respect to the purported acquisitions of CJ Systems and MineWorx, Celtron's FY 2003 10-KSB/A filing did not include certain disclosures that GAAP requires concerning any material business combination. Specifically, Celtron did not disclose (1) the periods for which the results of the operations of CJ Systems and MineWorx were included in the consolidated statement of operations of Celtron; (2) the basis for determining the value of the shares issued to consummate the acquisitions; (3) condensed balance sheets of CJ Systems and MineWorx as of the acquisition date; (4) pro forma results of operations as if the acquisitions had taken place on January 1, 2002, and (5) the reason for the MineWorx acquisition.[18/] Respondents failed to identify and appropriately address those omissions as well.

14. Finally, Celtron's FY 2003 10-KSB/A disclosed that it issued a total of 2,512,500 shares for acquisitions in 2003 – the acquisitions of CJ Systems and MineWorx. On its consolidated statement of changes in shareholders' equity, however, Celtron reported that in 2003 it issued 1,711,775 shares, at zero value, for acquisitions. Although the disclosure and the consolidated statement of changes in shareholders' equity could not both have been correct on this point, Respondents failed to identify and appropriately address the inconsistency. Moreover, Respondents had information indicating that (1) the shares reported on the consolidated statement of changes in shareholders' equity may have included 1,449,275 shares for an advance payment involving a third acquisition that was consummated in FY 2004, and (2) Celtron may have issued no shares in FY 2003 concerning the CJ Systems acquisition. Respondents failed to perform procedures to reconcile that information with the disclosure or otherwise to evaluate the disclosure in light of the information.

Audit of Celtron's 2004 Financial Statements

15. The Firm issued an audit report dated May 26, 2005, that was included in Celtron's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on June 1, 2005. In the audit report, the Firm expressed an audit opinion on Celtron's consolidated financial statements for FY 2004. The report stated that Celtron's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Celtron's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP. In addition, the report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. Cordovano was the engagement partner who had final responsibility for the audit.

16. In its FY 2004 Form 10-KSB, Celtron disclosed that it acquired certain technology from a principal shareholder in exchange for 11 million shares of stock. Celtron reported the transaction as a $4,071,922 charge on its statement of operations under the caption "stock-based compensation – software expense." Respondents had information indicating that the shareholder from which Celtron acquired the technology was CIL, the same party from which Celtron had acquired Orbtech and the related license rights discussed above. Celtron continued to report an asset relating to the license rights of $396,797, which approximated 16% of Celtron's total reported assets as of December 31, 2004. Respondents took no steps to determine whether there was any overlap between the license rights and the newly acquired technology that would have rendered the continued reporting of the license rights as an asset inappropriate. This was part of Respondents' broader failure, again, to perform procedures to test the existence and valuation of the license rights. Respondents also failed again to test the license rights for impairment, despite Orbtech's continued operating losses and negative cash flows.

17. Celtron's FY 2004 Form 10-KSB also disclosed that the previously announced agreement to acquire CJ Systems was never consummated. Celtron no longer reported any goodwill related to CJ Systems. Although the goodwill was no longer reported in FY 2004, Celtron continued to report on its FY 2004 financial statements a $396,797 asset – separate from the identically valued license rights discussed above – under the caption "other investments," and Respondents had information indicating that that reported asset related to CJ Systems. Respondents, however, failed to perform procedures to evaluate whether this asset existed, was owned by Celtron, and was appropriately valued.

18. In addition, Celtron disclosed in its FY 2004 Form 10-KSB that MineWorx had become insolvent and was no longer under Celtron's control. Celtron also disclosed that because of MineWorx' insolvency, Celtron exercised its right to obtain certain MineWorx assets and that it planned to run the former business of MineWorx. Celtron's FY 2004 Form 10-KSB otherwise treated the MineWorx acquisition as if it had not occurred: the previously reported goodwill asset was not reflected in the balance sheet and there was no related impairment loss reported in the statement of operations. In light of Celtron's disclosure about the insolvency of MineWorx, the previously recognized goodwill asset was impaired, and GAAP required that Celtron report an impairment loss as part of a separate line item on the statement of operations presenting the aggregate amount of goodwill impairment losses.[19/] Respondents failed to identify and address this departure from GAAP.

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

19. Finally, Celtron reported in its 2004 Form 10-KSB that it acquired approximately 94% of the issued and outstanding common stock of Knight Fuller, Inc. ("KFI") in exchange for an intangible asset developed by Celtron, and reported an extraordinary gain of $305,968 connected with the transaction.[20/] Celtron's recording of that gain, and related disclosures, involved at least the following four departures from GAAP, none of which was identified and appropriately addressed by Respondents:

a. According to KFI's public filings near the time of the transaction and at December 31, 2004, KFI had liabilities in excess of its assets. Under GAAP, the KFI liabilities should have been factored into the purchase accounting computation,[21/] which may have negated the extraordinary gain that Celtron recognized, but they were not factored into that computation.

b. Celtron disclosed that KFI's assets included 350,469 shares of Celtron's common stock valued at $192,758, and, according to the public filings of Celtron and KFI, Celtron included the cost of its own stock as part of the gain recognized in the transaction, which was inappropriate under GAAP.

c. Celtron disclosed that KFI's assets included 221,233 restricted shares of Sutter Holding Corp. ("Sutter"), valued at $132,740. Celtron included the value of the Sutter investment in the gain, but did not report the investment as an asset. Under GAAP, securities, like the Sutter investment, should be reported as assets.[22/] However, Celtron reflected the amount as a direct reduction to its retained earnings.

d. Despite its disclosure that it acquired 94% of KFI's issued and outstanding shares, Celtron did not consolidate and report the results of KFI in its consolidated financial statements as of December 31, 2004. Under GAAP, Celtron should have done so.[23/]

20. Respondents also failed to perform sufficient procedures concerning other aspects of the KFI transaction. First, despite the fact that Cordovano believed that the KFI transaction was with a related party, Respondents failed to satisfy themselves concerning the purpose and nature of the transaction and concerning the required financial statement accounting and disclosure.[24/] Second, Respondents performed no procedures to test the fair value of the intangible asset paid to acquire KFI.

Audit of Pinnacle Resources, Inc. 2004 Financial Statements

21. Pinnacle is a Wyoming corporation headquartered in Englewood, Colorado. Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act. Pinnacle's public filings disclose that during FY 2004 it was primarily in the business of mining ocean diamonds, refining tantalum, and developing vanadium/titanium, although it had not recognized any revenues during FY 2004 or earlier. At all relevant times, Pinnacle was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

22. The Firm was engaged as Pinnacle's auditor beginning with the audit of Pinnacle's financial statements for FY 2000. The Firm issued an audit report dated August 30, 2004 that was included in Pinnacle's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on October 13, 2004. In the audit report, the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion on Pinnacle's consolidated balance sheet as of June 30, 2004 and the related statements of operations, changes in shareholders' equity and cash

The report stated that the financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Pinnacle's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP. In addition, the report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. Cordovano was the engagement partner who had final responsibility for the audit.

23. According to Pinnacle's 2004 Form 10-KSB, Pinnacle was developing a machine called the Aqua Walker, which was a platform that could walk into the ocean and recover from the ocean floor diamondiferous gravels that were previously inaccessible by conventional recovery methods. Pinnacle disclosed that the Aqua Walker made its maiden walk in April 2003 and had completed certain sea trials. Pinnacle further disclosed that it was still conducting trial runs and that it was expecting to start commercial operations with the Aqua Walker toward the end of calendar year 2004.

24. For the period ended June 30, 2004, Pinnacle had capitalized approximately $380,000 in costs accumulated in connection with the design, development, and construction of the Aqua Walker. The $380,000 constituted approximately 48% of Pinnacle's total reported assets. Respondents, however, failed to evaluate whether capitalization of those costs was appropriate or whether, in light of the development status of the Aqua Walker, those costs should have been expensed.[25/] Even assuming that capitalization was appropriate, Respondents also failed to evaluate the appropriateness of the amount capitalized. Rather than obtain and critically assess any significant audit evidence concerning the Aqua Walker, Respondents relied solely on

It includes the conceptual formulation, design, and testing of product alternatives, construction of prototypes, and operation of pilot plants." SFAS No. 2, ¶ 11(a) further prescribes that "the costs of materials, equipment, or facilities that are acquired or constructed for a particular research and development project and that have no alternative future uses (in other research and development projects or otherwise) and therefore no separate economic values are research and development costs at the time the costs are incurred."

Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(G) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Cordovano and Honeck, P.C. is censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Samuel D. Cordovano is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i); and

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Clancy and Co., P.L.L.C., Jennifer C. Nipp, CPA, and Judith J. Clancy, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2009-001 March 31, 2009

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Clancy and Co., P.L.L.C. ("the "Firm" or "Clancy and Co."), barring one of its partners, Jennifer C. Nipp, CPA ("Nipp"), and suspending, for a period of one year from the date of this Order, the other partner, Judith J. Clancy ("Clancy") (collectively, "Respondents"), from being associated persons of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of an issuer client from 2003 to 2005.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Clancy and Co., Nipp, and Clancy.

[1/] Clancy and Co. may reapply for registration after one year (1) year from the date of this Order. Nipp may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Clancy and Co., P.L.L.C. is a public accounting firm located in Phoenix, Arizona. At all relevant times, Clancy and Co. was licensed under the laws of the state of Arizona to engage in the practice of public accounting (Firm Registration No. 01098-L). Clancy and Co.'s Arizona firm registration was placed on probation by the Arizona State Board of Accountancy ("Arizona Board") for a period of two years, commencing on May 27, 2008.[3/] Clancy and Co. is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules.

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

[3/] *See In the Matter of Certified Public Accountant Certificate No. 10871-R Issued to: Jennifer C. The Arizona Board disciplined the Firm and Nipp for failures to comply with PCAOB and other professional standards in the audits

2. Jennifer C. Nipp, 42, of Draper, Utah, is a certified public accountant who is licensed under the laws of the State of Arizona (License No. 10871-R), the Commonwealth of Kentucky (License No. 5942), and the State of California (License No. 78106). Nipp's Arizona license was placed on probation by the Arizona State Board of Accountancy for a period of two years, commencing on May 27, 2008.[4/] At all relevant times, she was a partner in the Firm and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

3. Judith J. Clancy, 66, of Phoenix, Arizona, is a certified public accountant who is licensed under the laws of the State of Arizona (License No. 8221-R) and the Commonwealth of Kentucky (License No. 5398). At all relevant times, she was the Managing Member of the Firm and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

4. This matter involves violations of PCAOB auditing standards by Respondents in the audits of the 2003, 2004, and 2005 financial statements of PacificNet, Inc. ("PNET"). Nipp and the Firm violated PCAOB auditing standards by failing to adopt appropriate measures to assure coordination with another accounting firm and using work of the other accounting firm without following up on indications that the work may have been inappropriate for use by the Firm. Nipp and the Firm also violated PCAOB auditing standards by failing to: a) perform sufficient audit procedures relating to PNET's accounting for certain business acquisitions in 2003, 2004, and 2005; b) identify and appropriately address departures from Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP") concerning PNET's 2004 statement of cash flows; and c) perform sufficient audit procedures relating to the adequacy of PNET's disclosure concerning a related party receivable in its 2005 financial statements. Respondents violated PCAOB standards by failing to take appropriate steps in a timely manner after learning of possible errors in PNET's accounting for stock options in 2003, 2004, and 2005. Finally, Clancy failed to exercise due care in her role as concurring partner reviewer in the audits of the 2003, 2004, and 2005 PNET financial statements.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Auditing Standards in Connection with the Audits of PNET's 2003, 2004, and 2005 Financial Statements

5. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[5/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[6/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[7/] As detailed below, Respondents failed to meet these standards in connection with the audits of the financial statements of PNET for 2003, 2004, and 2005.

6. PNET is a Delaware corporation based in Beijing, China. Its common stock is registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. PNET's public filings disclose that it is a holding company with primary interests in the telecommunications industry. At all relevant times, PNET was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

7. The Firm was engaged as PNET's auditor from March 2002 to January 2007. During that time, Respondents audited PNET's 2003, 2004, and 2005 financial statements. Respondents issued audit reports dated March 30, 2004 (included in PNET's Form 10-KSB filed April 2, 2004), April 15, 2005 (included in PNET's Form 10-KSB filed April 19, 2005), April 25, 2006 (included in PNET's Form 10-KSB filed April 28, 2006), and October 25, 2006 (a dual-dated reissue of the April 25, 2006 report, included in PNET's Form 10-KSB/A filed November 3, 2006[8/]), each of which were filed with the Commission. Each report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, except for the March 30, 2004 report, which stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards ("GAAS").[9/] In each of those audit reports, the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion and stated that, in the Firm's opinion, PNET's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, PNET's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with U.S. GAAP. For each of the audits, Nipp was the engagement partner who had final responsibility for the audit, and Clancy served as the concurring review partner.

8. In auditing PNET's 2003, 2004, and 2005 financial statements, Nipp and the Firm performed various audit procedures but also used a significant amount of audit work that was performed by a Hong Kong accounting firm that had been separately engaged by PNET. Nipp and the Firm determined that the nature and extent of their work was sufficient to enable the Firm to serve as principal auditor with respect to financial statements that PNET filed with the Commission,[10/] and the Firm assumed responsibility for the Hong Kong firm's work that it used.[11/]

[9/] Respondents were required to conduct the audit of the 2003 financial statements in accordance with the PCAOB's interim auditing standards pursuant to PCAOB Rule 3200T, which took effect on April 25, 2003. However, at the time Respondents performed the audit, the PCAOB's interim auditing standards were the same as GAAS as it existed on April 16, 2003, and, until PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 1 took effect on May 24, 2004, it remained appropriate for auditors to refer to GAAS in their audit reports. Accordingly, although the reference to GAAS in the March 30, 2004 audit report was appropriate at the time, the standards pursuant to which the audit was required to be performed were PCAOB standards, and that is how they are referred to in this Order.

[10/] AU § 543, Part of Audit Performed by Other Independent Auditors, describes factors relevant to an auditor's consideration of whether the nature and extent of the auditor's own participation in audit work is sufficient to enable the auditor to serve as the principal auditor and to report as such on the financial statements. See AU § 543.02.

[11/] Under AU § 543, a principal auditor who uses another auditor's work chooses between assuming responsibility for that work (in which case the principal auditor's report makes no reference to the other auditor's work or report) and not assuming such responsibility (in which case the principal auditor's report should make reference to the other auditor and clearly indicate the division of responsibility between the two auditors). See AU § 543.03.

9. As described below, in some instances, Nipp and the Firm failed to follow up on indications that the Hong Kong firm's work used by the Firm may not have been performed in accordance with PCAOB standards and may not have provided sufficient competent evidential matter relating to whether the financial statements comported with U.S. GAAP. In other instances, Nipp and the Firm failed to perform sufficient procedures in their own audit work.

Nipp's and the Firm's Failure to Adequately Coordinate with Another Auditor Whose Work They Used

10. PCAOB standards require a principal auditor to perform certain procedures when using the work of another auditor and assuming responsibility for that work.[12/] Those procedures include adopting appropriate measures to assure the coordination of the auditor's activities with those of the other auditor in order to achieve a proper review of matters affecting the consolidating or combining of accounts in the financial statements.[13/]

11. In using the Hong Kong firm's work in the audits of PNET's 2003, 2004, and 2005 financial statements, Nipp and the Firm failed to adopt appropriate measures to assure coordination with the Hong Kong firm. Nipp and the Firm never obtained representations from the Hong Kong firm that the Hong Kong firm's work that the Firm used on the 2003, 2004 and 2005 audits had been performed in accordance with PCAOB standards or had been done with the objective of assessing whether the financial statements were presented fairly in conformity with U.S. GAAP. With respect to the 2003 audit, Nipp and the Firm actually understood that the Hong Kong firm's work that the Firm used on the audit was performed in accordance with standards other than PCAOB standards and that the purpose of the Hong Kong firm's audit work was to assess the financial statements' compliance with accounting principles other than U.S. GAAP.

[12/] AU § 543.10 (principal auditor should "make inquiries concerning the professional reputation and independence of the other auditor" and "adopt appropriate measures to assure the coordination of his activities with those of the other auditor in order to achieve a proper review of matters affecting the consolidating or combining of accounts in the financial statements," including, considering procedures such as ascertaining through communication with the other auditor that the other auditor is familiar with relevant accounting principles, auditing standards, and financial reporting requirements and will conduct his or her audit and will report in accordance therewith); AU § 543.12 (describing certain information that the principal auditor must obtain, review, and retain).

Deficiencies in the Audit Procedures Performed by Nipp and the Firm

12. Nipp's and the Firm's PNET audits were deficient in other respects as well. In some cases, Nipp and the Firm failed to audit significant aspects of the financial statements even in cases where they understood that the Hong Kong firm had not done so. In other cases, Nipp and the Firm failed to perform procedures adequately or failed to identify and properly address GAAP departures in PNET's financial statements. In particular:

(a) In the audits of the 2003, 2004 and 2005 financial statements, Nipp and the Firm understood that PNET had relied upon an accounting standard other than U.S. GAAP to prepare its financial statements and then converted those financial statements into U.S. GAAP financial statements. Nipp and the Firm failed to evaluate whether PNET's purported conversions were appropriate.

(b) GAAP requires acquiring entities to "allocate the cost of an acquired entity to the assets acquired and liabilities assumed based on their estimated fair values at date of acquisition."[14/] Nipp understood during the audits of the 2003, 2004, and 2005 financial statements that PNET was recording the assets acquired and the liabilities assumed based on the acquirees' book value, which PNET claimed reasonably approximated fair value. Nipp and the Firm, however, failed to test management's assertion that the acquirees' book value reasonably approximated the estimated fair value.[15/]

(c) In assessing the appropriateness of PNET's 2004 statement of cash flows, Nipp and the Firm failed to appropriately address an error concerning PNET's reported reconciliation of net earnings to net cash used in operating activities. Specifically, the minority interest amount included on the reconciliation did not agree to the minority interest amount reported on PNET's 2004 Income

[15/] During 2003, PNET wrote off $1,186,000 of its acquired assets within weeks of their acquisition. Nipp and the Firm knew of these write-offs during the 2003 audit, but performed no audit procedures on them. In an S-1/A filed on November 13, 2006, PNET restated its 2003 Summary Consolidated Financial Data to reduce its 2003 losses before income tax, minority interest and discontinued operations by $1,186,000. The restatement showed that PNET had overstated its 2003 selling, general and administrative expenses by 75 percent and its 2003 net loss by 46 percent.

Statement. Although Nipp and the Firm identified the inconsistency, they did not address it other than to ask management about it and accept management's explanation.[16/]

(d) Assets reported on PNET's 2005 financial statements included a $1,215,000 loan receivable due from a related party. PNET's 2005 financial statements disclosed the amount of, counterparty to, purpose of, and collateral for the receivable, but did not disclose that, at December 31, 2005, approximately $1 million of the receivable was past due. Nipp and the Firm understood that the receivable was past due but failed to assess the adequacy of the disclosure in light of the omission of that information.[17/]

Inadequate Response to Subsequent Discovery of Possible Errors in PNET's Accounting for Stock Options

13. PNET's financial statements for 2003, 2004, and 2005, as originally reported, did not recognize certain expenses associated with the issuance of stock options to PNET executives and directors. In mid-December 2006, Respondents became aware of information suggesting that PNET's stock option expense accounting may have been inappropriate. Respondents recognized almost immediately that the information existed at the time of the Firm's audit reports and that had they been aware of it at the dates of those reports it might have affected the reports. As Respondents realized, PCAOB standards required them to take action as soon as practicable to determine whether the information was reliable and, if so, whether steps were necessary to prevent future reliance on the Firm's audit reports.[18/] Respondents, resigned from the engagement in mid-January 2007 without having taken any such action and then waited until February 2007 before contacting PNET to confirm the reliability of the information[19/] and quantifying the potential error.[20/]

[16/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures, however, should not be understood as an indication that the Commission has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP. In 2006, however, PNET restated its 2004 financial statements to revise its Statement of Cash Flows. See PNET's Form 10-KSB, filed on April 28, 2006.

[17/] AU § 431.02, Adequacy of Disclosure in Financial Statements, requires an auditor to consider the adequacy of an issuer's financial statement disclosures and to take certain steps if the financial statements omit information required by GAAP. In its financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2006, PNET recorded a $993,000 provision relating to the receivable. See PNET's Form 10-K, filed on May 11, 2007, p. F-33.

Clancy's Concurring Reviews

14. An auditor who undertakes to perform a concurring review has "a duty to perform that task professionally,"[21/] which includes a duty to perform the task with due care and professional skepticism.[22/] In her role as the Firm's concurring partner reviewer for the audits of PNET's 2003, 2004, and 2005 financial statements, Clancy understood that PNET relied upon an accounting standard other than U.S. GAAP to prepare its financial statements. Clancy understood that PNET had converted those financial statements into U.S. GAAP financial statements and that neither the Hong Kong firm nor Nipp and the rest of the Firm's engagement team had performed audit procedures to evaluate whether PNET's purported conversion was appropriate. Clancy, understanding that no such audit procedures were performed, still concurred with the Firm's audit opinions for the 2003, 2004, and 2005 financial statements. In so doing, she failed to exercise due professional care in her concurring partner reviews.

[18/] See AU § 561.04, Subsequent Discovery of Facts Existing at the Date of the Auditor's Report.

[19/] AU § 561 requires the auditor to undertake to determine whether the information is reliable even when the auditor has resigned or been discharged. See AU § 9561, Subsequent Discovery of Facts Existing at the Date of the Auditor's Report: Auditing Interpretations of Section 561.

[20/] After Respondents notified PNET's management and audit committee of the possible errors in its accounting for stock options, PNET restated its compensation expense for 2003, 2004, and 2005. See PNET's Form 10-K, filed on May 11, 2007.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Clancy and Co., P.L.L.C. is revoked;

B. After one (1) year from the date of this Order, Clancy and Co., P.L.L.C. may reapply for registration by filing an application pursuant to PCAOB Rule 2101;

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Jennifer C. Nipp is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i);

D. After two (2) years from the date of this Order, Nipp may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm, and any such petition shall be filed by submitting it to Office of the Secretary of the PCAOB; and

E. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Judith J. Clancy is suspended for one (1) year from the date of this Order from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Drakeford & Drakeford, LLC and John A. DellaDonna, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2009-002 June 16, 2009

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Drakeford & Drakeford, LLC (the "Firm") and suspending John DellaDonna, CPA ("DellaDonna") from being associated with a registered public accounting firm for a period of one year from the date of this Order.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning (1) a misleading representation made by Respondents in connection with PCAOB inspection processes and (2) a violation of PCAOB auditing standards relating to audit documentation.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Drakeford & Drakeford, LLC and John DellaDonna, CPA.

[1/] Drakeford & Drakeford, LLC may reapply for registration after one (1) year from the date of this Order.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Drakeford & Drakeford, LLC is a public accounting firm located in Mableton, Georgia. Drakeford & Drakeford, LLC was formed in 1999, and John DellaDonna is a partner and the only employee of the Firm. At all relevant times, Drakeford & Drakeford, LLC was licensed under the laws of the State of Georgia to engage in the practice of public accounting (license no. ACF004373). Drakeford & Drakeford, LLC is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

2. John A. DellaDonna, 62, of Mableton, Georgia, is a certified public accountant licensed in Georgia (license no. CPA003424), New York (license no. 090884), and New Jersey (license no. 20CC03066800). At all relevant times, DellaDonna was a partner and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

B. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rule 4006

3. On March 9, 2006, the Board issued a report concerning its first inspection of Drakeford & Drakeford, LLC, conducted late in 2004. The report described, among other things, certain concerns about the Firm's quality control policies and procedures. Pursuant to section 104(g)(2) of the Act, the portion of the report describing those concerns was initially kept nonpublic, but was subject to being made public if the Firm failed to address those concerns to the Board's satisfaction within 12 months.[3/]

4. On March 5, 2007, the Firm, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 4009(a), submitted information to the Board's Division of Registration and Inspections ("Inspections") concerning how the Firm had addressed the quality control concerns described in the inspection report. On July 17, 2008, Inspections, also pursuant to Rule 4009(a), sent the Firm notice that Inspections intended to recommend that the Board determine that the Firm had not satisfactorily addressed those concerns. On July 23, 2008, the Firm, on its own initiative, supplemented its Rule 4009(a) submission to provide further evidence of improvements the Firm had made before the March 9, 2007 deadline by which the Firm needed to take sufficient steps to improve if the Firm hoped to keep the report's quality control discussion nonpublic. Among other things, the supplemental Rule 4009(a) submission included audit work papers that the Firm purported to have prepared in conducting a certain audit in 2006 (hereafter, "the 2006 audit"). The Firm asserted that those work papers provided additional evidence of relevant quality control improvements during the 12-month period.

5. Separate from the Rule 4009(a) quality control remediation process related to the first inspection of the Firm, Inspections had conducted a second inspection of the Firm in August 2007. In that inspection, Inspections had collected and reviewed certain of the Firm's work papers related to the 2006 audit. Because Inspections had maintained copies of those work papers, they were available for comparison with the work papers included in the Firm's July 23, 2008 supplemental Rule 4009(a) submission. Inspections noticed that certain work papers included with that submission contained additional material that had not been present in the audit file when the Firm had been inspected in August 2007.

[3/] Neither the Act nor Board rules require a firm to address the quality control criticisms in an inspection report to the Board's satisfaction. Rather, the Act provides that doing so will result in the Board's quality control criticisms remaining nonpublic, and thereby provides an incentive for firms to do. See generally The Process for Board Determinations Regarding Firms' Efforts to Address Quality Control Criticisms in Inspection Reports, PCAOB Release No. 104-2006-077 (March 21, 2006).

6. Inspections contacted DellaDonna and inquired about whether changes had been made to the work papers since the audit file had been reviewed by the PCAOB inspectors in 2007. DellaDonna initially denied having made any changes to the work papers. Only after Inspections staff told DellaDonna that the staff had copies of the work papers from the 2007 inspection and could compare them with the July 23, 2008 supplemental Rule 4009(a) submission did DellaDonna admit that he may have added some notes. Inspections staff requested that DellaDonna identify all such changes and additions to the work papers. On July 31, 2008, DellaDonna provided documentation to Inspections identifying thirteen work papers containing material that had been added since the 2007 inspection.

7. PCAOB Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate With Inspectors, states that –

> [e]very registered public accounting firm, and every associated person of a registered public accounting firm, shall cooperate with the Board in the performance of any Board inspection. Cooperation shall include, but is not limited to, cooperating and complying with any request, made in furtherance of the Board's authority and responsibilities under the Act, to – (a) provide access to, and the ability to copy, any record in the possession, custody, or control of such firm or person, and (b) provide information by oral interviews, written responses, or otherwise.

8. The Rule 4006 cooperation obligation includes an obligation not to provide misleading documents or information in connection with the Board's inspection processes. This obligation applies with no less force to information or communications that a firm or person decides on its own to provide – such as a Rule 4009(a) submission made in an effort to persuade Inspections to recommend a favorable quality control remediation determination – than it does to information that the Board specifically requires a firm or person to provide. Respondents' conduct in making a misleading representation concerning documentation submitted as evidence of quality control improvement in connection with the Board's Rule 4009 process violated PCAOB Rule 4006.

C. Respondents violated PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3

9. Under PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS No. 3"), any additions to audit documentation after the audit report release date, "must indicate the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it."[4/] As described above, thirteen work papers submitted by Respondents as part of the July 2008 supplemental Rule 4009(a) submission contained additional information that had been added after the report release date. Respondents violated AS No. 3 by failing to include with those work papers any indication of the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared it, and the reason for adding it.

10. In addition, for each of five sets of work papers in the 2006 audit file, Respondents added a cover page indicating that those documents had been updated after the audit report release date.[5/] For each of those sets of work papers, Respondents' indication of the additions and the reasons for them was limited to the statement, on the cover page, that "[t]he attached documents were updated to include procedures performed in other sections of the work papers." Although each cover page is dated and indicates that DellaDonna prepared it, there is no indication, in either the cover pages or the documents attached to them, of the ways in which those documents were updated. Without any more specific indication of what was added to the documentation, and without any more specific explanation than "to include procedures performed in other sections of the work papers," Respondents failed to satisfy both the fundamental requirement that additions to the work papers be identifiable as such and the requirement to indicate the reasons for the additions.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105 (c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Drakeford & Drakeford, LLC is revoked;

B. After one (1) year from the date of this Order, Drakeford & Drakeford, LLC may reapply for registration by filing an application pursuant to PCAOB Rule 2101; and

5/ The five sets of work papers referred to here were not included as part of the Firm's July 23, 2008 supplemental Rule 4009(a) submission.

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), John A. DellaDonna is suspended for one (1) year from the date of this Order from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(1).

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Thomas J. Linden, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2009-004 August 11, 2009

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is (1) barring Thomas J. Linden, CPA ("Respondent") from being associated with a registered public accounting firm and (2) imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $75,000 against him.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the fiscal year ("FY") 2003 audits of the financial statements of two issuer clients.

I.

On January 9, 2009, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. As required by section 105(c)(2) of the Act, these proceedings were not public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted,

---

[1/] Respondent may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Thomas J. Linden, 46, of Western Springs, Illinois, is a certified public accountant licensed in Illinois (license no. 065023618). At all relevant times, he was a partner in the Chicago, Illinois office of the registered public accounting firm of Deloitte & Touche LLP ("Deloitte") and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

2. This matter concerns Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and professional standards in connection with Deloitte's audits of the FY 2003 financial statements of Navistar Financial Corporation ("NFC") and its ultimate parent, Navistar International Corporation ("NIC"). This conduct occurred in the context of NFC's discovery—shortly before NFC and NIC planned to file their Forms 10-K—of approximately $19.7 million of apparent errors resulting in an overstatement of NFC's assets, revenues, and earnings (the "overstatement"). NIC had already publicly announced its fourth-quarter earnings when the overstatement was discovered. Because NFC's financial results were consolidated into NIC's financial statements, correction of the overstatement created the prospect that NIC would have to revise its previously-announced earnings.

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

3. Respondent helped NIC avoid the possibility of a revision of its reported results and assisted NIC and NFC to meet their internal deadline for filing their Forms 10-K. Upon learning of the overstatement, Respondent (1) initiated an increase of approximately 50 percent in Deloitte's planned tolerance for misstatements in NFC's reported financial results (an increase that the NFC engagement partner adopted); (2) authored, with the assistance of a member of the NFC engagement team, an NFC audit work paper that inaccurately characterized the reasons for and circumstances surrounding the increase; (3) failed to evaluate adequately the risk that NIC's financial statements were materially misstated due to error or fraud; and (4) otherwise failed to act with the requisite due professional care and professional skepticism.

C. Respondent Failed to Comply with PCAOB Auditing Standards in Connection With the FY 2003 NIC and NFC Audits

4. NIC is a Delaware corporation with principal executive offices in Warrenville, Illinois. NIC is a holding company with several operating subsidiaries, including NFC. Truck and engine manufacturing represents the majority of NIC's business activities. NIC, whose common stock is registered under Section 12(b) of the Securities Act of 1934, is an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). At the time of the events described in this Order, Deloitte (and its predecessor firms) had served as the outside auditor for NIC (and its corporate predecessors) for nearly a century. The Audit Committee of NIC's Board of Directors dismissed Deloitte as its outside auditor in April 2006.

5. NFC is a Delaware corporation with principal executive offices in Schaumburg, Illinois. NFC issues debt securities in the public markets and is required to file reports under Section 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. At all relevant times, NFC was an "issuer" as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). NFC, a second-tier, wholly-owned subsidiary of NIC, provided financing for new and used trucks sold by another NIC subsidiary and its dealers. Part of NFC's business included securitizing and selling loans and leases through special purpose entities, which then issued securities to investors. NFC retained interests in, and continued to service, the securitized loans and leases.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

6. Respondent began working on the NIC audit engagement in 1994. He became the lead engagement partner and Lead Client Service Partner for the NIC engagement in 1997 and remained in those roles through completion of the FY 2003 audit, when he rotated off the engagement. In an audit report dated December 18, 2003, and included in NIC's Form 10-K filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission") on December 19, 2003, Deloitte expressed an unqualified opinion on NIC's statements of consolidated financial condition as of October 31, 2003 and October 31, 2002, and the related statements of consolidated income, comprehensive income, and cash flow for each of the three years in the period ended October 31, 2003. Deloitte's audit report stated that the audit had been conducted in accordance with U.S. generally accepted auditing standards[3/] and that, in Deloitte's opinion, NIC's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, its financial position in conformity with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP"). Respondent had final responsibility for the NIC audit as that phrase is used in AU § 311, Planning and Supervision, and authorized issuance of the audit report on December 18, 2003, concurrent with Deloitte's issuance of the NFC FY 2003 audit report. During the final days of the FY 2003 audit, Respondent also performed certain procedures in the NFC audit as described in this Order, although he was not a member of Deloitte's engagement team for the NFC audit (the "NFC engagement team").

7. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that associated persons of registered public accounting firms comply with the Board's auditing standards.[4/] Under these standards, an auditor may express an

[3/] Deloitte's FY 2003 audit reports for NIC and NFC stated that the audits were conducted in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards in the United States of America ("GAAS"). Respondent was required to conduct the audits in accordance with the PCAOB's interim auditing standards pursuant to PCAOB Rule 3200T, which took effect on April 25, 2003. However, at the time of the FY 2003 NIC and NFC audits, the PCAOB's interim auditing standards were the same as GAAS as it existed on April 16, 2003, and, until PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 1 took effect on May 24, 2004, it remained appropriate for auditors to refer to GAAS in their audit reports. Accordingly, although the references to GAAS in Deloitte's reports for NIC and NFC were appropriate at the time, the standards pursuant to which the audits were required to be performed are more appropriately referred to as PCAOB auditing standards (or PCAOB standards), and that is how they are referred to in this Order.

unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[5/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, maintain professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[6/] Under PCAOB standards, representations from management are part of the evidential matter that an auditor obtains, but management representations are not a substitute for the application of those auditing procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for the auditor's opinion.[7/] PCAOB standards also provide that when information comes to an auditor's attention that differs significantly from the information on which the audit plan was based, the auditor may need to re-evaluate his or her audit procedures based on a revised consideration of audit risk and materiality.[8/] Respondent failed to comply with these standards in connection with the FY 2003 audits of NIC and NFC.

NIC's Earnings Announcement

8. By early December 2003, the Deloitte engagement teams' field work on the NIC and NFC audits was substantially complete and NIC management prepared to publicly announce its fourth-quarter and year-end results. Respondent knew that NIC routinely communicated with securities analysts at the end of each reporting period to discuss the company's financial and operating results and to provide earnings guidance for future periods. On December 1, 2003, Respondent attended a telephonic meeting of NIC's Audit Committee during which NIC's fourth-quarter and year-end results were reviewed in anticipation of an upcoming conference call with analysts and a public release on Form 8-K. He informed the Audit Committee at that time that Deloitte had substantially completed its audit and expected to issue an unqualified report.

ORDER

9. On December 2, 2003, NIC management hosted a conference call with securities analysts to announce, among other things, NIC's fourth-quarter and year-end results. NIC informed analysts that its fourth-quarter net income from continuing operations, when adjusted for restructuring costs, was $0.72 per share. NIC management noted that these results were "on the top side of the previous guidance we had provided" to the public at the end of the third quarter.[9/] Respondent was aware of the substance of NIC's earnings announcement prior to the completion of the NIC and NFC audits.

Audit Committee Communication

10. On December 8, 2003, Respondent informed the Audit Committee that Deloitte's FY 2003 audit of NIC's consolidated financial statements was substantially complete. At that time, Respondent expected that the Deloitte audit reports would be issued and NIC's and NFC's Forms 10-K would be filed with the Commission on December 18, 2003. This expectation was consistent with the companies' past practice of filing their Forms 10-K with the Commission before the Christmas holiday, several weeks in advance of the regulatory deadline (which fell on January 29, 2004 for the FY 2003 financial statements).

Discovery of Overstated Balances

11. Although Respondent's December 8, 2003 Audit Committee communication indicated that the audit of NIC's consolidated financial statements was substantially complete, the NFC engagement team was still awaiting NFC's reconciliation of suspense accounts used to account for cash disbursements and collections related to NFC's securitization transactions.

12. On the evening of December 16, 2003, the NFC engagement partner advised Respondent that the ongoing suspense account reconciliations had revealed potential overstatements in the balances of certain accounts. The NFC engagement team had been advised by NFC management that cash outlays totaling approximately $17.7 million had not been appropriately recorded, and an asset, now worthless, was recorded on NFC's books at approximately $2.0 million. These apparent errors resulted in an overstatement of NFC's assets, revenue, and earnings, according to an NFC audit work paper.

NFC's Accounting Decisions and Adjustments

13. Following discovery of the overstatement, NFC made a series of accounting decisions on December 17 and 18 that had the net result of avoiding any impact on NIC's reported earnings. First, NFC identified rationales for writing off less than half of the overstatement in 2003. Second, through recalculations of estimated securitization gains, NFC identified purported additional gains that offset those write-offs.

14. Accordingly, in financial statements filed with NFC's Form 10-K on December 19, 2003, the effect of the overstatement, including any potential impact on NIC's reported earnings, was neutralized.

Respondent's Knowledge of NFC's Accounting Decisions and Adjustments

15. Respondent knew, following the discovery of the overstatement, that NFC and NIC executives had a "certain level of anxiety" concerning the potential size of the overstatement and that NIC management would prefer not to revise its announced earnings. And he knew that both NIC and NFC executives attended and participated in meetings related to the overstatement.

16. By the time he authorized issuance of Deloitte's audit report for NIC on or about December 18, 2003, Respondent knew that NFC had made adjustments to its FY 2003 gain calculations that had the effect of neutralizing the write-offs made in connection with the discovery of the overstatement. An analysis prepared by the NFC engagement partner, and transmitted to Respondent on December 18, showed a $7.294 million write-off and an offsetting $7.294 million increase from additional gains related to NFC's FY 2003 securitization transactions.

17. Respondent also knew that NFC postponed the write-off of $4.5 million of the overstatement to the first-quarter of FY 2004, without identifying a sufficient basis under GAAP to do so. And he knew that in recalculating its securitization gains, NFC rounded certain figures to the nearest million dollars. The NFC engagement partner told Respondent in an email that the rounding resulted in a $1.5 million overstatement in the recalculated gains.

Respondent's Auditing Failures

18. Under the circumstances described above, an auditor proceeding in compliance with PCAOB standards would recognize the need to consider whether the company's last-minute adjustments called for the auditor to revise his assessment of the risk of material misstatement due to fraud,[10/] or otherwise to reconsider the nature, timing, or extent of audit procedures[11/] in order to obtain the appropriate level of assurance concerning the financial statements. More generally, the due professional care required by PCAOB standards includes the element of professional skepticism, which is "an attitude that includes a questioning mind and a critical assessment of audit evidence" and an unwillingness to "be satisfied with less than persuasive evidence."[12/]

[10/] PCAOB standards require an auditor, without making assumptions about whether management is honest or dishonest (see AU § 230.09), to respond to certain events—including "last-minute adjustments by the entity that significantly affect financial results" and "undue time pressures imposed by management to resolve complex or contentious issues"—by factoring them into an objective assessment of the risk of material misstatement due to fraud. See AU § 316.68, Consideration of Fraud in a Financial Statement Audit. (In the predecessor version of AU § 316, which was in effect for the audits of NFC's and NIC's FY 2003 financial statements, the corresponding provision is found at ¶ 25, rather than ¶ 68. See AU § 316A.25.)

[11/] Faced with factors suggesting an increased risk of material misstatement due to fraud, the application of appropriate professional skepticism involves such things as considering the need for additional procedures and additional corroboration of management's explanations or representations. See AU § 316.46. (In the predecessor version of AU § 316, which was in effect for the audits of NFC's and NIC's FY 2003 financial statements, the corresponding provision is found at ¶ 27, rather than ¶ 46. See AU § 316A.27.) Even apart from any risk of misstatement due to fraud, when information comes to an auditor's attention that differs significantly from the information on which the audit plan was based, the auditor may need to re-evaluate his or her audit procedures based on a revised consideration of audit risk and materiality. See AU § 312.33, Audit Risk and Materiality in Conducting an Audit.

ORDER

19. Following the December 16, 2003 discovery of the overstatement, however, Respondent failed to comply with these standards in connection with his role in the NFC and NIC audits. Although he was the engagement partner for the NIC audit, after the overstatement was discovered, Respondent initiated, and the NFC engagement partner adopted, an increase in Deloitte's planned tolerance for error in the NFC audit. Respondent also authored, with the assistance of a member of the NFC engagement team, an NFC work paper that inaccurately characterized the reasons for and circumstances surrounding the increase. And he failed to assess with due care and professional skepticism the risk that NIC's financial statements were materially misstated due to error or fraud.

The Increase in NFC's Planning Materiality

20. In planning the FY 2003 audit for NFC, the NFC engagement partner had set, at pre-tax income of $4.1 million, the quantitative threshold to be used to determine, among other things, whether to treat a misstatement in NFC's financial statements as presumptively material. The NFC engagement partner had used the same 5 percent threshold, known as the "planning materiality" threshold, in all four of his years as the engagement partner for the NFC audit. In those four years, Respondent had no involvement in setting planning materiality for NFC.

21. The morning after the discovery of the overstatement, however, Respondent reviewed the planning materiality threshold that the NFC engagement partner had set. He then initiated, and the NFC engagement partner adopted, an increase to 7.5 percent of pre-tax income, or $6.1 million, thus effectively raising by 50 percent a key benchmark used to help determine how much error would be tolerated in NFC's financial statements. The increase to the materiality threshold made it easier for NFC to avoid correction of misstatements associated with the overstatement.

Respondent's Documentation of
The Planning Materiality Increase

22. The increase in NFC's planning materiality threshold was documented in a December 17, 2003 memorandum from Respondent to the NFC audit files (the "materiality memo"). The materiality memo stated that "NFC's materiality calculation for 2003 was not calculated in a manner that was consistent with its parent – NIC and [did not] properly incorporate[ ] all of the right qualitative factors." However, there is no requirement that materiality for a manufacturing parent and a wholly-owned financial services subsidiary be calculated in a consistent manner.[13/] Planning materiality was increased to make it easier to issue an unqualified audit opinion despite known misstatements in NFC's financial statements.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

23. The materiality memo also included certain supporting detail that did not accurately characterize the circumstances in which Respondent initiated the increase of NFC's planning materiality. Specifically, the materiality memo stated: "During our year end audit summary process, I reviewed the materiality calculations of all of the subsidiaries of [NIC] including Navistar Financial Corporation (NFC) to ensure consistency with the materiality used for the parent company and to provide concurrence as to the calculated amounts." In fact, it was the discovery of the overstatement, not the year-end audit summary process, that led Respondent to review NFC's planning materiality.

The Effect of the Increased Planning Materiality

24. The increased materiality threshold affected the NFC engagement team's assessment of the approximately $4.5 million component of the overstatement. Respondent understood that NFC intended to postpone the write-off of that $4.5 million to FY 2004, rather than take the write-off in FY 2003. Respondent also knew that, if the original $4.1 million materiality threshold were applied, the NFC engagement partner would have been required by Deloitte's internal guidance to treat that $4.5 million unadjusted audit difference as presumptively material to NFC's financial statements.[14/] Applying the 50 percent higher threshold, however, enabled the NFC engagement team to treat the $4.5 million as presumptively immaterial on a quantitative basis under Deloitte's internal guidance.

[13/] PCAOB standards provide that materiality assessments should "vary with the size and complexity of the entity" and take into account "[c]ertain entity-related factors." AU § 312.15.

[14/] Deloitte's internal guidance concerning evaluation of misstatements provided, in part: "If known misstatements (net of tax effects, if applicable), either individually or in the aggregate, exceed planning materiality, we generally conclude that the financial statements are materially misstated. In such event, the client needs to adjust some or all of the known misstatements until we can conclude that aggregate unadjusted misstatements are acceptably small."

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Respondent's Approach to Materiality at NIC

25. Because NFC's financial results were consolidated into NIC's, Respondent was required to evaluate whether any misstatements identified in NFC's financial statements were material to NIC's financial statements. PCAOB standards provide that, "[i]n evaluating the effects of misstatements, the auditor should include both qualitative and quantitative considerations."[15/] In determining whether an unadjusted amount in dispute with management is qualitatively material, PCAOB standards identify certain factors as relevant, including:

- "[t]he sensitivity of the circumstances surrounding the misstatement;"
- "[t]he effect of misstatements of earnings when contrasted with expectations;"
- "[t]he motivation of management;"
- "[t]he existence of offsetting effects of individually significant but different misstatements;" and
- "[t]he risk that possible additional undetected misstatements would affect the auditor's evaluation."[16/]

26. Related guidance similarly advises the auditor to consider whether management might be improperly refusing to take a write-off to avoid a charge to reported earnings.[17/] Specifically, that guidance: (a) provides that it is "unlikely that it is ever 'reasonable' . . . not to correct known misstatements—even immaterial ones—as part of an ongoing effort directed by or known to senior management for the purposes of 'managing' earnings;"[18/] and (b) advises auditors that they "should exercise great care when netting 'hard' . . . differences [i.e., known errors] and 'soft' . . . differences [i.e., differences based on estimates]," especially when the netting is done at the "[l]ast-minute."[19/]

27. In evaluating whether NIC's financial statements were free from material misstatement, Respondent failed sufficiently to assess the qualitative factors discussed above. At the time of his assessment, Respondent understood that (1) NFC had offset any overstatement-related write-offs by recalculating its securitization gains; (2) NFC had rounded certain figures to the nearest million dollars in recalculating those gains, thereby increasing the recalculated gains by $1.5 million; (3) NFC and NIC had not provided a sufficient basis under GAAP to delay the write-off of $4.5 million of the overstatement; (4) NIC and NFC executives had a "certain level of anxiety" concerning the potential size of the NFC overstatement; (5) NIC management preferred not to revise its announced earnings; and (6) a public company's stock price can be affected when projected earnings are missed. Under the circumstances, Respondent did not obtain reasonable assurance that NIC's financial statements were free from material misstatement due to error or fraud.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanction agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Lawrence Scharfman CPA PA, and Lawrence Scharfman, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2009-005 August 11, 2009

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Lawrence Scharfman CPA PA (the "Firm") and barring Lawrence Scharfman CPA ("Scharfman") (collectively "Respondents") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' violations of Section 10A(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"), PCAOB rules, and PCAOB auditing and independence standards, in auditing the financial statements of three issuer clients during the years 2006 and 2007.

I.

On June 15, 2009, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondents. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) of the Act, these proceedings were not public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205 that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds that[1/]:

A. Respondents

1. Lawrence Scharfman CPA PA is a public accounting firm located in Boynton Beach, Florida. It is licensed under the laws of the State of Florida to engage in the practice of public accounting (license no. AC0030673). The Firm is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules.

2. Lawrence Scharfman, 76, is a certified public accountant who is licensed under the laws of the states of Florida (license no. AC0030673) and New York (license no. 023532-1). At all relevant times, Scharfman was the President and the sole shareholder of the Firm, and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of Prospero Minerals Corp. ("Prospero"), Cal-Bay International Inc. ("Cal-Bay"), and LitFunding Corp. ("LitFunding"). As detailed below, Respondents failed to perform procedures required by PCAOB auditing standards during the audit of the financial statements of their issuer clients.

4. Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the March 31, 2006 ("FY 2006") and March 31, 2007 ("FY 2007") financial statements of

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

Prospero. These violations included failing to: (a) plan the audit work; (b) perform sufficient audit procedures on Prospero's largest reported asset; (c) address known material inconsistencies between the other information contained in the FY 2006 10KSB and the financial statements; and (d) assess whether a significant stock issuance was properly valued, disclosed and reported. Respondents also failed to maintain independence from Prospero when, during the course of this engagement, Mr. Scharfman agreed to accept 200,000 shares of company stock.

5. Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in their audit of Cal-Bay's 2005 financial statements by: (a) failing to perform sufficient procedures to test the valuation of two assets which, together, constituted more than 90 percent of Cal-Bay's total reported assets; (b) failing to take steps to prevent reliance on their audit opinion after concluding that the previously issued 2005 financial statements were misleading; and (c) adding documents to their work papers after the documentation completion date without complying with PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS3"). The Firm, moreover, failed to take the steps required by Section 10A(b) of the Exchange, after becoming aware that an illegal act had occurred. Mr. Scharfman omitted to take any steps to cause the Firm to comply with Section 10A(b).

6. Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in their audit of LitFunding's 2005 and 2006 financial statements by: (a) failing to test the adequacy of a reserve for an asset which constituted 85 percent and 40 percent of LitFunding's 2005 and 2006 total reported assets, respectively; and (b) adding documents to their work papers after the documentation completion date without complying with AS3.

C. Respondents Violated Section 10A(b) of the Exchange Act, and PCAOB Rules, Auditing Standards, and Independence Standards accordance with PCAOB standards.[3/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[4/] PCAOB rules and standards require associated persons of registered public accounting firms to comply with certain independence restrictions, including restrictions against committing to acquire a financial interest in an audit client.[5/] As detailed below, Respondents failed to meet these standards in connection with the audits of three issuers: the audits of the financial statements of Prospero for FY 2006 and 2007, Cal-Bay for FY 2005, and LitFunding for FY 2005 and 2006. Moreover, Section 10A(b) of the Exchange Act requires firms to take certain steps after becoming aware that an illegal act has taken place. The Firm violated Section 10A(b) in the course of the Cal-Bay engagement. PCAOB Rule 3502 requires that associated persons not omit to take action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that the omission will directly and substantially contribute to a violation by the firm of the securities laws. Mr. Scharfman violated this rule by failing to cause the Firm to take the steps Section 10A(b) required.

Audit of Prospero Minerals Corp.'s 2006 and 2007 Financial Statements

8. At all relevant times, Prospero was a Nevada corporation based in New York City, NY. Its common stock is registered with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is dually quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. Prospero's public filings disclosed that at all relevant times it was an exploration stage company engaged in the acquisition and development of mineral properties. 9. The Firm was engaged as Prospero's auditor beginning on August 14, 2006. During that time, Respondents audited Prospero's 2006 and 2007 financial statements. Respondents issued audit reports dated August 16, 2006 (included in Prospero's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on August 17, 2006) and June 22, 2007 (included in Prospero's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on July 27, 2007). Each report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with the standards of the PCAOB. In each of the audit reports, the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion and stated that in the Firm's opinion, Prospero's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Prospero's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP").

The 2006 Audit

10. Inquiry of the predecessor auditor is a necessary auditing procedure because it may provide information that will assist the successor auditor in determining whether to accept the engagement, and an auditor should not accept an engagement before evaluating certain communications with the predecessor auditor.[6/] Respondents failed to comply with this standard by accepting the engagement without first inquiring of Prospero's predecessor auditors.

11. Audit work should be adequately planned.[7/] In planning an audit, an auditor should consider the nature, extent, and timing of work to be performed and should prepare a written audit program.[8/] The audit program should set forth in reasonable detail the audit procedures that the auditor believes are necessary to accomplish the objectives of the audit. Respondents failed to comply with this standard. Respondents did not perform or document any planning procedures.

12. Prospero's FY 2006 financial statements reported total assets of approximately $520,000. Approximately $425,000, or 80 percent of the assets, was identified as Capital Assets. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to evaluate this significant balance sheet item.

13. In Part I, Item 2 of the FY 2006 Form 10-KSB (the Management Discussion and Analysis section, or "MD&A"), Prospero reported that "on March 31, 2006, Prospero acquired 100% ownership of Lobaye Gold." Prospero reported that this acquisition resulted from an asset purchase agreement "with RCA Resources Corporation ('RCA') for the purchase and sale of all assets of RCA for an acquisition cost of $64 million," including "a 100% interest in Lobaye Gold SARL" (the "Lobaye Gold acquisition"). Lobaye Gold purportedly was engaged in gold and diamond prospecting in the Central African Republic. Prospero further disclosed that as consideration for this transaction, it issued 80 million shares of company stock to the seller, RCA.

14. The FY 2006 financial statements did not reflect the Lobaye Gold acquisition. While the financial statements did report an $80,000 increase in the balance of Prospero's outstanding common stock,[9/] they did not reflect the issuance of 80 million shares as disclosed in the MD&A, and earnings per share was calculated based on 9 million outstanding shares.

15. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to assess whether Prospero had appropriately reported and disclosed this acquisition and related stock issuance in Prospero's FY 2006 financial statements. Respondents performed no audit procedures to assess whether the Lobaye Gold assets existed and were valued appropriately. Respondents also performed no procedures to assess whether the company had reasonably valued the 80 million shares issued in exchange for the acquired assets.[10/] Further, the Respondents failed to identify the apparent errors in the [10/] Based on Prospero's FY 2006 financial statements, the 80 million shares issued in the Lobaye Gold acquisition were assigned a value of $0.005 per share ($420,600 of par value and additional paid in capital/80 million shares). Respondents also did not address what they understood to be a material inconsistency between disclosures in Part I, Item 2 and Part II, Item 3.02 of the Form 10KSB, both of which described the Lobaye Gold acquisition as having a cost of $64 million, and the financial statements, which did not reflect any such acquisition. Respondents were aware of these disclosures and determined that they were materially inconsistent with the financial statements. Respondents should have, but failed to determine whether the financial statements, the audit report, or both required revision.[11/]

17. Respondents also failed to address a potentially material related-party transaction. In Prospero's Form 8-K filed with the Commission on March 20, 2007, Prospero stated that two persons, together, owned almost one-third of the shares of RCA, the seller of the Lobaye Gold assets. Prospero's Forms 10-KSB for FY 2005 and FY 2006 stated that one of these persons was an officer and a shareholder of Prospero, and the other person was a shareholder, officer and director of Prospero at the time of the acquisition. Despite these indications that Prospero insiders stood on both sides of the Lobaye Gold acquisition, Respondents failed to take any steps to determine whether the Lobaye Gold acquisition was a related-party transaction that required specific disclosure in the financial statements.[12/] shares of Prospero's common stock were $1.26 and $2.15, respectively. Respondents did nothing to assess the reasonableness of the difference between the Company's valuation of the stock issued during the Lobaye Gold acquisition and the trading value of the stock at the time of the acquisition.

18. In its FY 2007 financial statements, Prospero's Capital Assets increased to $845,000, and comprised 99.9 percent of the total assets reported as of March 31, 2007. Respondents performed no procedures to test this significant account beyond reconciling the amount reported in the balance sheet to a summary-level worksheet prepared by Prospero.

19. Part II, Item 5 of the FY 2007 Form 10-KSB reported that Prospero acquired all of the assets pertaining to the water purification business of Cavitation Concepts Corporation in exchange for 10 million shares of Prospero's common stock. This transaction increased the reported number of outstanding Prospero common shares from approximately 90 million to approximately 100 million. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to assess whether the assets acquired or the shares issued were fairly valued.

20. Auditor independence is impaired if, during the period of the professional engagement, an auditor had or was committed to acquire any direct or material indirect financial interest in an audit client.[13/] While serving as Prospero's outside auditor, Scharfman committed to acquire 200,000 shares of Prospero stock from a shareholder of Prospero in exchange for services and consultations that Scharfman agreed to perform for the shareholder and for the company. As the auditor with final responsibility for the audit, Scharfman's commitment to acquire a direct financial interest in Prospero impaired his independence.

Audit of Cal-Bay's 2005 Financial Statements

21. At all relevant times, Cal-Bay was a Nevada corporation based in Carlsbad, CA. Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is dually quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. Cal-Bay's public filings disclose that it is in the business of acquiring, managing, and selling real estate. At all relevant times, Cal-Bay was an issuer as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

ORDER

22. Respondents were engaged as Cal-Bay's auditors on March 29, 2006. The Firm issued an audit report dated April 12, 2006, which was included in Cal-Bay's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on April 17, 2006. In the audit report, the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion on Cal-Bay's balance sheet as of December 31, 2005, and the related consolidated statements of operations, changes in "stockholder' (sic) equity" and cash flows for the period ended December 31, 2005. The firm's audit report stated that Cal-Bay's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Cal-Bay's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP. In addition, the Firm's report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with the standards of the PCAOB.

Aspen Cove Resort

23. In its 2005 financial statements, Cal-Bay reported that it purchased real estate in Aspen Cove, Utah (the "Aspen Cove Resort"). The financial statements disclosed that Cal-Bay acquired this property by issuing 35 million shares of company stock to the seller, and by assuming an $800,000 first trust deed against the property. The Aspen Cove Resort constituted approximately 23% percent of the total assets reported in Cal-Bay's 2005 financial statements. Respondents failed to perform adequate audit procedures to test this transaction. Respondents reconciled the reported values to the purchase agreement and reviewed related journal entries, but did nothing to assess whether the acquired asset and shares issued were properly valued.

West Palm Mortgage Note

24. In its 2005 financial statements Cal-Bay also disclosed that it purchased the first mortgage ("Mortgage Note") position on a parcel of land in West Palm Beach, FL. According to its disclosures, the company purchased the mortgage on the property for $1,500,000 cash and $4,000,000 in company stock. Respondents understood that Cal-Bay valued the assets acquired at $7.8 million, which consisted of $5.5 million in principal and $2.3 million of accrued interest.

25. Respondents failed to gather sufficient competent evidential matter to support that the acquired asset was valued appropriately. Furthermore, Respondents failed to address multiple indications that the principal and accrued interest may not be collectible. The Firm's work papers included documents showing that the Mortgage Note was in default, requiring an earlier holder of the note to enter judgment against the mortgagor. Nevertheless, Respondents failed to determine whether any payments had been made in settlement of the Mortgage Note. Respondents also failed to perform any procedures to assess whether the value of the land collateralizing the note was sufficient to secure the payment of the Mortgage Note.[14/]

Cost of Goods Sold

26. Cal-Bay's 2005 financial statements reported a Real Estate Purchase totaling $1.5 million as Cost of Sales. This amount constituted more than 80 percent of the Cost of Sales reported for 2005. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to determine whether this item was reported appropriately.

Withdrawal of Audit Opinion

27. PCAOB standards require an auditor who, subsequent to the date of the report upon audited financial statements, becomes aware that facts may have existed at that date which might have affected the report had he or she then been aware of such facts, to take certain steps to address the potential impact of those facts.[15/] When subsequently discovered information is determined to be reliable, to have existed at the date of the report, and would have affected the audit report if the information had been known to the auditor, PCAOB standards require the auditor to advise his client to make appropriate disclosures of the subsequently discovered information and its impact on the financial statements.[16/] If the client refuses to do so, the auditor ultimately is obligated to notify the Commission, among others, that the auditor's report should no longer be relied upon, the nature of the subsequently acquired information, and the information's effect on the financial statements.[17/]

28. After the 2005 Form 10-KSB was filed with the Commission, Respondents determined that Cal-Bay overstated the value of the Mortgage Note. Respondents concluded that Cal–Bay should not have recorded as an asset the $2.3 million of accrued interest due under the Mortgage Note. On April 30, 2006, Respondents requested that Cal-Bay restate its financial statements to remove the $2.3 million in accrued interest, and informed management that Respondents were withdrawing their opinion on the 2005 financial statements. When Cal-Bay failed to restate its financial results, however, Respondents did not notify the Commission, as PCAOB standards require, that it had withdrawn its audit opinion.

Failure to Take Required Steps Regarding an Illegal Act

29. The Firm also failed to comply with Section 10A(b) of the Exchange Act. Section 10A(b) requires an auditor to take certain defined steps after detecting or becoming aware that an illegal act has occurred. Likewise, the Firm and Mr. Scharfman violated PCAOB standards, which require auditors to assure themselves that an audit committee or others with equivalent authority at an issuer client are adequately informed with respect to the occurrence of an illegal act.[18/] Scharfman and the Firm were aware that an illegal act had occurred when, in addition to failing to restate its financial results, Cal-Bay also failed to file a Form 8-K disclosing that its auditors had withdrawn their opinion and advised Cal-Bay to restate its financial statements. The Respondents did not thereafter take the steps required by PCAOB standards, and the Firm did not take the steps set forth in Section 10A(b), including reporting its conclusions regarding the likely illegal act to Cal-Bay's Board of Directors. Mr. Scharfman, moreover, violated PCAOB Rule 3502 by omitting to take any action to cause the Firm to follow the steps prescribed in Section 10A(b) knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that such omission would directly and substantially contribute to the Firm's violation of Section 10A(b).

30. Scharfman signed his audit opinion as of April 12, 2006, and the 2005 Form 10-KSB was filed on April 17, 2006. Under AS3, Audit Documentation, the documentation completion date would be no later than June 1, 2006 (not more than 45 days after the report release date).[19/] After the documentation completion date, a document may be added to an auditor's work papers only if the document indicates the date when it was added, the person who prepared it, and the reason for adding it.[20/]

31. The Firm's work papers include a form audit program released by its publisher in October 2006, months after the documentation completion date. Also, the only copy of the management representation letter contained in the work papers bore a fax header of February 2007, eight months after the latest possible documentation completion date. Scharfman added these documents to his work papers without indicating the date these documents were added, the person who prepared these documents, or the reason for adding these documents.

Audits of LitFunding's 2005 and 2006 Financial Statements

32. At all relevant times, LitFunding Corp. was a Nevada corporation based in Las Vegas, Nevada. Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is dually quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. LitFunding's public filings disclosed that at all relevant times it was in the business of investing in litigation recoveries. At all relevant times, LitFunding was an issuer as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

33. Respondents were engaged as LitFunding's auditors on April 28, 2006. The Firm issued an audit report dated May 3, 2006, which was included in LitFunding's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on May 19, 2006. In the audit report, the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion on LitFunding's balance sheet as of December 31, 2005, and the related statements of operations, stockholders equity and cash flows for the period ended December 31, 2005. The Firm's audit report stated that LitFunding's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2005 presented fairly, in all material respects, LitFunding's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP. In addition, the Firm's audit report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with the standards of the PCAOB.

The Firm's audit report stated that LitFunding's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2006 presented fairly, in all material respects, LitFunding's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP. In addition, the Firm's audit report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with the standards of the PCAOB.

35. LitFunding's financial statements report that "[c]ontingent advances less reserves for unsuccessful resolution of lawsuits" constituted approximately 85 percent and 40 percent of LitFunding's total reported assets as of December 31, 2005, and December 31, 2006, respectively. In both its 2005 and 2006 financial statements, LitFunding disclosed that management "estimates the net realizable value of contingent advances by periodically reviewing the progress of the cases with the attorneys trying them and past experience with similar cases." The 2005 and 2006 financial statements also disclosed that LitFunding's historical loss rate was 15 percent, before it emerged from bankruptcy, but management calculated its reserve for the unsuccessful resolution of lawsuits using a loss rate of 10 percent, under the assumption that the loss rate would improve following the company's emergence from bankruptcy.

36. Respondents failed to test sufficiently the adequacy of the reserve for the unsuccessful resolution of lawsuits.[22/] Respondents also failed to perform a retrospective review of this significant accounting estimate to determine whether management judgments and assumptions relating to the estimate indicated a possible bias.[23/]

37. In addition, many of the documents included in the Firm's work papers for the 2005 LitFunding audit were added after the documentation completion date, with no

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Moore & Associates, Chartered, and Michael J. Moore, CPA Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2009-006 August 27, 2009

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Moore & Associates, Chartered (the "Firm" or "M&A") and barring Michael J. Moore, CPA ("Moore") (collectively, "Respondents") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' violations of Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and Rule 10b-5 thereunder, PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of three issuer clients from 2006 to 2008, PCAOB rules and quality controls standards, and noncooperation with a Board investigation.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) and (3) against Moore & Associates, Chartered and Michael J. Moore, CPA.

PCAOB

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Moore & Associates, Chartered is a public accounting firm located in Las Vegas, Nevada. At all relevant times, M&A was licensed under the laws of the state of Nevada (Nevada State Board of Public Accountancy License No. CORP-0467). M&A is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board Rules. During the relevant time period, M&A employed between 4 and 12 audit personnel. None of the staff under Mr. Moore had any significant training or education in auditing or accounting.

2. Michael J. Moore, 55, of Las Vegas, Nevada, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the state of Nevada (License No. CPA-3453R). He is the Firm's president and, at all times relevant to this matter, was an associated person of

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

the Firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

3. After M&A registered with the Board in October 2004, Moore began auditing the financial statements of public companies for the first time in more than ten years. Over the next three years, M&A accepted nearly 300 public audit engagements, with Moore serving as the auditor with final responsibility on each of them. Respondents added new clients at a nearly exponential rate while the audit staff was comprised of inexperienced staff members overseen by one professional. M&A staffed the audits with assistants who had no accounting or auditing education, experience or training. These unqualified audit assistants planned and executed the audits with little or no supervision from Moore. Through its approach to its audit practice, M&A violated PCAOB quality control standards, and Moore caused those violations. In the case of certain audit engagements on which the Board specifically focused attention through its investigative processes, Respondents failed to perform or ensure the performance of any audit work for critical aspects of the audit, in violation of PCAOB auditing standards. In each of those cases, Respondents also violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder by issuing audit reports that represented that the audits had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, when they knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that such representations were false.

4. Respondents also failed to cooperate with the Board's investigation of this matter in three ways. Respondents created false work papers that did not accurately reflect the work performed on the relevant audits and produced those false work papers to the Board's Division of Enforcement and Investigations. Moore also falsely testified that these work papers produced by Respondents were true and accurate audit work papers completed during the audit, when he knew they were not. In addition, M&A failed to produce documents required by an Accounting Board Demand.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Quality Control Standards

5. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm comply with certain quality control standards.[2/] A firm should establish policies and procedures to encompass, among other things, (a) personnel management, (b) acceptance and continuance of clients and engagements, and (c) engagement performance.[3/] These policies and procedures should be communicated to the firm's personnel,[4/] and the firm should implement monitoring procedures to obtain reasonable assurance that its system of quality control is effective.[5/] In addition, PCAOB rules prohibit an associated person of a registered public accounting firm from taking or omitting to take an action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that the act or omission would directly and substantially contribute to a violation of Board standards by that firm.[6/] As described below, M&A violated the Board's quality control standards in several respects, and Moore directly and substantially contributed to those violations.

6. Although M&A maintained a draft quality control manual in Moore's office, it failed to provide a copy of or otherwise communicate the substance of the manual to its personnel.[7/] Additionally, at all relevant times, the Firm failed to train assistants with respect to a system of quality controls that would reasonably ensure that the Firm's audits were performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.

Personnel Management

7. PCAOB standards provide that policies and procedures should be established to provide the Firm with reasonable assurance that, among other things, (1) those hired possess the appropriate characteristics to enable them to perform competently, and (2) work is assigned to personnel having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances.[8/] PCAOB standards further provide that, the more able and experienced the personnel assigned to an engagement, the less direct supervision is needed.[9/] M&A failed to comply with these standards.

8. The Firm's audit staff consisted of one staff member in 2005, which grew to 12 by 2008. None of the audit staff had any prior auditing or accounting experience or education. Newly hired staff received informal on the job training from other audit assistants, who were not qualified to provide the training because they also lacked relevant education, experience or training on how to perform audits in compliance with PCAOB standards. New hires' informal training, among other things, included instructions to complete audit programs and audit reports without actually performing audit procedures. In fact, at least one audit assistant was trained to simply "fill in the blanks on the audit report with the names of the clients and the dates, but to not do any work."

9. In addition to full-time audit staff, M&A often engaged casual acquaintances and conveniently located relatives of Moore who were neither employees of the firm nor trained or experienced in accounting or auditing to perform audit procedures. For example, M&A dispatched Moore's ex-wife on one occasion and a distant cousin on another to perform inventory observations. On another occasion, M&A sent Moore's daughter's then-boyfriend to a foreign country to inspect certain fixed assets and inventory of an audit client.

Acceptance and Continuance of Clients and Engagements

10. PCAOB standards require the Firm to establish policies and procedures that provide reasonable assurance that the Firm undertake only those engagements that it could reasonably expect to be completed with professional competence.[10/] The Firm failed to comply with this standard, accepting engagements that it could not undertake with professional competence. From 2004 through May 2009, the Firm issued a total of 680 audit opinions. The number of audit opinions issued per year grew from 1 in 2004 to 280 in 2008.[11/] For each of these audits, Moore was the only CPA at the Firm who participated,[12/] he was responsible for the audit, and he authorized the issuance of the Firm's audit report.

[10/] See QC 20.15a.

[11/] M&A added audit clients with little, or no, regard for whether the Firm was equipped to perform the audit or if the client was acceptable. The Firm did not budget or track staff time by audit. Instead, the Firm relied solely on Moore to determine if the Firm had the expertise and resources to handle an audit client.

[12/] In December 2008, the Firm added one CPA to its staff. However, as of March 2009, that individual had not participated in any of the audits on which the Firm had issued opinions.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Engagement Performance

11. PCAOB standards provide that a firm should develop policies and procedures to provide it with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality.[13/] The Firm heavily relied on audit assistants who possessed no prior auditing or accounting experience. There were no policies and procedures in place to ensure that the staff performed procedures necessary to comply with PCAOB standards or to even be aware of what those standards required.

12. The Firm typically assigned one staff member to each audit, and the staff member completed the audit with little to no supervision from Moore. Each staff member was responsible for approximately 50 audit clients at any one time. Work was assigned to personnel without the degree of technical training and proficiency required under the circumstances.[14/] As a result, audit assistants were assigned to audit clients that they were not qualified to audit.

Moore's Substantial Contribution to Quality Control Violations

13. At all relevant times, Moore was responsible for designing, implementing, and monitoring the Firm's system of quality control. All of the Firm's conduct described in paragraphs 6 through 12 above was either conduct of Moore's or omissions to act for which Moore was responsible. With respect to all such acts and omissions, Moore knew, or was reckless in not knowing, that the act or omission would directly and substantially contribute to the quality control failings described above, which constituted violations of the Board's quality control standards. Moore thereby violated PCAOB Rule 3502.

D. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[16/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[17/] As detailed below, Respondents failed to meet these standards in connection with the audits of three issuers on which the Board specifically focused attention through its authority to investigate possible violations of law, rules, and standards: the audits of the financial statements of Standard Drilling, Inc. ("Standard Drilling") for FY 2006, Biocoral, Inc. ("Biocoral") for FY 2006 and 2007, and Ethos Environmental, Inc. ("Ethos") for FY 2007.

Audit of Standard Drilling's 2006 Financial Statements

15. Standard Drilling is a Nevada corporation headquartered, at all relevant times, in Washington, D.C. with an operations office in Houston, TX. Its common stock is registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is traded on the pink sheets. Standard Drilling's public filings disclose that it was primarily in the business of constructing and selling land drilling rigs. At all relevant times, Standard Drilling was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

16. The Firm was engaged as Standard Drilling's auditor on April 30, 2007 to audit Standard Drilling's financial statements for the fiscal year ended December 31, 2006. Two weeks after being engaged as Standard Drilling's independent auditor, the Firm issued an audit report dated May 14, 2007, that was included in Standard Drilling's Form 10-KSB filed with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") on May 18, 2007.[18/] In the audit report, the Firm expressed an unqualified opinion on Standard Drilling's balance sheet as of December 31, 2006, and the related statement of operations, stockholders' equity and comprehensive income, and cash flows for the period ended December 31, 2006. The Firm's audit report stated that Standard Drilling's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Standard Drilling's financial position, results of operations and cash flows in conformity with U.S. GAAP. In addition, the report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with the standards of the PCAOB. Moore was the engagement partner who had final responsibility for the audit as that phrase is used in AU § 311, Planning and Supervision, and authorized the issuance of the audit report.

17. The audit team consisted of Moore and one audit assistant. Field work was conducted at M&A's office in Las Vegas. At no time during the audit did anyone from, or on behalf of, M&A travel to Standard Drilling's headquarters or operations office. To perform its audit, M&A exclusively relied on documents provided to it by Standard Drilling's management.

18. Standard Drilling reported an accounts receivable balance of $486,610 as of December 31, 2006. This balance was 4% of Standard Drilling's total assets and 46% of current assets and included 100% of its FY 2006 revenue. While identified as a significant issue by M&A, Respondents failed to audit accounts receivable. The only audit documentation relating to accounts receivable was an off-the-shelf third party audit program template completed by the audit assistant. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to confirm receivables.[19/] Instead, the audit team documented that confirmation procedures were "not applicable" without documenting how the Firm overcame the presumption that confirmations were necessary.[20/] At the time of the audit, the audit assistant did not know that confirmation of accounts receivable was a presumptively required audit procedure and was unfamiliar with the concept of performing alternative procedures in lieu of confirmations. Even though he was responsible for supervising the audit, Moore was not aware of any procedures performed to test the existence and valuation of accounts receivable.

19. The audit team also performed few or no procedures concerning Standard Drilling's reported revenue. The audit assistant filled out a template audit program for accounts receivable and sales and initialed the document to indicate having performed procedures related to the company's sales transactions. These procedures, however, consisted simply of reading the company's footnote disclosure covering revenue recognition. The audit assistant failed to evaluate the company's revenue recognition policy or perform any testing of the company's compliance with the policy. Moore, who believed that the audit assistant was probably not qualified to perform procedures related to revenue recognition, was unaware of any procedures performed to test reported revenue.

[19/] AU § 330.34, The Confirmation Process, states that there is a presumption that the auditor will request the confirmation of accounts receivable during an audit unless (1) accounts receivable are immaterial to the financial statements, (2) the use of confirmations would be ineffective, or (3) inherent and control risk is low.

20. Standard Drilling reported net property and equipment of $11.8 million as of December 31, 2006, which equaled 54% of total assets. Property and equipment was comprised of oil and gas properties ($3 million), drilling rigs and machinery ($7.5 million) and office furniture and equipment ($1.3 million). Respondents' evaluation of the existence or valuation of the company's reported property and equipment was limited to relying on the company's general ledger as audit evidence for property and equipment, even though Moore knew that the general ledger did not provide sufficient competent audit evidence and that M&A did not do enough audit work in this respect.

21. Under the caption "Other Assets," the company also reported an asset of approximately $9 million for "deposits on rigs," which equaled 42% of total reported assets. While M&A received company-prepared schedules to support this asset, the schedules do not tie to the balance sheet. According to the work papers, "deposits on rigs" equaled $11.9 million, not $9 million as reported. Respondents failed to resolve this inconsistency or obtain sufficient competent evidence to conclude on the existence and valuation of the deposits on rigs.[21/] The audit assistant never knew if the company's assets were valued properly, and Respondents failed to obtain sufficient competent evidence to conclude on the existence and valuation of property and equipment and other assets.[22/]

[21/] Auditing Standard No. 3 ¶ 5, Audit Documentation ("AS No. 3"), states that audit documentation should "[d]emonstrate that the underlying accounting records agreed or reconciled with the financial statements." AU § 339A.05, Working Papers, provides that the audit work papers "should be sufficient to show that the accounting records agree or reconcile to the financial statements."

[22/] Respondents also failed to obtain sufficient competent audit evidence to conclude on the existence and valuation of the Company's reported $4.1 million of accounts payable, $2.7 million of accrued expenses, and $13.4 million in stockholders' equity.

22. Respondents also failed to appropriately staff the audit, and Moore failed to appropriately supervise the work of the audit assistant.[23/] Respondents assigned the assistant to the audit despite Moore's knowledge of the assistant's limited qualifications, including that she had never audited an oil-and-gas company and did not know how to audit revenue, accounts receivable, and property. Moore, as the auditor with final responsibility for the audit, also failed to ensure that the assistant understood the objectives of the audit and the procedures to be performed, and he failed to adequately review the work performed.[24/]

Audits of Biocoral's 2006 and 2007 Financial Statements

23. Biocoral is a Delaware corporation headquartered in Perret Cedex, France. Its common stock is registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. Biocoral's public filings disclose that it is an international biomaterials "tissue-engineering" company specializing in the research, development and commercialization of patented high biotechnologies and biomaterials in the health care area. At all relevant times, Biocoral was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

24. M&A issued audit reports dated March 28, 2007 (included in Biocoral's Form 10-K filed March 30, 2007) and March 28, 2008 (included in Biocoral's Form 10-K filed March 31, 2008), both of which were filed with the Commission.[25/] In both audit reports, [24/] AU § 311.11 provides that the supervisory responsibility of the auditor with final responsibility for the audit includes directing the efforts of assistants who are involved in accomplishing the objectives of the audit, determining whether those objectives were accomplished, keeping informed of significant problems encountered, and reviewing the work performed, all commensurate with the complexity of the subject matter and the qualifications of the assistant.

[25/] The Firm also issued an audit report dated September 7, 2007 included with Biocoral's Form 10-K/A filed with the Commission on September 11, 2007. Biocoral restated its financial statements for each of the three years in the period ended December 31, 2006 to correct errors related to the presentation of patent cost capitalizations and the recording of the fair value of embedded derivatives attached to the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion and stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards and that Biocoral's consolidated financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the consolidated financial position of Biocoral and its subsidiaries, the consolidated results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP. The firm also issued unqualified audit opinions over Biocoral's internal control over financial reporting as of December 31, 2006 and December 31, 2007. Moore was the engagement partner who had final responsibility for the audits.

25. The audit team for both years consisted of Moore and an audit assistant. Neither Moore nor the audit assistant spoke or read French at the time of the audits. No one from, or on behalf of, M&A traveled to France in connection with the 2006 audit. Rather, all field work performed by M&A was conducted at its offices in Las Vegas.[26/]

26. The Biocoral audits involved the audit of eight subsidiaries. While M&A was the principal auditor, Biocoral retained a PCAOB-registered French audit firm to audit its two French subsidiaries, Biocoral France S.A.S. and Inoteb S.A. Biocoral France was responsible for 100% of Biocoral's 2006 and 2007 net sales.

27. Moore decided that M&A would use the work of the French audit firm and would assume responsibility for that work, rather than make reference to the French audit firm in M&A's audit opinions.[27/] PCAOB standards require a principal auditor to perform certain procedures when using the work of another auditor and taking responsibility for that work.[28/] Those procedures include adopting appropriate measures convertible debt. The restatement stemmed from comment letters received from the staff of the Commission's Division of Corporation Finance.

[26/] A non-audit partner of the Firm traveled to Paris in 2008 and met with Biocoral's CEO, however, the partner did not perform any audit field work as part of the trip.

[27/] Under AU § 543, a principal auditor that uses another auditor's work chooses between assuming responsibility for that work (in which case the principal auditor's report makes no reference to the other auditor's work or report) and not assuming responsibility (in which case the principal auditor's report should make reference to the other auditor and clearly indicate the division of responsibility between the two auditors). See AU § 543.03.

to assure the coordination of the auditor's activities with those of the other auditor in order to achieve a proper review of matters affecting the consolidating or combining of accounts in the financial statements.[29/]

28. Respondents relied solely on receipt of an independence letter from the French audit firm and the receipt, from Biocoral's CEO, of the French subsidiaries' financial statements and the French audit firm's audit reports. Respondents failed to make any inquiries concerning the French audit firm's professional reputation and failed to undertake any measures to assure the coordination of its activities with those of the French audit firm. Respondents did not obtain from the French audit firm, and review and retain, any of the following information: (1) an engagement completion document; (2) a list of significant fraud risk factors, the French audit firm's response to those risks, and the results of any related procedures; (3) information relating to significant findings or issues inconsistent with the auditor's final conclusions; (4) a schedule of audit adjustments; (5) all significant deficiencies and material weaknesses in internal control over financial reporting; (6) letters of representation from management; and (7) all matters to be communicated to the audit committee. Accordingly, Respondents failed to perform the necessary procedures to be able to use the work of the French audit firm in M&A's audits of Biocoral.

29. In addition, Respondents failed adequately to audit Biocoral's reported assets. Biocoral's largest reported asset as of December 31, 2006 and 2007 was "Intangible assets, net" of $527,879 and $705,496, which equaled approximately 40% and 50% of the company's reported assets, respectively. Intangible assets were comprised of patents held by Biocoral and its subsidiary BioHoldings. Respondents included copies of the patents in the Biocoral permanent file. Other than receipt of copies of the patents, Respondents failed to perform any procedures related to the patents. Respondents also failed to perform procedures to audit the company's amortization of its patent costs.

30. M&A also was engaged to audit Biocoral management's assessment of the effectiveness of Biocoral's internal controls over financial reporting. M&A issued unqualified opinions for 2006 and 2007 on Biocoral's internal control over financial reporting, stating that it conducted its audits in accordance with PCAOB standards.[30/] Respondents failed, however, to perform any procedures to test Biocoral's internal controls. In addition, Respondents failed to take any steps to determine whether the French audit firm had performed an audit of the internal controls of Biocoral France and Inoteb.

31. Respondents failed to appropriately staff the Biocoral audits, and Moore failed adequately to supervise the audit assistant. Respondents assigned the assistant despite Moore's awareness of her limited qualifications, including the fact that she had no prior experience auditing financial statements that required the consolidation of multiple subsidiaries and that involved foreign entities. In addition, Moore, as the auditor with final responsibility for the audit, failed to ensure that the assistant understood the objectives of the audit and the procedures to be performed, and he failed to adequately review the work performed.

Audit of Ethos's 2007 Financial Statements

32. Ethos is a Nevada corporation based in San Diego, CA. Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. Ethos's public filings disclose that, at all times relevant to this matter, it manufactured and distributed a line of fuel reformulaters that add cleaning and lubrication qualities to fuel or motor oil. At all relevant times, Ethos was an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

33. The Firm was Ethos's independent auditor beginning on November 30, 2007. The Firm issued an audit report dated April 14, 2008, which was included in Ethos's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on April 15, 2008. In the report, the Firm expressed an unqualified opinion on Ethos's consolidated balance sheet as of December 31, 2007, and the related consolidated statements of operations, stockholders' equity, and cash flows for the year ended December 31, 2007. The Firm's audit report stated that its audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards and that Ethos's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Ethos's financial position in conformity with GAAP. Moore was the engagement partner with final responsibility for the audit.

34. Inquiry of the predecessor auditor is a necessary auditing procedure because it may provide information that will assist the successor auditor in determining whether to accept the engagement, and an auditor should not accept an engagement before evaluating certain communications with the predecessor auditor.[31/] Respondents failed to comply with this standard in connection with the Ethos audit. Moreover, even after Ethos, on January 24, 2008, filed a Form 8-K/A identifying several accounting issues raised by its predecessor auditor, Respondents failed to contact the predecessor auditor to inquire of or evaluate the issues raised. These accounting issues included questions concerning whether there was persuasive evidence of an arrangement with buyers, whether collectability of reported revenue was reasonably assured, and whether Ethos had entered into a consignment arrangement with certain buyers. In addition, Respondents failed to consider whether and to what extent these accounting issues raised by the predecessor auditor may have affected the nature, timing or extent of the audit procedures to be performed.[32/]

35. Ethos reported approximately $10.3 million in revenue for the year ended December 31, 2007, an annual increase of approximately 120%. Ethos disclosed that two customers accounted for 87% of its reported revenue, one non-U.S. customer accounting for 79% and a second customer accounting for 8%. Ethos also reported nearly $6 million in accounts receivable as of December 31, 2007. Ethos disclosed that 84% of its reported balance was due from one customer and that the reported accounts receivable was net of an allowance for uncollectable debt of $111,362.

36. Respondents failed to adequately test revenue or accounts receivable. Respondents did not obtain or evaluate any source documentation concerning the reported sales. While the work papers contained accounts receivable confirmations purportedly signed by Ethos's customers, Respondents did not send any confirmations

[32/] Respondents were also aware that the company received a comment letter from the staff of the SEC's Division of Corporation Finance requesting information concerning the issues raised by the predecessor auditor and disclosed in the Form 8-K/A filing. Yet, as discussed below, Respondents failed to perform any procedures related to revenue recognition.

ORDER

to Ethos's customers, but received confirmation responses directly from Ethos's management. As a result, Respondents failed to maintain control over the confirmation requests and responses, contrary to PCAOB standards.[33/]

37. Respondents' work papers included an accounts receivable aging report prepared by Ethos's management. The report reflected that $3.2 million, or 54%, of reported accounts receivable was more than 90 days past due. Of this amount, $2.6 million was attributed to a non-U.S. customer. According to the aging report, the same customer owed Ethos a current amount of $2.5 million. Notwithstanding the significant past due amounts and the concentration of $5.1 million, or 86%, of total receivables with one customer, Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test the allowance for doubtful accounts.

38. Respondents also failed appropriately to staff the Ethos audit, and Moore failed appropriately to supervise the audit assistant. The assistant assigned to the audit, and instructed by Moore to plan and perform the audit, had worked at the Firm for approximately one year. She had no education, training or experience with auditing or accounting matters beyond informal training from another audit assistant who likewise had no prior education or training, and limited experience with auditing or accounting matters. Based on this training, the audit assistant understood that an audit consisted solely of preparing an audit report, but not performing audit procedures designed to elicit competent evidence. As a result, the audit assistant performed few or no audit procedures during the Ethos audit. Moore failed to provide supervision commensurate with the audit assistant's limited qualifications and the complexities of the audit, failing to ensure that the assistant understood the objectives of the audit and the procedures to be performed, and failing to adequately review the assistant's work.[34/]

[33/] See AU § 330.28, The Confirmation Process.

[34/] Ethos restated its FY 2007 financial statements on Form 10KSB/A filed with the Commission on November 20, 2008. Respondents issued an audit report dated November 19, 2008 containing an unqualified audit opinion on the restated financial statements. The restatement decreased reported revenue by more than $9 million, or nearly 87% of originally reported revenue. The restatement also decreased accounts receivable by nearly $6 million, or more than 98% of originally reported accounts receivable.

E. Respondents Violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Commission Rule 10b-5

39. Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Commission Rule 10b-5 thereunder prohibit a person, in connection with the purchase or sale of a security, from making an untrue statement of a material fact or from omitting to state a material fact necessary to make statements made, in light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading. To violate Section 10(b) or Rule 10b-5, a defendant must act with scienter, Aaron v. SEC, 446 U.S. 680, 695, 701-02 (1980), which the Supreme Court has defined as "a mental state embracing intent to deceive, manipulate, or defraud." Ernst & Ernst v. Hochfelder, 425 U.S. 185, 193 n. 12 (1976). Scienter encompasses knowing or intentional conduct, or recklessness. See, e.g., IIT v. Cornfeld, 619 F.2d 909, 923 (2d Cir. 1980). An auditor violates Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder by issuing an audit report stating that the audit has been performed in accordance with PCAOB standards when he knows, or is reckless in not knowing, that the statement is false. In re: Richard P. Scalzo, CPA, Exchange Act Rel. No. 48328, 2003 SEC LEXIS 1915, at *1 (August 13, 2003) and In re: Dennis M. Gaito, CPA, Exchange Act Rel. No. 45941, 2002 SEC LEXIS 1306, at *1 (May 16, 2002). These statements are clearly material, as "[f]ew matters could be more important to investors than that of whether an issuer's financial statements, contained in its filings with the Commission, had, in fact, been subjected to an annual audit conducted in accordance with [PCAOB standards] in all material respects." Scalzo, 2003 SEC LEXIS 1915, at *52-53.

40. Respondents violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Commission Rule 10b-5 by issuing audit reports in connection with Standard Drilling's, Biocoral's, and Ethos's financial statements falsely stating that the audits were conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. The Respondents knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that few if any substantive audit procedures were performed prior to the issuance of the Firm's audit reports. Respondents also knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that they had staffed these audits with assistants who had no accounting or auditing education, experience, or training, and who executed the audits with little or no supervision by Moore.

F. Noncooperation in Connection with the Board's Investigation

41. The Act authorizes the Board to impose disciplinary sanctions for a registered firm's or associated person's noncooperation with a Board investigation,[35/]

[35/] See Section 105(b)(3) of the Act.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

and Board rules include procedures for implementing that authority.[36/] Noncooperation with a Board investigation includes knowingly making any false material declaration or making or using any other information, including any book, paper, document, record, recording, or other material, knowing the same to contain any false material declaration. As described below, M&A failed to cooperate with a Board investigation by submitting work papers to the PCAOB it knew to contain false material declarations. Moore also failed to cooperate with a Board investigation by falsely testifying that these documents represented the Firm's work papers. Finally, M&A failed to cooperate with a Board investigation by refusing to produce certain documents called for by an Accounting Board Demand.

42. On February 28, 2008, as part of an informal inquiry, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations ("Enforcement") requested the production of certain work papers ("Document Request"). In March and April 2008, M&A produced what appeared to be copies of the work papers in response to the Document Request. Certain portions of the purported work papers, however, were created at Respondents' direction after receiving Enforcement's Document Request. These newly created work papers were not created by audit team members and did not reflect actual work performed during the audits in question.

43. On November 11, 2008, in the course of a formal investigation, Enforcement issued to Respondents an Accounting Board Demand requiring the production of, among other things, the same documents that were the subject of the Document Request. In response, Moore represented in communications with Enforcement and in sworn testimony that the documents produced to Enforcement were a true and complete set of the audit work papers. The documents, however, were significantly different than documents previously provided to the Board's Division of Registration and Inspections ("Inspections") during the course of the inspection of the Firm in 2007. When confronted with the documents produced to Inspections, Moore could not explain the discrepancies between them and the documents produced to Enforcement, but maintained that the work papers produced to Enforcement were true and correct copies of the original work papers.

44. Two months after asserting the documents produced to Enforcement were true and complete sets of the demanded audit work papers, Moore changed his story and conceded that the documents were not the original work papers.[37/] At no time previously did Moore indicate that the work papers produced to Enforcement were anything other than true and complete copies of the original work papers. In reality, Moore knew that he had caused the creation of new work papers documenting procedures not performed at the time of the audit and had them sent to Enforcement in response to the demand for the work papers supporting the original audits.

45. Lastly, M&A also failed to cooperate with the Board's investigation by refusing to produce documents called for by an Accounting Board Demand issued to the firm on March 19, 2009. On May 12, 2009, after repeatedly asking for, and receiving, extensions of the April 2, 2009 deadline to produce all documents responsive to the Accounting Board Demand, counsel for M&A informed the Enforcement staff that the Firm would not comply with the Accounting Board Demand. To date, no documents responsive to that Accounting Board Demand have been produced by M&A.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. The Board, in determining the appropriate sanctions, has taken into account the fact that Moore has agreed to pay a civil monetary penalty to the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission in the matter styled SEC v. Michael J. Moore and Moore & Associates Chartered, Case No. 2:09-cv-01637 (D. Nev. Filed August 27, 2009). Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Sections 105(b)(3) and 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rules 5300(a)(1) and 5300(b)(1), the registration of Moore & Associates, Chartered is revoked; and

B. Pursuant to Sections 105(b)(3) and 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rules 5300(a)(2) and 5300(b)(1), Michael J. Moore is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of The Blackwing Group, LLC and Sara L. Jenkins, CPA Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2009-007 December 22, 2009

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of The Blackwing Group, LLC (the "Firm" or "Blackwing") and barring Sara L. Jenkins, CPA ("Jenkins") (collectively, "Respondents") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' violations of Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and Rule 10b-5 thereunder in auditing the financial statements of two issuer clients from 2006 to 2008, PCAOB rules and auditing standards, noncooperation with a Board inspection, and noncooperation with a Board investigation.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) and (3) against The Blackwing Group and Sara L. Jenkins, CPA.

PCAOB

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondents

1. The Blackwing Group, LLC is a public accounting firm located in Independence, Missouri. At all relevant times, the Firm was licensed by the Missouri Division of Professional Registration (License No. 2005036069).[2/] The Firm is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board Rules. The Firm was formed in 2005, and registered with the Board on August 15, 2007. Other than Sara L. Jenkins, the Firm has no other partners or employees engaging in public auditing.[3/]

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

[2/] Blackwing's license expired on October 31, 2009.

[3/] Blackwing has been the subject of cease and desist orders issued by two state accountancy boards for issuing audit reports in states in which it was not licensed:

2. Sara L. Jenkins, 43, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the state of Missouri (License No. 2002006746). She is the Firm's managing partner and, at all times relevant to this matter, was an associated person of the Firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Prior to forming the Firm and registering it with the Board, Jenkins had no experience in auditing public companies.[4/]

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' violations of the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws, in auditing the financial statements of two issuer-clients, U.S Canadian Minerals, Inc. ("U.S. Canadian") and Wellstone Filters, Inc. ("Wellstone"), as well as Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards. The Firm issued audit reports for U.S. Canadian's 2006, 2007, and 2008 financial statements and for Wellstone's 2007 and 2008 financial statements, all of which were filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC" or "Commission"). Jenkins was responsible for the issuance of those audit reports. In all of these audit reports, the Firm expressed an unqualified opinion and stated that the audits were conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. Respondents failed to perform or performed very few audit procedures in connection with the issuance of these audit reports, in violation of PCAOB rules and auditing standards. In each of these cases, Respondents also repeatedly violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder by issuing audit reports that represented that the audits had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, when they knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that such representations were false.

4. Furthermore, Respondents compounded these violations by attempting to hide their wholly deficient audit work. Beginning in the spring of 2008 and continuing through June 2008, Respondents repeatedly altered work papers in anticipation of the Board's inspection of the Firm and made other misrepresentations to members of the Board's Division of Registration and Inspections ("Inspections staff") during the course of a Board inspection of the Firm in 2008. In addition, Respondents provided false documents and made false statements to staff of the Division of Enforcement and Investigations ("Enforcement staff") during the course of a Board investigation relating to the above-referenced audits.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

5. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards and related professional practice standards.[5/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[6/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[7/] As detailed below, Respondents failed to meet these standards in connection with the audits of two issuers: the audits of the financial statements of U.S. Canadian for 2006, 2007, and 2008, and Wellstone for 2007 and 2008.

ORDER

Audits of U.S. Canadian's 2006, 2007, and 2008 Financial Statements

6. U.S. Canadian is a Nevada corporation headquartered in Blaine, Washington.[8/] At all relevant times, its common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. The company's public filings disclose that it is a development stage company focused on the mining industry and acquiring existing mining business operations and assets. At all relevant times, U.S. Canadian was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

7. In February 2008, U.S. Canadian engaged Respondents to audit U.S. Canadian's 2006 and 2007 financial statements. U.S. Canadian renewed its engagement of Respondents in April 2009 to audit its 2008 financial statements. During the time of their engagement, Respondents issued audit reports on U.S. Canadian's financial statements. Each report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, expressed an unqualified audit opinion, and stated that, in the Firm's opinion, the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP"). The audit reports were dated March 25, 2008, March 21, 2008, and April 11, 2009 and included as part of the following U.S. Canadian filings: (a) December 31, 2006 Form 10KSB filed on April 3, 2008, (b) December 31, 2007 Form 10KSB filed on April 25, 2008, and (c) December 31, 2008 Form 10-K filed on April 14, 2009.[9/]

8. During Respondents' audit of U.S. Canadian's 2006 financial statements, Respondents failed to perform any audit procedures. When asked in the course of the Board's investigation about what audit procedures were performed during the audit, Jenkins admitted that she did not audit the U.S. Canadian 2006 financials, and that was why Respondents did not have any work papers. Despite not performing any audit procedures, Respondents issued an audit report containing an unqualified opinion.

[8/] U.S. Canadian changed its name to Noble Consolidated Industries Corp. on October 1, 2009. See U.S. Canadian Minerals, Inc. Form 8-K filed on October 5, 2009.

[9/] The Firm also issued audit reports dated August 20, 2008 and September 12, 2008 included with U.S. Canadian's Forms 10KSB/A filed with the Commission on August 25, 2008 and September 12, 2008. In these amended filings, U.S. Canadian disclosed that it restated its financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2007 to correct errors related to earnings per share and common shares issued for services.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

9. During Respondents' audit of U.S. Canadian's 2007 financial statements, Respondents performed few or no audit procedures. Other than relying on management's representations, Respondents: (a) failed to perform any audit procedures relating to U.S. Canadian's reported revenue of $25,524 and reported gain from discontinued operations of $214,984, including failing to perform any procedures to determine whether the reported gain existed and was properly valued; (b) failed to identify and address appropriately a GAAP departure related to the issuer's earnings per share calculation,[10/] including failing to consider the retroactive application of a 1-for-50 reverse stock split in the calculation of the weighted average number of shares outstanding in auditing U.S. Canadian's earnings per share;[11/] (c) failed to identify and address appropriately that U.S. Canadian used year-end balances of shares outstanding, instead of weighted average number of shares outstanding, in determining the net loss per share;[12/] (d) failed to identify and address appropriately a GAAP departure related to the valuation of common stock issued for services, including failing to identify and address appropriately that common stock issued for services was recorded at par value, rather than market value, as required by GAAP;[13/] (e) failed to perform any procedures to consider whether 73 million shares of common stock issued for services were properly valued and reported in the financial statements; (f) failed to perform any procedures to determine whether $270,000 in unpaid executive compensation was properly recorded as a liability; and (g) failed to perform any procedures to determine whether changes made to the 2006 Balance Sheet and Statement of Operations were correct or whether the changes were disclosed appropriately.

[10/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures, however, should not be understood as an indication that the Commission has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP.

10. Respondents also failed to take appropriate steps when facts existing at the date of the auditor's report were subsequently discovered.[14/] Jenkins acknowledged that when the Inspections staff informed her in June 2008 during the course of an inspection that Respondents had failed to perform any procedures to determine whether the unpaid executive compensation was recorded properly, Respondents failed to take certain steps required by PCAOB standards, including performing procedures or considering the effect of the new information obtained on their audit opinion.

11. During Respondents' audit of U.S. Canadian's 2008 financial statements, Respondents performed few or no audit procedures. Other than relying on management's representations, Respondents: (a) failed to perform any procedures related to the reported revenue of $3,000, including testing existence and valuation; (b) failed to perform procedures to determine whether 231,598 shares of common stock issued for services were properly valued and reported in the financial statements; (c) failed to perform any procedures to determine whether unpaid executive compensation of $295,000 was properly recorded as a liability; (d) failed to perform any procedures related to cash, including testing existence, and rights and obligations; and (e) failed to perform any audit procedures related to related party accounts payable,[15/] or accounts payable and accrued liabilities, including testing for completeness.

[14/] PCAOB standards require an auditor who, subsequent to the date of the report upon audited financial statements, becomes aware that facts may have existed at that date which might have affected the report had he or she then been aware of such facts, to take certain steps to address the potential impact of those facts. When subsequently discovered information is determined to be reliable, to have existed at the date of the report, and would have affected the audit report if the information had been known to the auditor, PCAOB standards require the auditor to advise his client to make appropriate disclosures of the subsequently discovered information and its impact on the financial statements. If the client refuses to do so, the auditor ultimately is obligated to notify the Commission, among others, that the auditor's report should no longer be relied upon, the nature of the subsequently acquired information, and the information's effect on the financial statements. See AU § 561, Subsequent Discovery of Facts Existing at the Date of the Auditor's Report.

[15/] PCAOB standards require that, after identifying related party transactions (such as related party accounts payable), the auditor should apply the procedures he considers necessary to obtain satisfaction concerning the purpose, nature, and extent of these transactions and their effect on the financial statements. The procedures should be directed toward obtaining and evaluating sufficient competent evidential matter and should extend beyond inquiry of management. See AU § 334, Related Parties.

Audits of Wellstone's 2007 and 2008 Financial Statements

12. Wellstone is a Delaware corporation headquartered in Timberlake, North Carolina. At all relevant times, its common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. The company's public filings disclose that it is a development stage company engaged in the development and marketing of a proprietary cigarette filter technology and a brand of cigarettes utilizing a patented reduced risk filter.

13. In January 2008, Wellstone engaged Respondents to audit Wellstone's 2007 financial statements. Wellstone renewed its engagement of Respondents in 2009 to audit its 2008 financial statements. During the time of their engagement, Respondents issued audit reports on Wellstone's financial statements. Each report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, expressed an unqualified audit opinion, and stated that in the Firm's opinion, the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. GAAP. The audit reports were dated March 19, 2008, and March 17, 2009, and included as part of the following Wellstone filings: (a) December 31, 2007 Form 10KSB filed on March 25, 2008, and (b) December 31, 2008 Form 10-K filed on March 19, 2009.

14. Respondents' audits of Wellstone were wholly deficient in significant respects. During Respondents' audit of Wellstone's 2007 financial statements, Respondents performed few or no audit procedures. Other than relying on management's representations, Respondents: (a) failed to identify and address appropriately a GAAP departure related to the issuer's earnings per share calculation, including failing to consider the retroactive application of a 1-for-100 reverse stock split in the calculation of weighted average number of shares outstanding in auditing earnings per share;[16/] (b) failed to perform any procedures to determine whether Wellstone's gain for the forgiveness of debt was recorded appropriately; (c) failed to perform any procedures related to Wellstone's long-term debt; and (d) failed to perform any procedures related to Wellstone's interest expense, related party accounts payable, or notes payable to affiliates.

15. Respondents also failed to take appropriate steps when facts existing at the date of the auditor's report were subsequently discovered.[17/] Jenkins acknowledged that in preparing for or during the June 2008 inspection she learned that Respondents had failed to: (a) consider the retroactive application of a 1-for-100 reverse stock split in the calculation of weighted average number of shares outstanding in auditing Wellstone's earnings per share, (b) perform any procedures to determine whether the forgiveness of debt was recorded appropriately, (c) perform any procedures related to Wellstone's long-term debt, and (d) perform any procedures related to Wellstone's interest expense, related party accounts payable, or notes payable to affiliates. Jenkins nevertheless acknowledged that Respondents subsequently failed to take certain steps required by PCAOB standards, including performing procedures or considering the effect of the new information on their audit.

16. During Respondents' audit of Wellstone's 2008 financial statements, Respondents performed few or no audit procedures. Other than relying on management's representations, Respondents: (a) failed to perform any procedures related to Wellstone's long-term debt or its interest expense, and (b) failed to perform any audit procedures relating to related party accounts payable or notes payable to affiliates.[18/]

D. Respondents Committed Fraud in Violation of Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Commission Rule 10b-5 Thereunder

17. Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Commission Rule 10b-5 thereunder are antifraud provisions that prohibit a person, in connection with the purchase or sale of a security, from making an untrue statement of a material fact or from omitting to state a material fact necessary to make statements made, in light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading. To violate Section 10(b) or Rule 10b-5, a defendant must act with scienter, Aaron v. SEC, 446 U.S. 680, 695, 701-02 (1980), which the Supreme Court has defined as "a mental state embracing intent to deceive, manipulate, or defraud." Ernst & Ernst v. Hochfelder, 425 U.S. 185, 193 n. 12 (1976). Scienter encompasses knowing or intentional conduct, or recklessness. See*, e.g., IIT v. Cornfeld*, 619 F.2d 909, 923 (2d Cir. 1980). An auditor violates Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder by issuing an audit report stating that the audit has been performed in accordance with PCAOB standards when the auditor knows, or is reckless in not knowing, that the statement is false. In re: Richard P. Scalzo, CPA, Exchange Act Rel. No. 48328, 2003 SEC LEXIS 1915, at *1 (August 13, 2003) and In re: Dennis M. Gaito, CPA, Exchange Act Rel. No. 45941, 2002 SEC LEXIS 1306, at *1 (May 16, 2002). its filings with the Commission, had, in fact, been subjected to an annual audit conducted in accordance with [PCAOB standards] in all material respects." Scalzo, 2003 SEC LEXIS 1915, at *52-53.

18. Respondents committed fraud in violation of Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Commission Rule 10b-5 by issuing audit reports falsely stating that they audited the 2006, 2007 and 2008 financial statements of U.S. Canadian and the 2007 and 2008 financial statements of Wellstone, and that the audits were conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. Respondents knew that few, if any, substantive audit procedures were performed prior to the issuance of the Firm's audit reports for the above-referenced financial statements. In addition, Respondents repeatedly admitted during the course of the Board's investigation that they were unfamiliar with PCAOB standards[19/] and made the statements that the audits were conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards without any regard to whether they understood their audits to comport with PCAOB standards. Respondents, nevertheless, included these statements in their audits reports solely because they were required by PCAOB standards.[20/]

E. Respondents Violated Their Duty to Cooperate with a Board Inspection

19. From June 16, 2008 to June 18, 2008, Inspections staff conducted an inspection of the Firm. After receiving notice of the Board's inspection, Respondents printed out and assembled copies of work papers for the Firm's audits of U.S. Canadian and Wellstone. Before providing the work papers to the Inspections staff, Jenkins wrote notes on many of the work papers without providing the date on which the notes were written or an explanation as to why they were written. These notes were misleading because they purported to represent the performance of audit procedures in connection with these audits, when, in fact, as Respondents knew, they had not performed any such audit procedures. For example, included in the 2007 audit work papers for Wellstone is a document titled "Audit Program for Internal Control." In anticipation of the PCAOB inspection, Jenkins printed out the work paper, and then wrote "Internal control evaluated for SEC audit report" on the work paper, without indicating when she wrote the note or why she wrote it.[21/] In fact, Jenkins admitted during the Board's investigation that she did not evaluate Wellstone's internal control as part of Blackwing's 2007 audit.

20. Pursuant to Section 104(f) of the Act and Board Rule 4007, after the Inspections staff completed its field work for its inspection of the Firm, the staff provided Respondents with a draft inspection report dated January 12, 2009 for the Firm's review, and provided the Firm with the opportunity to submit a written response to the draft report.[22/]

21. In response to the draft inspection report, Respondents sent a letter to the Director of the Division of Registration and Inspections dated February 11, 2009, in which they made several misrepresentations. In the February 11, 2009 letter, Respondents stated that: (1) "[w]e have made arrangements for concurring review of our engagement with PCAOB experienced auditors in an effort to improve our audit quality" and (2) "[w]e have also reviewed the issues raised by your Report with them, in order to take positive corrective action." These statements were misleading because, as Respondents knew at the time and admitted during the Board's investigation, the Firm had not made any arrangements for a concurring review of its engagements.

22. During the inspection of the Firm, Respondents learned that Wellstone had not retroactively applied a 1-for-100 reverse stock split in the calculation of weighted average number of shares for fiscal year 2006 and that Wellstone's 2007 financial statements, which had included this calculation of weighted average number of shares, probably would have to be restated to correct the reported weighted average. In the February 11, 2009 letter, Respondents represented to the Director of the Division of Registration and Inspections that "[Wellstone] has acknowledged the deficiencies in information provided in the audit performed for the year ending December 31, 2007 and [21/] Respondents' alterations of the work papers also violated Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS3"). Under AS3, any additions to audit documentation after the audit report release date, "must indicate the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it." After the documentation completion date, a document may be added to an auditor's work papers only if the document indicates the date when it was added, the person who prepared it, and the reason for adding it.

[22/] Neither Section 104(f) of the Act or Board Rule 4007 requires a registered firm to provide a written response or any other form of response to a Board draft inspection report.

has agreed to restated financial statements for that year if the additional procedures that will be applied during the audit of the year ending December 31, 2008, show that there are material misstatements in the December 31, 2007 financial statements." This statement, however, was misleading because, as Respondents knew at the time and admitted during the Board's investigation, Wellstone had never acknowledged to Respondents either that there were deficiencies in the 2007 audit or that it would restate its financial statements.

23. PCAOB rules require registered firms and their associated persons to cooperate in the performance of any Board inspection.[23/] This obligation to cooperate "includes an obligation not to provide misleading documents or information in connection with the Board's inspection processes" and "applies with no less force to information or communications that a firm or person decides on its own to provide" – such as a written response to a Board draft inspection report – "than it does to information that the Board specifically requires a firm or person to provide."[24/] Respondents' conduct in altering work papers in anticipation of a Board inspection and making misleading representations in response to the Board draft inspection report violated PCAOB Rule 4006.

F. Noncooperation in Connection with the Board's Investigation

24. The Act authorizes the Board to impose disciplinary sanctions for a registered firm's or associated person's noncooperation with a Board investigation,[25/] and Board rules include procedures for implementing that authority.[26/] Noncooperation with a Board investigation includes knowingly making any false material declaration or making or using any other information, including any book, paper, document, record, recording, or other material, knowing the same to contain any false material declaration. As described below, Respondents failed to cooperate with a Board investigation by submitting work papers to the PCAOB Enforcement staff they knew to contain false material declarations.

ORDER

25. On December 1, 2008, as part of an informal inquiry, the Enforcement staff requested that Respondents produce certain work papers ("Document Request") relating to the Firm's 2006 and 2007 audits of U.S. Canadian and 2007 audit of Wellstone. In December 2008 and January 2009, Respondents produced what purported to be copies of the work papers in response to the Document Request. On April 1, 2009, as part of a formal investigation, the Enforcement staff issued Accounting Board Demands ("Demands") to Respondents for certain work papers, including the same work papers requested pursuant to the Document Request, to the extent those work papers had not been already produced to the Enforcement staff. Between May 2009 and August 2009, Respondents produced what purported to be copies of work papers in response to the Demands. Among the documents Respondents produced pursuant to the Demands were three bank confirmations and several notes payable confirmations, which purported to be part of the Firm's work papers for the 2008 audit of U.S. Canadian and the 2008 audit of Wellstone, respectively. In her testimony to the Board's staff, Jenkins admitted that she had falsified these documents after receiving the Demands, by forging the bank signatures on the three bank confirmations and the creditor signatures on the notes payable.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Sections 105(b)(3) and 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rules 5300(a)(1) and 5300(b)(1), the registration of The Blackwing Group, LLC is revoked; and

B. Pursuant to Sections 105(b)(3) and 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rules 5300(a)(2) and 5300(b)(1), Sara L. Jenkins is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Jennifer Nakao, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2010-002 February 17, 2010

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is suspending Jennifer Nakao ("Respondent") from being associated with a registered public accounting firm for a period of one year from the date of this Order. The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the 2004 financial statements of one issuer client.

I.

On April 13, 2009, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. As required by section 105(c)(2) of the Act, these proceedings were not public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Nakao, age 34, of Murray, Utah is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the state of Utah (License No. 5247207-2601). At all relevant times, she was a professional in the Salt Lake City, Utah office of the registered public accounting firm of Grant Thornton, LLP ("GT") and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

2. This matter concerns Respondent's violations of PCAOB Rules and auditing standards in connection with GT's audit of the fiscal year ("FY") 2004 financial statements of Imergent, Inc. ("Imergent" or the "Company"). Respondent's violations occurred in the context of auditing Imergent's (1) revenue, (2) allowance for doubtful accounts, and (3) related financial statement footnote disclosures.

3. GT became the independent auditor for Imergent in February 2002. Respondent began working on the Imergent audit in FY 2002 as the engagement senior. She was promoted to manager in July 2003 and became the manager on the Imergent engagement in FY 2004. She remained a member of the Imergent engagement team until GT was terminated as the company's independent auditor in

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

PCAOB

October 2005. Respondent was the only GT professional staffed on the Imergent engagement for all three fiscal years audited by GT.

4. Most of Imergent's FY 2004 revenue came from sales of software licenses to customers who were given 24-month extended payment term arrangements ("EPTAs") to finance their purchase. Under applicable Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP"), Imergent could recognize revenue from EPTA-financed sales ("EPTA sales") on an accrual basis (i.e., at the time the sale was completed, rather than when cash was ultimately received) only if, among other things, the sales fee was probable of collection and the fee was fixed or determinable. Respondent understood that for the EPTA sales fee to be deemed fixed or determinable, Imergent had to have a history of successfully collecting under the original payment terms without making concessions. Respondent also was aware that Imergent recognized all revenue from EPTA sales on an accrual basis despite having a history of poor collections and a practice of extending financing to all customers regardless of their credit history.

5. Respondent understood that Imergent's historical collection experience for EPTA sales was its primary basis for concluding that the FY 2004 EPTA sales were probable of collection and fixed or determinable. But Respondent failed to ensure that the engagement team sufficiently tested management's representations of its historical collection experience for EPTA sales. In fact, during the FY 2004 audit, Respondent was aware of materially contradictory evidence as to the collection rates of Imergent's EPTAs, but failed to obtain reasonable assurance regarding the actual rates in light of this contradictory evidence.

6. Respondent further failed to ensure that sufficient procedures were performed to test or assess the reasonableness of certain EPTA collection rates disclosed by Imergent in the footnotes to its FY 2004 financial statements and in its filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC").

7. During the FY 2004 audit, the engagement team also identified Imergent's allowance for doubtful accounts as a significant audit issue. In order to properly value its trade receivables balance, Imergent needed to reasonably estimate its allowance for doubtful accounts. The trade receivables balance was comprised primarily of payments due from EPTA sales. At the time of the FY 2004 audit, Respondent was aware that, during FY 2004, Imergent's management adopted a new methodology for estimating its allowance for doubtful accounts. Under the new methodology, the allowance as a percentage of gross trade receivables decreased from 47% as of June 30, 2003 to 32%

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

as of June 30, 2004. This decrease in the allowance reduced bad debt expense, thereby increasing FY 2004 net income. Despite being aware of the new methodology, the inherent risks associated with this significant estimate, and Imergent's history of underestimating the allowance for doubtful accounts, Respondent failed to ensure the performance of sufficient procedures to assess the reasonableness of the June 30, 2004 allowance for doubtful accounts balance.

C. Respondent Failed to Comply with Certain PCAOB Auditing Standards in Auditing the Financial Statements of Imergent, Inc. for FY 2004

8. Imergent is an e-services company based, at all relevant times, in Orem, Utah.[2/] Imergent's public filings disclose that it sold licenses to use a web-based software called StoresOnline Software ("SOS" or "software"), which assists customers in creating websites. Imergent's shares are listed on the American Stock Exchange. At all relevant times, Imergent was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

9. As manager on the FY 2004 Imergent audit, Respondent was responsible for supervising procedures performed by more junior members of the engagement team and for reviewing the team's work on revenue recognition and the allowance for doubtful accounts.[3/] She also personally performed certain of the procedures in those areas during the FY 2004 audit and prior audits. In an audit report dated August 27, 2004, and included in Imergent's Form 10-K filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission on September 10, 2004, GT expressed an unqualified opinion on Imergent's consolidated balance sheets as of June 30, 2004 and 2003, and the related consolidated statements of earnings, stockholders' equity, and cash flows for each of the three years in the period ended June 30, 2004. GT's audit report stated that the audit had been conducted in accordance with the standards of the PCAOB, and that, in GT's opinion, Imergent's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, its financial position in conformity with U.S. GAAP.

[2/] On April 27, 2009, Imergent announced that it was moving its headquarters from Orem, Utah to Phoenix, Arizona.

[3/] See AU § 311.11 & .13, Planning and Supervision. The auditor with final responsibility for the audit delegated portions of the supervision of the audit to Respondent. See AU § 311.02, Planning and Supervision.

ORDER

10. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that associated persons of registered public accounting firms comply with the Board's auditing standards.[4/] Under these standards, an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[5/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, maintain professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[6/] Respondent failed to comply with these standards in connection with the FY 2004 audit of Imergent.

Imergent's Business and Stratification of Sales

11. According to Imergent's FY 2004 Form 10-K, Imergent began selling the SOS license on October 1, 2000. During FY 2004, Imergent sold SOS licenses through promotional workshops held throughout the United States and in several foreign countries. Imergent disclosed that revenue from the sale of SOS licenses was recognized after the product was delivered to the customer and a three day rescission period expired.

12. Respondent was aware that Imergent accepted three methods of payment for the software: cash, credit cards, or EPTAs. Imergent entered into EPTAs with all purchasers of SOS licenses who made a 5% down payment, completed a credit application, and permitted Imergent to check their credit. The results of the credit check did not preclude a customer from qualifying for an EPTA.

4/ See PCAOB Rules 3100, 3200T.

5/ See AU § 508.07, Reports on Audited Financial Statements.

6/ See AU § 150.02, Generally Accepted Auditing Standards; AU § 230, Due Professional Care in the Performance of Work; AU § 326, Evidential Matter. Under PCAOB standards, representations from management are part of the evidential matter that an auditor obtains, but management representations are not a substitute for the application of those auditing procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for the auditor's opinion. See AU § 333, Management Representations.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

13. Respondent was aware that Imergent performed the credit check at the time of the workshop and, based on the credit check, stratified purchasers into two distinct groups: "A" customers and "B" customers. Customers with credit scores of 630 or higher were categorized as "A" customers and those with credit scores below 630 were categorized as "B" customers. According to the work papers, Imergent began tracking customers by credit score during FY 2002 and continued to do so throughout the time GT was its independent auditor. The work papers indicate that the majority of FY 2004 EPTA customers were "B" customers.

14. Respondent was aware that, during FY 2004, Imergent sold portions of its EPTA receivables at a discount. Imergent referred to these sold receivables as "funded EPTAs" and the remaining EPTA receivables as "non-funded EPTAs." Imergent used customer credit scores to determine which EPTAs were likely to be funded. Beginning in FY 2003, Imergent also used the distinction between "A" and "B" customers in developing its allowance for doubtful accounts. Imergent developed an allowance for "B" customers representing a significantly lower estimated rate of collections than for "A" customers. In making certain of its revenue recognition decisions, however, Imergent relied on the cumulative collection rate of all EPTA sales to conclude that revenue should be recognized on an accrual basis for sales to all types or classes of EPTA customers.

Imergent's Revenue Recognition Conclusions

15. According to Imergent's FY 2004 Form 10-K, the accounting for EPTA sales was required to comply with American Institute of Certified Public Accountants Statement of Position 97-2, Software Revenue Recognition ("SOP 97-2") and was identified as a critical accounting policy. In order to recognize revenue for the sale of an SOS license on an accrual basis pursuant to SOP 97-2, Imergent was required, among other things, to establish that the sale was probable of collection and that the fee was fixed or determinable.[7/] During each year audited by GT, Imergent concluded that all EPTA sales were probable of collection and the sales price was fixed or determinable.

[7/] Paragraph .08 of SOP 97-2 states:

> If the arrangement does not require significant production, modification, or customization of software, revenue should be recognized when all of the following criteria are met:

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

16. After Imergent's revenue recognition conclusions were questioned by the staff of the SEC's Division of Corporation Finance in May 2005, Imergent announced, on August 19, 2005, that, after consultation with GT, it would "correct its historical revenue recognition policy to cash basis from accrual basis for fiscal years 2002, 2003, 2004 and the first three quarters of fiscal 2005 in order to comply [with GAAP]." In October 2005, Imergent terminated GT as its independent auditor and, subsequently, restated its FY 2004 and 2003 financial statements in conjunction with filing its FY 2005 financial statements.

The FY 2004 Audit

17. According to work papers reviewed by Respondent, EPTA sales grew considerably in FY 2004, nearly doubling from $22.5 million in FY 2003 to $44.3 million in FY 2004. EPTA sales comprised nearly 55% of Imergent's total reported FY 2004 revenue of $81 million.

- Persuasive evidence of an arrangement exists.
- Delivery has occurred.
- The vendor's fee is fixed or determinable.
- Collectibility is probable.

With regard to whether the fee is "fixed or determinable," Paragraph .28 of SOP 97-2 provides that:

> … if payment of a significant portion of the software licensing fee is not due until after expiration of the license or more than twelve months after delivery, the licensing fee should be presumed not to be fixed or determinable. However, this presumption may be overcome by evidence that the vendor has a standard business practice of using long-term or installment contracts and a history of successfully collecting under the original payment terms without making concessions.

(italics in original; underlining added). Paragraph .29 provides that if the presumption cannot be overcome "revenue should be recognized as payments from customers become due (assuming all other conditions for revenue recognition in this SOP have been satisfied)."

ORDER

Probability of Collection

18. Respondent knew that Imergent had concluded that its FY 2004 EPTA sales were probable of collection based primarily on its historical collection experience. But Respondent failed to ensure that the engagement team sufficiently tested management's representations of its historical collection experience. In fact, during the 2004 audit, Respondent was aware of materially contradictory evidence as to the collection rates of Imergent's EPTAs, but failed to obtain reasonable assurance regarding the actual rates in light of this contradictory evidence.[8/]

19. The engagement team's analysis of the appropriateness of Imergent's revenue recognition policies is documented in a memorandum addressing revenue recognition (the "Revenue Recognition Memo") included in the FY 2004 audit work papers and reviewed by Respondent. In discussing SOS sales in the Revenue Recognition Memo, the engagement team asked "[i]s collection probable on sales under [EPTAs]?" In response, the memo states:

> The Company's position is that collection of the fee is probable since, on average, 70% of EPTA fees are paid. An analysis of the payment types and [EPTAs] delineated previously in this document shows that approximately 100% of cash and credit card payments are collected, approximately 98% of funded [EPTAs] are collected, and approximately 47% of non-funded [EPTAs] are collected. These percentages have been reasonably consistent and the Company is able to accurately estimate the percentage of bad debt likely to occur in a given classification of [EPTAs].
> CONCLUSION: The Company's position that the collection of the workshop fees is probable is appropriate. The Company recognizes bad debt expense in the period in which the bad debt is expected to have occurred. History has shown that payments under [EPTAs] are probable of collection, notwithstanding the fact that the bad debt percentage is very high on certain classes of [EPTAs]."

[8/] See AU § 333.04 ("If a representation made by management is contradicted by other audit evidence, the auditor should investigate the circumstances and consider the reliability of the representation made").

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

20. Respondent did not ensure that the EPTA collection percentages in the Revenue Recognition Memo were tested for reliability, even though the percentages were identical to the percentages in the previous year (and, for all but one figure, identical to the collection percentages from two years prior),[9/] and other information reviewed by Respondent showed a worsening collection history.[10/]

21. The FY 2004 work papers contain two documents analyzing Imergent's historical collection rates. They are: (1) a series of company-prepared spreadsheets analyzing Imergent's collections for the last six months of FY 2004 ("Six Month Analysis"),[11/] and (2) a company-prepared ratio analysis ("Ratio Analysis"). Both documents were reviewed by Respondent during the audit. Neither document provided sufficient competent evidential matter to support management's assertion that EPTA sales were probable of collection.[12/]

22. The Six Month Analysis did not provide a basis for concluding that EPTA sales were probable of collection because, among other things, it consisted of insufficiently tested management representations and included data that did not allow for a meaningful analysis of historical collection rates. In fact, during the FY 2004 audit, Respondent became aware of problems that inflated certain of the EPTA collection rates reflected in the Six Month Analysis, but she failed to assess the cumulative impact of those problems on the reliability of the analysis.

[9/] The purported collection percentages for FY 2003 and FY 2004 were identical, and differed in only one respect from those in FY 2002; i.e., one number shown as 45% in the FY 2002 work papers became 47% in the FY 2003 and 2004 work papers.

[10/] See AU § 230.07 ("Due professional care requires the auditor to exercise professional skepticism. Professional skepticism is an attitude that includes a questioning mind and a critical assessment of audit evidence.") (italics in original).

[11/] The Six Month Analysis is included in a GT work paper entitled "Allowance for Bad Debts Workbook."

[12/] See AU § 326.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

23. The Ratio Analysis contradicted Imergent's assertion that its EPTA sales were probable of collection and put Respondent on notice that Imergent's recent collection history did not support its asserted collection rates. The Ratio Analysis disclosed that, as of June 30, 2004, Imergent had written off 69% of EPTAs originated in FY 2003 and had written off 53% of EPTAs originated in FY 2002. In other words, the Ratio Analysis indicated that for the prior two fiscal years, Imergent wrote-off more than 50% of the total amount of EPTA-financed sales. Further, the FY 2004 work papers include a Concluding Ratio Analysis, which was reviewed by Respondent and states that "installment contracts on average are about 47% collectible . . . ." Despite this contradictory information, Respondent failed to sufficiently test management's assertion that EPTA sales were probable of collection and that "on average, 70% of EPTA fees are paid."[13/]

24. During the FY 2004 audit, Respondent failed to ensure that the engagement team obtained sufficient competent evidential matter to evaluate Imergent's historical collection rate for EPTAs or otherwise evaluate the primary basis for management's assertion that Imergent's EPTA sales were probable of collection. Moreover, Respondent failed to ensure that the engagement team took steps to determine how, in light of the representations in the Ratio Analysis, Imergent maintained its assertion that all EPTA-financed sales were probable of collection. Respondent improperly relied on management representations as a substitute for ensuring that sufficient procedures were performed to reasonably conclude on whether EPTA sales were probable of collection. Finally, despite knowing that Imergent grouped EPTA customers into categories with substantially different historical collection rates, Respondent failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to accept Imergent's conclusion that the collection histories of all types and classes of EPTA sales could be combined to determine whether EPTA sales were probable of collection, and failed to assess adequately whether Imergent could properly recognize revenue on an accrual basis for sales to customers with inferior credit scores.

[13/] See AU § 326.25 ("In developing his or her opinion, the auditor should consider relevant evidential matter regardless of whether it appears to corroborate or to contradict the assertions in the financial statements. To the extent the auditor remains in substantial doubt about any assertion of material significance, he or she must refrain from forming an opinion until he or she has obtained sufficient competent evidential matter to remove such substantial doubt").

ORDER

Fixed or Determinable

25. In addition to satisfying the probability of collection requirement, Imergent had to establish that the EPTA sales fee was fixed or determinable before revenue could be recognized on an accrual basis. Respondent understood that an EPTA-financed sales fee was presumed not to be fixed or determinable under SOP 97-2 because payment of a significant portion of the fee was not due until more than 12 months after delivery. However, Imergent could overcome this presumption if it had "a standard business practice of using long-term or installment contracts and a history of successfully collecting under the original payment terms without making concessions."[14/] Imergent represented to GT that it overcame the presumption.

26. Respondent was aware that Imergent concluded that it had a history of successfully collecting EPTA sales fees based on the same historical collection experience it used to assess whether its EPTA sales were probable of collection. Yet, as previously described, Respondent did not ensure that the engagement team sufficiently tested the historical collection experience of EPTAs. Thus, the engagement team failed to perform sufficient procedures to adequately assess whether Imergent had a history of successfully collecting under the original payment terms without making concessions. Consequently, the engagement team did not obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to evaluate management's assertion that the fees from EPTA sales were fixed or determinable.

Financial Statement Revenue Recognition Disclosures

27. In the footnotes to the FY 2004 financial statements, Imergent disclosed that "[d]uring fiscal years ended June 30, 1999 through 2004, the Company has collected or is collecting approximately 70% of all EPTAs issued to customers … Despite reasonable efforts, approximately 47% of all EPTAs not sold to third party financial institutions become uncollectible during the life of the contract." Respondent failed to ensure that the engagement team performed sufficient procedures to assess whether the collection rates disclosed in the financial statement footnotes were reasonably accurate.

[14/] SOP 97-2 Paragraph .28.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

28. Respondent reviewed certain FY 2004 work papers which document without specific citations that the 70% and 47% figures were purportedly traced to support elsewhere in the work papers. The only place in the work papers where similar figures are found is in the Revenue Recognition Memo. Tracing the figures to the Revenue Recognition Memo, however, did not provide sufficient competent evidential matter to assess their reasonableness because the Revenue Recognition Memo figures consist of untested management representations that were contradicted by other evidence in the work papers, including the 2004 Ratio Analysis and the Concluding Ratio Analysis.[15/]

Allowance for Doubtful Accounts

29. Imergent's FY 2004 financial statements disclose that its customers owed Imergent $27.9 million as of June 30, 2004. Imergent referred to these amounts due from customers as trade receivables and reflected the amounts as assets on their balance sheet. Because Imergent expected that some of its trade receivables would not be paid, it estimated how much would not be collected. This amount is referred to as an allowance for doubtful accounts. As of June 30, 2004, Imergent recorded an allowance for doubtful accounts of $9 million, meaning it expected to collect approximately $18.9 million of its trade receivables balance. Net trade receivables ($18.9 million) comprised approximately 47% of total assets as of June 30, 2004 and was described in the work papers as a significant issue. Respondent reviewed company-prepared schedules calculating the allowance.

30. As documented in work papers reviewed by Respondent, Imergent had a history of under-estimating its allowance for doubtful accounts. During FY 2003, Imergent determined that it had significantly underestimated its June 30, 2002 allowance. According to the work papers, Imergent learned during FY 2004 that it had again under-estimated its allowance for doubtful accounts estimate, this time the June 30, 2003 estimate.

31. Respondent knew that, during FY 2004, Imergent's management adopted a new methodology for estimating its allowance for doubtful accounts. The methodology used at year-end contained numerous new assumptions that were not tested by the engagement team for reasonableness. Under the new methodology, the allowance for doubtful accounts as a percentage of gross trade receivables decreased to 32% as of June 30, 2004 from 47% as of June 30, 2003. In documentation reviewed by Respondent, this trend was identified as being contrary to the engagement team's expectation that the allowance would be 51% of trade receivables as of June 30, 2004. The engagement team obtained no evidence supporting the lower than expected allowance except management's representation as to the reason.

32. Respondent failed to ensure that adequate procedures were performed to (1) assess the reasonableness of the assumptions utilized in the new allowance methodology and (2) test the accuracy of the source data used by management to calculate the FY 2004 year-end allowance estimate.[16/]

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanction agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

> Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Jennifer Nakao is suspended from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i), for a period of one year from the date of this Order.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Ray O Westergard, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2010-003 February 17, 2010

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is barring Ray O Westergard ("Respondent") from being associated with a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the 2004 financial statements of one issuer client.

I.

On April 13, 2009, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. As required by section 105(c)(2) of the Act, these proceedings were not public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

[1/] Respondent may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Westergard, age 69, of Bountiful, Utah is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the state of Utah. (License No. 120165-2601). At all relevant times, he was a partner in the Salt Lake City, Utah office of the registered public accounting firm of Grant Thornton, LLP ("GT"), was the professional standards partner in that office, and was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

2. This matter concerns Respondent's violations of PCAOB Rules and auditing standards in connection with GT's audit of the fiscal year ("FY") 2004 financial statements of Imergent, Inc. ("Imergent" or the "Company"). Respondent's violations occurred in the context of auditing Imergent's FY 2004 (1) revenue, (2) allowance for doubtful accounts, and (3) related financial statement footnote disclosures.

3. GT became the independent auditor for Imergent in February 2002. Respondent became the audit engagement partner in FY 2004 and remained in that role until GT was terminated as the Company's independent auditor in October 2005.

4. Most of Imergent's FY 2004 revenue came from sales of software licenses to customers who were given 24-month extended payment term arrangements

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

("EPTAs") to finance their purchase. Under applicable Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP"), Imergent could recognize revenue from EPTA-financed sales ("EPTA sales") on an accrual basis (i.e., at the time the sale was completed, rather than when cash was ultimately received) only if, among other things, the sales fee was probable of collection and the fee was fixed or determinable. Respondent understood that for the EPTA sales fee to be deemed fixed or determinable, Imergent had to have a history of successfully collecting under the original payment terms without making concessions. Respondent also was aware that Imergent recognized all revenue from EPTA sales on an accrual basis despite having a history of poor collections and a practice of extending financing to all customers regardless of their credit history.

5. Respondent understood that Imergent's historical collection experience for EPTA sales was its primary basis for concluding that the FY 2004 EPTA sales were probable of collection and fixed or determinable. But Respondent failed to ensure that the engagement team sufficiently tested management's representations of its historical collection experience for EPTA sales. In fact, during the FY 2004 audit, Respondent was aware of materially contradictory evidence as to the collection rates of Imergent's EPTAs, but failed to obtain reasonable assurance regarding the actual rates in light of this contradictory evidence.

6. Respondent further failed to ensure that sufficient procedures were performed to test or assess the reasonableness of certain EPTA collection rates disclosed by Imergent in the footnotes to its FY 2004 financial statements and in its filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC").

7. During the FY 2004 audit, the engagement team also identified Imergent's allowance for doubtful accounts as a significant audit issue. In order to properly value its trade receivables balance, Imergent needed to reasonably estimate its allowance for doubtful accounts. The trade receivables balance was comprised primarily of payments due from EPTA sales. At the time of the FY 2004 audit, Respondent was aware that, during FY 2004, Imergent's management adopted a new methodology for estimating its allowance for doubtful accounts. Under the new methodology, the allowance as a percentage of gross trade receivables decreased from 47% as of June 30, 2003 to 32% as of June 30, 2004. This decrease in the allowance reduced bad debt expense, thereby increasing FY 2004 net income. Despite being aware of the new methodology, the inherent risks associated with this significant estimate, and Imergent's history of underestimating the allowance for doubtful accounts, Respondent failed to ensure the performance of sufficient procedures to assess the reasonableness of the June 30, 2004 allowance for doubtful accounts balance.

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

8. Finally, during the FY 2004 audit, Respondent was aware that Imergent had underestimated its year-end allowance for doubtful accounts at June 30, 2003. In addition, Respondent understood that the engagement team needed to perform procedures to assess whether, in light of data that became available during the course of the FY 2004 audit, significant accounting estimates reflected in the prior year financial statements indicate a possible bias on the part of management. Respondent, however, failed to ensure the performance of procedures to ascertain why Imergent had underestimated its FY 2003 year-end allowance, whether the underestimation was the result of management bias, and whether Imergent's June 30, 2004 estimate was possibly influenced by management bias.

C. Respondent Failed to Comply with Certain PCAOB Auditing Standards in Auditing the Financial Statements of Imergent, Inc. for FY 2004

9. Imergent is an e-services company based, at all relevant times, in Orem, Utah.[3/] Imergent's public filings disclose that it sold licenses to use a web-based software called StoresOnline Software ("SOS" or "software"), which assists customers in creating websites. Imergent's shares are listed on the American Stock Exchange. At all relevant times, Imergent was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

10. Respondent served as the concurring review partner on the Imergent engagement in FY 2002. He became the audit engagement partner beginning with the FY 2004 second quarter review and remained in that role until October 2005. In an audit report dated August 27, 2004, and included in Imergent's Form 10-K filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission on September 10, 2004, GT expressed an unqualified opinion on Imergent's consolidated balance sheets as of June 30, 2004 and 2003, and the related consolidated statements of earnings, stockholders' equity, and cash flows for each of the three years in the period ended June 30, 2004. GT's audit report stated that the audit had been conducted in accordance with the standards of the PCAOB, and that, in GT's opinion, Imergent's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, its financial position in conformity with U.S. GAAP. Respondent had final responsibility for the Imergent FY 2004 audit as that phrase is used in AU § 311, Planning and Supervision, and authorized GT's issuance of the FY 2004 Imergent audit report.

11. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that associated persons of registered public accounting firms comply with the Board's auditing standards.[4/] Under these standards, an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[5/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, maintain professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[6/] Respondent failed to comply with these standards in connection with the FY 2004 audit of Imergent.

Imergent's Business and Stratification of Sales

12. According to Imergent's FY 2004 Form 10-K, Imergent began selling the SOS license on October 1, 2000. During FY 2004, Imergent sold SOS licenses through promotional workshops held throughout the United States and in several foreign countries. Imergent disclosed that revenue from the sale of SOS licenses was recognized after the product was delivered to the customer and a three day rescission period expired.

13. Respondent was aware that Imergent accepted three methods of payment for the software: cash, credit cards, or EPTAs. Imergent entered into EPTAs with all purchasers of SOS licenses who made a 5% down payment, completed a credit application, and permitted Imergent to check their credit. The results of the credit check did not preclude a customer from qualifying for an EPTA. Indeed, according to Respondent, Imergent would extend credit through an EPTA to any customer who could "come up with 5% down and fog the mirror."

14. Respondent was aware that Imergent performed the credit check at the time of the workshop and, based on the credit check, stratified purchasers into two distinct groups: "A" customers and "B" customers. Customers with credit scores of 630 or higher were categorized as "A" customers and those with credit scores below 630 were categorized as "B" customers. According to the work papers, Imergent began tracking customers by credit score during FY 2002 and continued to do so throughout the time GT was its independent auditor. The work papers indicate that the majority of FY 2004 EPTA customers were "B" customers.

15. Respondent was aware that, during FY 2004, Imergent sold portions of its EPTA receivables at a discount. Imergent referred to these sold receivables as "funded EPTAs" and the remaining EPTA receivables as "non-funded EPTAs." Imergent used customer credit scores to determine which EPTAs were likely to be funded. Beginning in FY 2003, Imergent also used the distinction between "A" and "B" customers in developing its allowance for doubtful accounts. Imergent developed an allowance for "B" customers representing a significantly lower estimated rate of collections than for "A" customers. In making certain of its revenue recognition decisions, however, Imergent relied on the cumulative collection rate of all EPTA sales to conclude that revenue should be recognized on an accrual basis for sales to all types or classes of EPTA customers.

Imergent's Revenue Recognition Conclusions

16. According to Imergent's FY 2004 Form 10-K, the accounting for EPTA sales was required to comply with American Institute of Certified Public Accountants Statement of Position 97-2, Software Revenue Recognition ("SOP 97-2") and was identified as a critical accounting policy. In order to recognize revenue for the sale of an SOS license on an accrual basis pursuant to SOP 97-2, Imergent was required, among other things, to establish that the sale was probable of collection and that the fee was fixed or determinable.[7/] During each year audited by GT, Imergent concluded that all EPTA sales were probable of collection and the sales price was fixed or determinable.

17. After Imergent's revenue recognition conclusions were questioned by the staff of the SEC's Division of Corporation Finance in May 2005, Imergent announced, on August 19, 2005, that, after consultation with GT, it would "correct its historical revenue recognition policy to cash basis from accrual basis for fiscal years 2002, 2003, 2004 and the first three quarters of fiscal 2005 in order to comply [with GAAP]." In October 2005, Imergent terminated GT as its independent auditor and, subsequently, restated its FY 2004 and 2003 financial statements in conjunction with filing its FY 2005 financial statements.

[7/] Paragraph .08 of SOP 97-2 states:

> If the arrangement does not require significant production, modification, or customization of software, revenue should be recognized when all of the following criteria are met:
>
> - Persuasive evidence of an arrangement exists.
> - Delivery has occurred.
> - The vendor's fee is fixed or determinable.
> - Collectibility is probable.

With regard to whether the fee is "fixed or determinable," Paragraph .28 of SOP 97-2 provides that:

> … if payment of a significant portion of the software licensing fee is not due until after expiration of the license or more than twelve months after delivery, the licensing fee should be presumed not to be fixed or determinable. However, this presumption may be overcome by evidence that the vendor has a standard business practice of using long-term or installment contracts and a history of successfully collecting under the original payment terms without making concessions.

(italics in original; underlining added). Paragraph .29 provides that if the presumption cannot be overcome "revenue should be recognized as payments from customers become due (assuming all other conditions for revenue recognition in this SOP have been satisfied)."

The Engagement Team's FY 2004 Revenue Recognition Concerns

18. During the third quarter of FY 2004, GT concurring review partner on the engagement questioned Imergent's continuing revenue recognition conclusions in an e-mail to Respondent and other GT personnel. The concurring reviewer wrote:

> I am concerned that some of the Company's revenue recognition conclusions are becoming less plausible. The direction that the Company seems to be taking, and its actual experiences may not be reinforcing its previous revenue recognition positions. Specifically, the Company's 'bad debt' experience raises questions. Also, the nature of the follow-up activities and services that the Company is being forced to undertake to improve customer performance and payments seem to be issues for careful consideration as it relates to 'delivery'. [Imergent] seems to have a very high number of dissatisfied customers (or at least unsatisfied) as reflected in the high default rate and the low level of actual successful implementation and use of their products and services by their customers. Does the Company really understand what their customers are expecting when they buy these products and services?

(emphasis added). This e-mail provided additional notice to Respondent of the need for heightened skepticism and sufficient procedures to assess Imergent's collection history and bad debt experience.

19. Respondent knew that Imergent was stratifying its EPTAs into "A" and "B" categories based on customer credit scores to estimate its allowance for doubtful accounts, but not to determine whether revenue should be recognized. The engagement team, with Respondent's knowledge, however, suggested to Imergent in writing in January 2004 that if it could "meaningfully stratify" its EPTAs into groups with different performance histories, it should do so for purposes of determining, by strata, whether the EPTA fees were fixed or determinable and probable of collection. Imergent did not change its revenue recognition practices based on this suggestion.

ORDER

The FY 2004 Audit

20. According to work papers reviewed by Respondent, EPTA sales grew considerably in FY 2004, nearly doubling from $22.5 million in FY 2003 to $44.3 million in FY 2004. EPTA sales comprised nearly 55% of Imergent's total reported FY 2004 revenue of $81 million.

Probability of Collection

21. Respondent knew that Imergent had concluded that its FY 2004 EPTA sales were probable of collection based primarily on its historical collection experience. But Respondent failed to ensure that the engagement team sufficiently tested management's representations of its historical collection experience. In fact, during the 2004 audit, Respondent was aware of materially contradictory evidence as to the collection rates of Imergent's EPTAs, but failed to obtain reasonable assurance regarding the actual rates in light of this contradictory evidence.[8/]

22. The engagement team's analysis of the appropriateness of Imergent's revenue recognition policies is documented in a memorandum addressing revenue recognition (the "Revenue Recognition Memo") included in the FY 2004 audit work papers and reviewed by Respondent. In discussing SOS sales in the Revenue Recognition Memo, the engagement team asked "[i]s collection probable on sales under [EPTAs]?" In response, the memo states:

> The Company's position is that collection of the fee is probable since, on average, 70% of EPTA fees are paid. An analysis of the payment types and [EPTAs] delineated previously in this document shows that approximately 100% of cash and credit card payments are collected, approximately 98% of funded [EPTAs] are collected, and approximately 47% of non-funded [EPTAs] are collected. These percentages have been reasonably consistent and the Company is able to accurately estimate the percentage of bad debt likely to occur in a given classification of [EPTAs].

[8/] See AU § 333.04 ("If a representation made by management is contradicted by other audit evidence, the auditor should investigate the circumstances and consider the reliability of the representation made").

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

> CONCLUSION: The Company's position that the collection of the workshop fees is probable is appropriate. The Company recognizes bad debt expense in the period in which the bad debt is expected to have occurred. History has shown that payments under [EPTAs] are probable of collection, notwithstanding the fact that the bad debt percentage is very high on certain classes of [EPTAs]."

23. Respondent did not ensure that the EPTA collection percentages in the Revenue Recognition Memo were tested for reliability, even though the percentages were identical to the percentages in the previous year (and, for all but one figure, identical to the collection percentages from two years prior),[9/] and other information reviewed by Respondent showed a worsening collection history.

24. The FY 2004 work papers contain two documents analyzing Imergent's historical collection rates. They are: (1) a series of company-prepared spreadsheets analyzing Imergent's collections for the last six months of FY 2004 ("Six Month Analysis"),[10/] and (2) a company-prepared ratio analysis ("Ratio Analysis"). Both documents were reviewed by Respondent during the audit. Neither document provided sufficient competent evidential matter to support management's assertion that EPTA sales were probable of collection.[11/]

25. The Six Month Analysis did not provide a basis for concluding that EPTA sales were probable of collection because, among other things, it consisted of insufficiently tested management representations and included data that did not allow for a meaningful analysis of historical collection rates. In fact, the Six Month Analysis overstated certain of the EPTA collection rates in the analysis.

[9/] The purported collection percentages for FY 2003 and FY 2004 were identical, and differed in only one respect from those in FY 2002; i.e., one number shown as 45% in FY 2002 work papers became 47% in the FY 2003 and FY 2004 work papers.

[10/] The Six Month Analysis is included in a GT work paper entitled "Allowance for Bad Debts Workbook."

[11/] See AU § 326.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

26. The Ratio Analysis contradicted Imergent's assertion that its EPTA sales were probable of collection and put Respondent on notice that Imergent's recent collection history did not support its asserted collection rates. The Ratio Analysis disclosed that, as of June 30, 2004, Imergent had written off 69% of EPTAs originated in FY 2003 and had written off 53% of EPTAs originated in FY 2002. In other words, the Ratio Analysis indicated that for the prior two fiscal years, Imergent wrote-off more than 50% of the total amount of EPTA sales. Further, the FY 2004 work papers include a Concluding Ratio Analysis, which was reviewed by Respondent and states that "installment contracts on average are about 47% collectible . . . ." Despite this contradictory information, Respondent failed to ensure that the engagement team sufficiently tested management's assertion that EPTA sales were probable of collection and that "on average, 70% of EPTA fees are paid."[12/]

27. During the FY 2004 audit, Respondent failed to ensure that the engagement team obtained sufficient competent evidential matter to evaluate Imergent's historical collection rate for EPTAs or otherwise evaluate the primary basis for management's assertion that Imergent's EPTA sales were probable of collection. Moreover, Respondent failed to ensure that the engagement team took steps to determine how, in light of the representations in the Ratio Analysis, Imergent maintained its assertion that all EPTA sales were probable of collection. Respondent improperly relied on management representations as a substitute for ensuring that sufficient procedures were performed to reasonably conclude on whether EPTA sales were probable of collection. Finally, despite knowing that Imergent grouped EPTA customers into categories with substantially different historical collection rates, Respondent failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to accept Imergent's conclusion that the collection histories of all types and classes of EPTA sales could be combined to determine whether EPTA sales were probable of collection, and failed to assess adequately whether Imergent could properly recognize revenue on an accrual basis for sales to customers with inferior credit scores.

[12/] See AU § 326.25 ("In developing his or her opinion, the auditor should consider relevant evidential matter regardless of whether it appears to corroborate or to contradict the assertions in the financial statements. To the extent the auditor remains in substantial doubt about any assertion of material significance, he or she must refrain from forming an opinion until he or she has obtained sufficient competent evidential matter to remove such substantial doubt or the auditor must express a qualified opinion or a disclaimer of opinion.").

ORDER

Fixed or Determinable

28. In addition to satisfying the probability of collection requirement, Imergent had to establish that the EPTA sales fee was fixed or determinable before revenue could be recognized on an accrual basis. Respondent understood that an EPTA sales fee was presumed not to be fixed or determinable under SOP 97-2 because payment of a significant portion of the fee was not due until more than 12 months after delivery. However, Imergent could overcome this presumption if it had "a standard business practice of using long-term or installment contracts and a history of successfully collecting under the original payment terms without making concessions."[13/] Imergent represented to GT that it overcame the presumption.

29. Respondent was aware that Imergent concluded that it had a history of successfully collecting EPTA sales fees based on the same historical collection experience it used to assess whether its EPTA sales were probable of collection. Yet, as previously described, Respondent did not ensure that the engagement team sufficiently tested the historical collection experience of EPTAs. Thus, the engagement team failed to perform sufficient procedures to adequately assess whether Imergent had a history of successfully collecting under the original payment terms without making concessions. Consequently, the engagement team did not obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to evaluate management's assertion that the fees from EPTA sales were fixed or determinable.

Financial Statement Revenue Recognition Disclosures

30. In the footnotes to the FY 2004 financial statements, Imergent disclosed that "[d]uring fiscal years ended June 30, 1999 through 2004, the Company has collected or is collecting approximately 70% of all EPTAs issued to customers … Despite reasonable efforts, approximately 47% of all EPTAs not sold to third party financial institutions become uncollectible during the life of the contract." Respondent failed to ensure that the engagement team performed sufficient procedures to assess whether the collection rates disclosed in the financial statement footnotes were reasonably accurate.

[13/] SOP 97-2 Paragraph .28.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

31. Certain FY 2004 work papers, prepared under Respondent's supervision, document without specific citations that the 70% and 47% figures were purportedly traced to support elsewhere in the work papers. The only place in the work papers where similar figures are found is in the Revenue Recognition Memo. Tracing the figures to the Revenue Recognition Memo, however, did not provide sufficient competent evidential matter to assess their reasonableness because the Revenue Recognition Memo figures consist of untested management representations that were contradicted by other evidence in the work papers, including the 2004 Ratio Analysis and the Concluding Ratio Analysis.

Allowance for Doubtful Accounts

32. Imergent's FY 2004 financial statements disclose that its customers owed Imergent $27.9 million as of June 30, 2004. Imergent referred to these amounts due from customers as trade receivables and reflected the amounts as assets on their balance sheet. Because Imergent expected that some of its trade receivables would not be paid, it estimated how much would not be collected. This amount is referred to as an allowance for doubtful accounts. As of June 30, 2004, Imergent recorded an allowance for doubtful accounts of $9 million, meaning it expected to collect approximately $18.9 million of its trade receivables balance. Net trade receivables ($18.9 million) comprised approximately 47% of total assets as of June 30, 2004 and was described in the work papers as a significant issue. Respondent reviewed company-prepared schedules calculating the allowance.

33. As documented in work papers reviewed by Respondent, Imergent had a history of under-estimating its allowance for doubtful accounts. During FY 2003, Imergent determined that it had significantly underestimated its June 30, 2002 allowance. According to the work papers, Imergent learned during FY 2004 that it had again under-estimated its allowance for doubtful accounts estimate, this time the June 30, 2003 estimate.

34. Respondent knew that, during FY 2004, Imergent's management adopted a new methodology for estimating its allowance for doubtful accounts. The methodology used at year-end contained numerous new assumptions that were not tested by the engagement team for reasonableness. Under the new methodology, the allowance for doubtful accounts as a percentage of gross trade receivables decreased to 32% as of June 30, 2004 from 47% as of June 30, 2003. In documentation reviewed by Respondent, this trend was identified as being contrary to the engagement team's

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

expectation that the allowance would be 51% of trade receivables as of June 30, 2004. The engagement team obtained insufficient evidence supporting the lower than expected allowance.[14/]

35. Respondent failed to ensure that adequate procedures were performed to (1) assess the reasonableness of the assumptions utilized in the new allowance methodology and (2) test the accuracy of the source data used by management to calculate the FY 2004 year-end allowance estimate.

Consideration of Fraud

36. The allowance for doubtful accounts was identified by the engagement team as a significant accounting estimate and a fraud risk. Respondent was advised of the audit committee chairman's concern that the allowance for doubtful accounts presented a fraud risk.

37. During the FY 2004 audit, Imergent provided an analysis, reviewed by Respondent, indicating that it had written off significantly more of its FY 2003 receivable balance than it had estimated in conjunction with the prior year audit. Respondent also knew that Imergent had underestimated its June 30, 2002 allowance for doubtful accounts. In addition, Respondent understood that the engagement team needed to perform procedures to assess whether, in light of data that became available during the course of the FY 2004 audit, significant accounting estimates reflected in the prior year financial statements indicate a possible bias on the part of management. Respondent, however, failed to ensure the performance of procedures to understand why Imergent underestimated its FY 2003 year-end allowance and whether the underestimation was the result of management bias.[15/] Moreover, Respondent failed to consider whether, in light of Imergent's underestimation of the prior year allowance estimate, Imergent's June 30, 2004 estimate was possibly influenced by management bias.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Chintapatla Ravindernath, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2010-005 March 16, 2010

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is barring Chintapatla Ravindernath ("Ravindernath," or "Respondent") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing this sanction pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5300(b)(1), on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's noncooperation with a Board investigation, by failing to comply with an Accounting Board Demand ("Demand") requiring, among other things, his testimony.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(3) against the Respondent.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, the Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer in this matter, the Board finds that[1/]:

A. Respondent

1. Chintapatla Ravindernath, age 38, is a citizen and a resident of India, and has been a practicing accountant in Hyderabad, Andhra Pradesh, India and an Associate Member of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India ("ICAI")[2/] since 1995 (License No. ACA-204494). At all relevant times, Ravindernath was a Senior Manager with the registered public accounting firm of Lovelock & Lewes, Chartered Accountants ("Lovelock"), and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Ravindernath resigned from Lovelock on or about January 29, 2010.

B. Respondent Failed to Cooperate with a PCAOB Investigation.

2. Pursuant to Section 105(b) of the Act and PCAOB Rules, the Board conducts investigations into acts or practices of registered public accounting firms and their associated persons that may violate any provision of the Act, the Rules of the Board, the provisions of securities laws relating to the preparation and issuance of audit reports and the obligations and liabilities of accountants with respect thereto, including the rules of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") issued under the Act, or professional standards. Section 105(b)(3)(A) of the Act authorizes the Board to sanction an associated person of a registered public accounting firm for refusing to testify in connection with a Board investigation.

3. As described below, Respondent failed to cooperate with the Board's investigation by failing to comply with a Demand requiring his testimony, issued to Respondent pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5102(b).

1/ The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondent's Offer, and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

Background

4. Lovelock is one of five members of the PricewaterhouseCoopers International Limited network of firms that is located in India and registered with the Board. Lovelock participated in the audits of the March 31, 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 financial statements of Satyam Computer Services, Limited ("Satyam"). Satyam is an issuer, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

5. From April 2000, until March 2005, Respondent was the Deputy Manager for the Satyam audit engagement, and from April 2005, until February 2009, he was the Engagement Manager for the Satyam audit engagement.[3/]

6. As the Engagement Manager for the 2006, 2007, and 2008 Satyam audit engagements, Respondent had responsibility for, among other areas, supervising and reviewing audit work related to cash and accounts receivable.

7. On January 7, 2009, Satyam filed a Form 6-K with the Commission in which Satyam disclosed that its founder and then chairman revealed that he had inflated key financial results for Satyam, including overstating a cash balance by $1 billion, overstating profits for the past several years, overstating the amount of debt owed to Satyam, and understating Satyam's liabilities.

8. On January 8, 2009, the Board issued an Order of Formal Investigation regarding the audits and reviews of the financial statements of Satyam.

9. On January 14, 2009, Satyam reported to the Commission, on a Form 6-K, that Price Waterhouse had advised that all audit reports for the period 2000-2008 should no longer be relied upon.

Respondent's Refusal to Appear and Testify

10. On January 8, 2009, the Division sent Respondent a Demand which required him to appear for testimony on March 10, 2009.

11. The Division anticipated taking testimony from the Respondent concerning, among other things, his role in the audits of Satyam's financial statements.

[3/] The audit opinions on Satyam's financial statements were signed in the name of Price Waterhouse.

ORDER

12. After several attempts to accommodate Respondent with respect to the dates and location of testimony, including a delay to allow new counsel to become familiar with the matter after Respondent changed counsel, Respondent, through counsel, informed the Division in January 2010 that he would not comply with the Demand for testimony.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(b)(3)(A)(i) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(b)(1), Chintapatla Ravindernath is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

ORDER

12. After several attempts to accommodate Respondent with respect to the dates and location of testimony, including a delay to allow new counsel to become familiar with the matter after Respondent changed counsel, Respondent, through counsel, informed the Division in January 2010 that he would not comply with the Demand for testimony.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(b)(3)(A)(i) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(b)(1), Siva Prasad Pulavarthi is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Robert T. Taylor, CPA and Robert T. Taylor, CPA Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2010-006 April 27, 2010

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Robert T. Taylor, CPA (the "Firm") and barring Robert T. Taylor, CPA ("Taylor") (collectively, "Respondents") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of an issuer client from 2006 to 2008.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against the Firm and Taylor.

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Robert T. Taylor, CPA, is a public accounting firm located in Bothell, Washington. At all relevant times, the Firm was licensed by the Washington State Board of Accountancy (License No. 0404). The Firm, formed in 1997, is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board Rules. Other than Robert T. Taylor, the Firm has no partners or employees engaging in public company auditing.

2. Robert T. Taylor, 69, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of Washington State (License No. 02810). He is the Firm's sole proprietor and, at all times relevant to this matter, was an associated person of the Firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the 2006, 2007 and 2008 financial statements of an issuer client, American Fiber Green Products, Inc. ("American Fiber"). As detailed below, Respondents failed to perform procedures to audit American Fiber's financial statements. In each audit year and in significant audit areas, Respondents failed to: (a) plan adequately for the audit; (b) perform audit procedures on the issuer's assets and liabilities; (c) consider whether certain assets still existed or were impaired; and (d) prepare and maintain sufficient audit documentation.

C. American Fiber

4. American Fiber is a Nevada corporation headquartered in Tampa, Florida. At all relevant times, its common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and, from April 2008, was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. According to its public filings, the company reclaims fiberglass and produces fiberglass recreational products. At all relevant times, American Fiber was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

5. American Fiber initially engaged Respondents to audit its financial statements after the company was formed through a merger in 2004 of Amour Fiber Core, Inc. ("AFC") and American Leisure Products, Inc. ("ALP").[2/] Thereafter, American Fiber renewed Respondents' engagement to audit the company's financial statements for the years ending December 31, 2006, December 31, 2007 and December 31, 2008.[3/] In connection with the American Fiber engagements, Respondents issued audit reports on American Fiber's 2006, 2007 and 2008 financial statements.[4/] Each report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, expressed an unqualified audit opinion, and stated that, in the Firm's opinion, the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP").[5/] The audit reports were dated January 20, 2007[6/], March 22, 2007, March 28, 2008, and April 1, 2009 and were included as part of the following American Fiber filings: (a) the Form 10SB12G and the amendments filed respectively on February 22, 2007, April 12, 2007, June 18, 2007, July 23, 2007 and August 10, 2007; (b) the Form 10-KSB and the amendments filed respectively on April 16, 2007, June 19, 2007, July 23, 2007, and August 10, 2007; (c) the Form 10-KSB filed on March 31, 2008; and (d) the Form 10-K filed on April 15, 2009.[7/]

6. American Fiber reported in its financial statements filed with the Commission that its financial disclosure controls and procedures, as defined in Rules 13a-15(e) and 15d-15(e) under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, were not effective.[8/] American Fiber's financial statements for the period ended December 31,

8. Audit work should be adequately planned.[16/] In planning an audit, an auditor should consider the nature, extent and timing of work to be performed and should prepare a written audit program.[17/] The audit program should set forth in reasonable detail the audit procedures that the auditor believes are necessary to accomplish the objectives of the audit.

9. Auditing standards require an auditor to obtain written representations from management for all financial statements and periods covered by the auditor's report as part of the auditing procedures.[18/] Specific management representations should include, among others, the completeness of the information provided, management's acknowledgment of its responsibility for the design and implementation of programs and control to prevent and detect fraud, and management's knowledge of fraud and allegations or suspicions of fraud.[19/] Moreover, restrictions on the scope of the audit, including a lack of sufficient competent evidential matter, may require the auditor to qualify or disclaim his audit opinion.[20/] As detailed below, Respondents failed to meet the aforementioned standards in connection with the audits of American Fiber's 2006, 2007 and 2008 financial statements.

The 2006, 2007, and 2008 Audits

10. In each of the three audit years, Respondents' audit plan was a disclosure checklist for non-public companies. Respondents failed to plan for the risk of material error or fraud, failed to consider related party transactions to be an area of risk, and failed to adequately document the planning procedures.[21/]

11. Respondents also failed to obtain any written management representation for the financial statements and periods covered by the audit opinions in each of the three audit years.[22/]

12. Despite American Fiber's conclusion that its disclosure controls and procedures were not effective, Respondents did not assess how that disclosure impacted their audit procedures. For each of the three audit years, Respondents did not test the company's internal controls and did not document how that determination was reached[23/] or how the assessment of internal controls impacted the planning of the audit to determine the nature, timing and extent of the tests to be performed.[24/]

13. Respondents have acknowledged to the Division of Enforcement and Investigations ("Division") staff that they performed very few audit procedures in conducting the 2006, 2007 and 2008 audits of American Fiber and failed to comply with PCAOB standards. Respondents described the engagement with American Fiber as "review[ing] the changes in receivables and payables, conversions from debt to common stock, computation of interest on debt instruments, or in other words, a simple balance sheet review either on an interim basis and at year end with a review of notes to financial statements." In addition, Taylor stated that he "relied on … the previous years' audit figures and made inquiries as to the changes…other than that, I did nothing." While Respondents generally inquired of management about an item on the balance sheet if there was a change of 10% or greater from year-to-year for that item and performed limited procedures on that item, if the year-to-year difference for a balance sheet item was less than 10%, Respondents performed no audit procedures to test that item.

14. As described in detail below, Respondents failed to test significant balances and transactions reported in the financial statements of American Fiber. Specifically, Respondents failed to test the balances of notes receivable, accounts payable and deferred wages in the current periods. In addition, Respondents failed to test an asset purchase transaction as well as transactions involving stock issued for services.

15. In its 2006, 2007 and 2008 financial statements, American Fiber reported notes receivables of $78,605, $98,405 and $98,405, respectively. The notes receivable balances represented 52%, 63% and 61% of the total assets at the end of each of the respective years. The notes receivable balances consisted of related party notes all of which were past maturity. The notes earned interest which was recorded as a receivable. As reflected on the balance sheets, the interest receivable continued to increase during the relevant periods. Respondents did not assess whether the notes or the corresponding interest receivable were collectible or impaired. Respondents failed to test the existence of the notes during the current periods and failed to determine whether the values of the notes receivables included in the financial statements were appropriate.[25/]

16. In its 2006, 2007 and 2008 financial statements, American Fiber reported accounts payable of $284,499, $347,788 and $350,308, respectively. The accounts payable balances represented 15%, 17% and 16% of the total liabilities at the end of each of the respective years. Other than relying on management's representations, Respondents failed to test the balances of accounts payable, during the current periods. Respondents also failed to: (a) test the existence of the accounts payable; (b) test whether the company had the obligations for these liabilities; and (c) determine whether the values included in the financial statements were appropriate.

[25/] Respondents testified that they had reviewed the notes and obtained third party confirmation in a previous audit, but failed to perform additional audit procedures for the 2006, 2007 and 2008 audits.

17. In its 2006, 2007 and 2008 financial statements, American Fiber reported deferred wages of $534,097, $608,397 and $682,697, respectively. The balances of deferred wages represented 29%, 29% and 32% of the total liabilities at the end of each of the respective years. Other than relying on management's representations, Respondents failed to verify the existence and completeness of the deferred wages balance and failed to determine whether the balances of deferred wages were appropriately valued.

18. American Fiber reported in its 2006 financial statements that the assets of ALP (Tooling) were added to the assets of AFC in a purchase transaction with a corresponding $50,000 capital contribution recorded as additional paid-in capital.[26/] Respondents acknowledged that they did not understand the transaction or assure that the transaction was recorded accurately, did not know what assets were added, did not test the transaction, and did not determine the adequacy of the disclosure.

19. In its 2007 and 2008 financial statements, American Fiber reported that it had issued stock for cash, services or debt. In 2007, American Fiber issued 20,400 shares of the company's common stock valued at $13,260 for cash and 30,000 shares valued at $25,500 for services.[27/] In 2008, American Fiber issued 2,120,188 shares of the company's common stock to reduce $107,009 of debt.[28/] During the 2007 and 2008 audits, Respondents relied on management's representations and failed to perform audit procedures to test these transactions. Respondents also failed to determine that these transactions existed and were appropriately valued. Additionally, they failed to determine the completeness of the stock transactions and whether other such similar transactions occurred. Respondents also failed to assess whether disclosure was required for these transactions in the company's financial statements.

In each of the three audit years, Respondents failed to document the audit procedures performed, the evidence obtained, and the conclusions reached with respect to relevant financial statement assertions.[29/] Respondents failed to document discussions with management and third parties, and failed to prepare and maintain adequate documentation of the audit procedures performed to show the evidence obtained and the conclusions reached.[30/]

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Robert T. Taylor, CPA is revoked; and

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Traci Jo Anderson and Traci Jo Anderson, CPA Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2010-007 August 12, 2010

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Traci Jo Anderson (the "Firm") and barring Traci Jo Anderson, CPA ("Anderson") (collectively, "Respondents") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of three issuer clients from 2007 to 2009.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against the Firm and Anderson.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents each have submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Traci Jo Anderson is a public accounting firm located in Huntersville, North Carolina. At all relevant times, the Firm was licensed by the North Carolina State Board of Certified Public Accountant Examiners. The Firm, formed in 2003, is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board Rules.

2. Anderson, 42, is and was at all relevant times a certified public accountant licensed by the North Carolina State Board of Certified Public Accountant Examiners (Certificate No. 30009) and the Florida Board of Accountancy (License No.

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

Prior to forming the Firm, Anderson had no experience with the audits of issuers. The Firm's professional staff during the relevant period consisted of Anderson and a certified public accountant who worked with the Firm as an independent contractor.

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' numerous and repeated violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of HouseRaising, Inc. ("HouseRaising"), UpSNAP, Inc. ("UpSNAP"), and Envirosafe Corporation ("Envirosafe"). As detailed below, Respondents failed to comply with PCAOB auditing standards during the audit of the financial statements of these issuer clients. [2/]

[2/] The Firm has been the subject of two PCAOB inspections – the first between November 2006 and January 2007 ("2006 Board Inspection"), and the second in October 2008 ("2008 Board Inspection"). Following the first inspection, staff of the PCAOB's Division of Registration and Inspections ("Inspections staff") notified Respondents in writing of various audit deficiencies relating to the Firm's audits of HouseRaising and three other issuers, including the failure to perform sufficient procedures regarding the appropriate capitalization of software costs; the existence, completeness, and valuation of warrants; and the valuation of stock issued for services. Respondents' subsequent audit work for HouseRaising, UpSNAP, and Envirosafe reflected several deficiencies in these same audit areas. Also, the Board's April 24, 2008 report of its first inspection of the Firm specified certain defects in and criticisms of the Firm's quality control system, including the extent to which it provided reasonable assurance of technical competence, the exercise of due care or professional skepticism, the performance of audit procedures to test for evidence of possible material misstatements due to fraud, the identification of missing or incomplete financial statement disclosures, the conduct of all testing appropriate to a particular audit, and an effective arrangement for competent concurring partner reviews. Pursuant to Section 104(g) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 4009, Part II of that report was made public on July 7, 2009, following the Firm's failure to address those quality control defects and criticisms. Also, Part II of the report of the 2008 Board Inspection, issued June 29, 2009, was made public on August 2, 2010, following the Firm's failure to address the quality control defects and criticisms set out therein.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

4. Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the fiscal year ("FY") 2006 financial statements of HouseRaising. These violations included failing to perform sufficient procedures related to (a) the capitalization of software costs, (b) the value of capitalized software, (c) outstanding and future warrants, (d) the value of stock issued for services, and (e) contract revenues. In addition, Respondents failed to prepare audit documentation as required by PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS3").

5. Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the FY 2007 and FY 2009 financial statements of UpSNAP. These violations included failing to perform sufficient procedures related to (a) certain assets and liabilities, (b) the value of goodwill, and (c) the value of stock issued for services. In addition, Respondents failed to prepare audit documentation as required by AS3.

6. Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the FY 2006 and FY 2007 financial statements of Envirosafe. Respondents failed to adequately test the valuation of stock issued for services. In addition, Respondents failed to prepare audit documentation as required by AS3.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

7. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards and related professional practice standards.[3/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[4/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[5/] An auditor must also prepare audit documentation in sufficient

Capitalized Software

10. HouseRaising disclosed capitalized software in the amount of $13,722,956 as of December 31, 2006, representing approximately 92% of total assets. HouseRaising disclosed that its capitalized software assets included "certain external direct costs of materials and services consumed in developing internal-use software (System C) for home plans and designs, and operating systems and policies for homebuilders."[10/]

11. Respondents identified capitalized software as an audit area that presented significant risk, and identified "overstating the valuation of capitalized software" as a fraud risk. Respondents nevertheless failed to perform sufficient procedures to determine (a) whether software costs were appropriately capitalized, and (b) whether capitalized software was fairly valued.

12. Respondents understood that HouseRaising was capitalizing its software development costs pursuant to AICPA Statement of Position 98-1, Accounting for the Costs of Computer Software Developed or Obtained for Internal Use ("SOP 98-1"). SOP 98-1 applies to software developed to meet the entity's internal needs, not to software to be sold, leased, or otherwise marketed as a separate product or as part of a product or process.[11/] Respondents failed to adequately evaluate evidence regarding whether System C was developed solely to meet HouseRaising's internal needs. For example, Respondents obtained documentation from HouseRaising's management indicating that HouseRaising intended to market System C to homeowners and homebuilders for a fee. Respondents were aware of the company's disclosure that it had signed agreements to give homebuilders access to System C. Respondents also obtained from HouseRaising's management a marketing plan related to System C. Respondents failed to evaluate this audit evidence or otherwise obtain sufficient competent evidence that HouseRaising had capitalized its software costs in conformity with GAAP.

13. Respondents also failed to perform sufficient procedures concerning the stage of System C's development. Other than rely on management's representations, Respondents failed to gather sufficient competent evidence that System C was in the application development stage.[12/]

14. HouseRaising capitalized approximately $3 million in software development costs in FY 2006. These capitalized costs included cash payments and stock issuances for services provided. Respondents identified the recipients of such payments and issuances, but failed to obtain sufficient competent audit evidence concerning whether these individuals performed work related to System C or, if so, what proportion of their work related to System C.

15. Respondents failed to perform procedures to test the value of HouseRaising's capitalized software. Respondents communicated to management the possibility of impairment and recommended that System C be appraised, but failed to do anything to determine whether an impairment analysis or appraisal was performed,

Warrants

16. HouseRaising's FY 2006 financial statements disclosed the issuance or future issuance of 23,077,393 warrants. Those warrants represented the rights to acquire shares of common stock totaling approximately 45 percent of the number of common stock shares outstanding. Respondents identified warrants and their proper presentation as a significant issue in their audit of HouseRaising's FY 2006 financial statements. Respondents nevertheless failed to obtain sufficient competent audit evidence concerning the issuance, existence, completeness, or valuation of the warrants disclosed by HouseRaising. Respondents reviewed a shareholder list compiled by HouseRaising's stock transfer agent, but that list reflected holdings of outstanding shares, not issuances or holdings of outstanding warrants. Respondents also failed to gather sufficient competent evidence to determine the adequacy of HouseRaising's disclosures concerning warrants.[13/]

Stock for Services

17. HouseRaising disclosed the issuance in FY 2006 of $2,172,653 in common stock and warrants for services, an amount equaling approximately 21% of total stockholders' equity as of December 31, 2006.

18. Respondents identified stock for services as a significant issue for the audit, and expense accounts tied to stock compensation as an audit area that presented significant risk and for which "[b]asic procedures plus selected extended procedures" were appropriate. Respondents nevertheless failed to determine whether HouseRaising's disclosure concerning stock issued for services in its Form 10-KSB for FY 2006 complied with GAAP. SFAS 123(R), paragraph 64, states: "An entity with one or more share-based payment arrangements shall disclose information that enables users of the financial statements to understand: a. The nature and terms of such arrangements that existed during the period and the potential effects of those arrangements on shareholders b. The effect of compensation cost arising from share-

The cash flow effects resulting from share-based payment arrangements."[14/] HouseRaising failed to disclose such information in its FY 2006 Form 10-KSB. Respondents failed to identify or address the deficiency with the disclosure.[15/] HouseRaising subsequently received comment letters from the Commission concerning, in part, the adequacy of its disclosures concerning stock issued for services. HouseRaising thereafter filed a Form 10-KSB/A containing, among other things, restated disclosures relating to stock issued for services in FY 2006. Respondents failed to perform any procedures concerning the additional disclosures in the amended filing.[16/]

Revenue Recognition

19. HouseRaising's FY 2006 financial statements disclosed $1,249,221 in sales and $270,520 in gross profit from sales. HouseRaising also reported a net loss of $2,999,358 in FY 2006. Respondents identified revenue recognition as a significant issue and as an area of HouseRaising's financial statements that might be susceptible to material misstatement due to fraud. Respondents nevertheless failed to obtain sufficient competent evidence concerning amounts recognized as revenue by HouseRaising in FY 2006.

20. Approximately 88% of HouseRaising's sales in FY 2006 consisted of revenue from construction contracts. HouseRaising's FY 2006 financial statements disclosed that revenues and profits from the general management of construction contracts were recognized using the completed-contract method of accounting.[17/]

Respondents simply accepted management's representation that the use of the completed-contract method was appropriate without doing further work or analysis of the appropriateness of the accounting treatment.[18/] Respondents did not consider whether the alternative accounting method, specifically the percentage-of-completion method, was more appropriate in the circumstances. The percentage-of-completion method is preferable as an accounting policy under certain conditions[19/] and in circumstances in which reasonably dependable estimates can be made, and there is a presumption that entities in the contracting business have the ability to make estimates that are sufficiently dependable to justify the use of percentage-of-completion.[20/] Persuasive evidence to the contrary is necessary to overcome that presumption.[21/] Respondents did nothing to determine whether management's representation complied with the accounting guidance or whether the presumption in favor of percentage-of-completion was overcome. The completed-contract method may be used "as an entity's basic accounting policy in circumstances in which financial position and results of operations would not vary materially from those resulting from use of the percentage-of-completion method."[22/] Respondents did nothing to quantify or compare the results of the two methods.

At all relevant times, UpSNAP's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. UpSNAP's public filings disclosed that the company was in the business of developing and distributing mobile search and entertainment platforms and content until September 2008, and thereafter, in the business of building and manufacturing homes, modular sites, ready-to-move homes, and modular camp sites in Canada. At all relevant times, UpSNAP was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

Those financial statements reflected certain assets acquired and liabilities assumed by UpSNAP in an acquisition on January 6, 2006 of a company known as XSVoice, Inc. for an aggregate purchase price of $6,393,223. Respondents failed to obtain sufficient competent evidence to determine existence, valuation, or completeness of the assets acquired and liabilities assumed by UpSNAP.[26/] Respondents also failed to perform procedures to test the allocation of UpSNAP's purchase price to those assets and liabilities.

25. UpSNAP's FY 2007 financial statements disclosed goodwill in the amount of $4,677,862 as of September 30, 2007. Goodwill constituted approximately 77% of UpSNAP's total assets.[27/] Respondents identified valuation and impairment of goodwill as business and fraud risks. UpSNAP's management performed an impairment analysis of the goodwill by calculating the present value of UpSNAP's expected future cash flows over thirty years based on certain assumptions including an undiscounted cash flow in Year 1 of $900,000. Management concluded goodwill was not impaired after determining that the present value exceeded the carrying amount of goodwill. As a result, Respondents failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to provide them with a reasonable basis for forming an opinion concerning goodwill.[31/]

26. In addition, Respondents failed to evaluate whether UpSNAP's critical accounting policy concerning valuation and impairment of goodwill complied with GAAP. UpSNAP disclosed among the "Critical Accounting Estimates and Policies" in its Form 10-KSB for FY 2007 that it reviewed the carrying value of long-lived assets in accordance with SFAS No. 144, Accounting for the Impairment or Disposal of Long-Lived Assets.[32/] Respondents understood that one of UpSNAP's critical accounting policies was the valuation of goodwill in accordance with SFAS No. 144. ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Jacqueline A. Higgins, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2010-008 December 3, 2010

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Jacqueline A. Higgins, CPA ("Higgins" or "Respondent"). The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the improper removal, addition, and backdating of audit documentation prior to a Board inspection.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against the Respondent.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Higgins, 27, of Quincy, Massachusetts, is a certified public accountant who is licensed under the laws of the State of New York (license no. 097381-1), and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts (license no. 27834). At all relevant times, Higgins was a manager in the Boston, Massachusetts office of the registered public accounting firm of Ernst & Young LLP ("E&Y"), and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). E&Y removed Higgins from the audit engagement team for the "Company," as defined below in paragraph four, in July 2010, and at that time Higgins ceased participating in issuer audit engagements.

B. Summary

2. E&Y has been the independent auditor for the Company since May 4, 2002. E&Y issued an audit report expressing an unqualified opinion on the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements. Respondent was the manager for the audit of the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements ("Audit"). Respondent was supervised by an E&Y engagement partner and an E&Y senior manager during the course of the Audit.

3. This matter concerns Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards. Respondent repeatedly violated both Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, and Auditing Standard No. 3 ("AS3"), Audit Documentation. Respondent improperly removed, added, and backdated working papers in advance of the Board's inspection of the Audit, in violation of Rule 4006. In violation of AS3, Respondent: (1) added documents to the working papers without indicating the dates that documents were added to the working papers, the names of the persons preparing the additional documentation, and the reason for adding the documentation months after the documentation completion date; and (2) removed a document from the working papers after the documentation completion date.

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

C. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards.

4. The Company is an "issuer" as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). In April 2010 the Board inspected E&Y's audit of the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements.

5. PCAOB rules require that an associated person of a registered public accounting firm "shall cooperate with the Board in the performance of any Board inspection."[2/] This cooperation obligation "includes an obligation not to provide misleading documents or information in connection with the Board's inspection processes."[3/] PCAOB rules also require that associated persons of registered public accounting firms comply with the Board's auditing standards.[4/] Among other things, PCAOB auditing standards prohibit the deletion of audit documentation after the documentation completion date. PCAOB auditing standards also require that an auditor make certain written disclosures if the auditor adds audit working papers after the documentation completion date.[5/] As detailed below, Respondent violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards when she: (1) improperly removed, added, and backdated audit working papers; and (2) provided misleading audit documentation to the Board in connection with the Board's inspection of the Audit.

Respondent's Employment History at E&Y

6. Respondent graduated from college in May 2005, and joined E&Y as "staff" in September 2005. E&Y promoted Respondent to "senior" in October 2007. E&Y promoted Respondent to "manager" in October 2009.

7. At the time E&Y promoted Respondent to manager, E&Y assigned Respondent to serve as the manager for the audit of the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements.

8. Respondent's work on the Audit was supervised by an E&Y engagement partner ("Engagement Partner") and an E&Y senior manager ("Senior Manager"). The Engagement Partner had been a member of the audit engagement team since 2005. The Senior Manager had been a member of the audit engagement team since 2005, as well. The Engagement Partner was responsible for ensuring Respondent's compliance with PCAOB rules and auditing standards related to the Audit.

The Audit

9. E&Y audited the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements. E&Y's audit report was dated November 23, 2009. The audit report expressed an unqualified opinion and stated that the Audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. The audit report stated that the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the Company's financial position, results of operations, and changes in net assets in conformity with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP"). The audit report was included in the Company's annual report filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") on November 27, 2009.

10. The audit report release date for the Audit was November 24, 2009.[6/] The documentation completion date, therefore, was January 8, 2010.[7/] Following the documentation completion date, audit documentation must not be deleted or discarded from the working papers.[8/] While information may be added to the working papers, the new documentation must disclose the date the information was added, the person

Steps Taken in Advance of the Board's Inspection

11. On March 30, 2010, the Board notified E&Y that the Board's Division of Registration and Inspections ("Board's Inspection Division") would inspect the Audit. The Act "requires the Board to conduct a 'continuing program of inspections to assess the degree of compliance of each registered public accounting firm and associated persons . . . with [the Act], the rules of the Board, the rules of the Commission, or professional standards.'"[10/]

12. On or before March 31, 2010, the Engagement Partner, Senior Manager, and Respondent were notified that the Audit would be inspected by the Board's Inspection Division. Field work for the inspection was scheduled to commence the week of April 19, 2010.

13. On or before March 31, 2010, the Engagement Partner, Senior Manager, and Respondent each had received an email in which E&Y expressly instructed the members of the Audit engagement team that no modifications, additions, or deletions should be made to the working papers of the Audit in preparation for the Board's inspection.

Respondent Improperly Removed, Added, and Backdated Working Papers

14. On or about March 31, 2010, the Engagement Partner directed an E&Y staff person on the Company audit engagement team to retrieve the hard copy external working papers for the Audit ("external working papers"). The staff person retrieved the external working papers from the Records Center in E&Y's Boston office, and placed the working papers in a conference room in E&Y's Boston office.

15. On or about April 5, 2010, the Engagement Partner, Senior Manager, and Respondent began working together in this conference room, in the course of preparing for the upcoming Board inspection. The Engagement Partner directed Respondent to review the external working papers. In the course of this review, Respondent identified certain missing documents and informed the Engagement Partner and the Senior Manager about this issue. The Engagement Partner and the Senior Manager subsequently directed Respondent improperly to remove, add, and backdate documents in the external working papers.

16. First, Respondent reported to the Engagement Partner and the Senior Manager that a "Review Procedures Memorandum" was missing from the external working papers. The Engagement Partner and the Senior Manager directed Respondent to create and print out the missing document, and to backdate the document to November 30, 2009. The Engagement Partner and the Senior Manager directed Respondent to backdate her sign-off on this working paper to November 30, 2009, and to add this document to the external working papers.

17. Second, Respondent reported to the Engagement Partner that the tie-out of the financial statements contained in the external working papers was performed upon a pre-final set of financial statements. The Engagement Partner directed Respondent to remove this document from the external working papers, and to replace it with a newly created document which tied-out the final financial statements, and which the Engagement Partner directed Respondent to backdate to November 2009.

18. Third, Respondent reported to the Engagement Partner that the Average Forward Foreign Currency Contracts Calculation ("A3a Working Paper") was missing from the external working papers. The Engagement Partner directed Respondent to gather the missing document, backdate it to November 2009, and add it to the external working papers.

19. Finally, Respondent reported to the Senior Manager that three checklists were missing from the external working papers. The Senior Manager directed Respondent to assemble the missing checklists as a single document ("HH6.8 Working Paper") and to backdate her sign-off on this working paper to November 2009. The Senior Manager directed Respondent to add the document to the external working papers. The Senior Manager and Respondent reported to the Engagement Partner the facts and circumstances related to the creation of the HH6.8 Working Paper, and the Engagement Partner took no steps to cause the document to be properly dated, or to have it removed from the external working papers.

Misleading Documents Provided to the Board During the Board's Inspection

20. Field work for the Board's inspection took place during the week of April 19, 2010. During field work, E&Y made the external working papers available to the Board's inspectors, including the improperly added documents which were placed in the external working papers shortly before the Board's inspection, and excluding the document removed from the external working papers by the Respondent after the documentation completion date. Respondent did not advise the inspectors that any of these documents were improperly added to the external working papers in April 2010, and that one document was removed from the external working papers after the documentation completion date.

21. During field work, Board inspectors requested copies of certain external working papers, including certain of the late-added documents. On April 22, 2010, Respondent emailed to a Board inspector a copy of the HH6.8 Working Paper. Respondent did not disclose to the Board inspector, however, that this document was improperly added to the external working papers in April 2010.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanction agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that, pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Jacqueline A. Higgins, CPA is censured.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of J. Crane CPA, P.C. and James Crane, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2011-001 January 19, 2011

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is permanently revoking the registration of J. Crane CPA, P.C. (the "Firm" or "Crane, P.C.") and permanently barring James Crane ("Crane") (collectively, "Respondents") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' noncooperation with a Board inspection, and for Crane, P.C.'s failures to file an annual report and pay an annual fee.

I.

On November 4, 2010, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondents. As required by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act, these proceedings were not public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have submitted Offers of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Crane, P.C. is a public accounting firm that was organized as a personal corporation under the laws of the State of Massachusetts and located in Cambridge, Massachusetts. It was licensed under the laws of the State of Massachusetts to engage in the practice of public accounting (license no. 1037). The license expired on June 30, 2009. Crane, P.C. has been registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules since September 2007. Since its registration with the Board, Crane, P.C. has issued six audit reports for issuers. Since the Board commenced an inspection of Crane, P.C. on November 19, 2009, the Firm issued one audit report for an issuer.

2. Crane, formerly a Massachusetts resident now residing in China, is a certified public accountant who was licensed in Massachusetts (license no. 21722). The license expired on June 30, 2010. At all relevant times, Crane was the founder and president of Crane, P.C. and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). As described below, Crane was the sole representative of Crane, P.C. who communicated with the PCAOB's Division of Registration and Inspections ("Inspections") regarding its attempt to conduct an inspection of the Firm. Crane also signed Crane, P.C.'s registration application, including the Consent to Cooperate with the Board and Statement of Acceptance of Registration Condition.

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

ORDER

3. In China, Crane holds himself out as the founder and president of J. Crane & Company ("Company").[2/] According to its website, J. Crane & Company, among other things, has expertise with companies operating in Asia and advises businesses who wish to be become publicly-traded companies in the United States. At the time the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings, Crane identified on the Company's website both that the Firm was a PCAOB-registered auditor and that he was the Chief Financial Officer of two public companies traded on the OTC Bulletin Board.

B. Respondents Failed To Cooperate with Inspections

4. Section 104 of the Act "requires the Board to conduct a 'continuing program of inspections to assess the degree of compliance of each registered public accounting firm and associated persons . . . with [the Act], the rules of the Board, the rules of the [Securities and Exchange] Commission, or professional standards."[3/] Indeed, "[t]he Board's periodic inspections, and full cooperation therewith by registered firms, are pivotal to the Board's ability to enhance investor protection and the accuracy of issuer auditor reports through its oversight of registered accounting firms."[4/] Therefore, PCAOB Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate With Inspectors, provides that "[e]very registered public accounting firm, and every associated person of a registered public accounting firm, shall cooperate with the Board in the performance of any Board inspection." Pursuant to Rule 4006, cooperation includes "cooperating and complying with any request, made in furtherance of the Board's authority and responsibilities under the Act to . . . provide access to, and the ability to copy, any record in the possession, custody, or control of such firm or person, and . . . provide information by oral interviews, written responses, or otherwise." As described below, Respondents violated Rule 4006 during 2010 by failing to provide any of the information requested by Inspections and preventing the Board from inspecting Crane, P.C.'s audits of issuers and system of quality control.

5. Between November 19, 2009 and December 4, 2009, Inspections staff communicated with Crane, P.C. by telephone and emails in an attempt to plan its inspection of the Firm and request that Crane contact Inspections to provide updated information concerning Crane, P.C. On December 4, 2009, Crane spoke with an Inspections staff member about the upcoming inspection, and on December 9, 2009, Crane requested that the inspection be scheduled for mid-February 2010 or later.

6. On December 23, 2009, Inspections informed Crane that it planned to inspect Crane, P.C. on March 15, 2010. On December 28, 2009, Inspections sent a letter to Crane requesting that he send a completed Issuer Information Form to Inspections by February 1, 2010, and requesting that he send a completed Data Request Form and selected engagement records to Inspections by March 8, 2010.

7. Respondents never provided the Issuer Information Form, the completed Data Request Form, or the selected engagement records to Inspections. Having not been provided these materials, Inspections could not begin the inspection on March 15, 2010, as planned.

8. On May 11, 2010, Crane requested that the inspection be rescheduled for a period between July 17, 2010, and August 13, 2010. On May 18, 2010, Inspections notified Crane that it had rescheduled the inspection for July 26, 2010. Again, Respondents never provided the Issuer Information Form, the completed Data Request Form, or the selected engagement records to Inspections. Having not been provided these materials, Inspections could not begin the inspection on July 26, 2010, as planned.

9. To date, Respondents still have not provided these materials to Inspections and Respondents have prevented Inspections from conducting an inspection of any of the Firm's issuer audits and system of quality controls.

10. During the period in which Crane did not provide documents and information to Inspections, he and Crane, P.C. apparently continued to perform audits, as evidenced by an audit report signed by Crane, P.C. for an issuer client and dated July 14, 2010.[5/]

[5/] On July 14, 2010, Left Behind Games, Inc. filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") a Form 10-K for the period ended March 31, 2010, which included an audit report signed by Crane, P.C. and dated July 14, 2010.

ORDER

11. During 2010, Respondents repeatedly failed to cooperate with Inspections in that they failed to comply with requests made by Inspections to conduct an inspection of Crane, P.C. and provide access to records, including the Issuer Information Form, the completed Data Request Form, and selected engagement records. As a result, the Board could not assess the degree to which Respondents complied with the Act, the rules of the Board, the rules of the Commission, or professional standards.

C. Crane, P.C. Failed To File an Annual Report and Pay an Annual Fee in Violation of Sections 102(d) and 102(f) of the Act and PCAOB Rules 2200 and 2202

12. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Rule 2200, Crane, P.C. failed to file an annual report.

13. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, Crane, P.C. failed to pay its annual fee.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of J. Crane CPA, P.C. is permanently revoked; and

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS

In the Matter of Price Waterhouse, Bangalore, Lovelock & Lewes, Price Waterhouse & Co., Bangalore, Price Waterhouse, Calcutta, and Price Waterhouse & Co., Calcutta, Respondents.

PCAOB Release No. 105-2011-002

April 5, 2011

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is: (1) censuring the registered public accounting firms Price Waterhouse, Bangalore, Lovelock & Lewes, Price Waterhouse & Co., Bangalore, Price Waterhouse, Calcutta, and Price Waterhouse & Co., Calcutta (collectively, "PW India," or "Respondents," each a "Respondent"); (2) temporarily limiting the activities, functions, and operations of PW India, including by prohibiting PW India from accepting SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work for new clients for a period of six months; (3) requiring PW India to engage an independent monitor; (4) requiring PW India to adopt and implement certain policies and to undertake certain actions related to PW India's system of quality control; (5) requiring PW India to provide additional professional education and training to its associated persons; and (6) imposing a civil money penalty jointly and severally in the amount of $1,500,000 as to Price Waterhouse, Bangalore, and Lovelock & Lewes.

The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning: (1) Price Waterhouse, Bangalore's and Lovelock & Lewes's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards, and Section 10A of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"); in auditing the 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 (the "relevant time period") financial statements of Satyam Computer Services, Limited ("Satyam," or the "Company"); (2) Price Waterhouse, Bangalore's and Lovelock & Lewes's violations of Rule 4006 and PCAOB auditing standards in connection with a Board inspection; and (3) PW India's violations of PCAOB rules and quality control standards.

During the period that it served as Satyam's auditor, PW Bangalore used Lovelock engagement personnel to work on the audits of Satyam's financial statements. In audit reports dated April 21, 2005, April 21, 2006, April 27, 2007, and August 8, 2008, PW Bangalore expressed unqualified opinions on Satyam's financial statements for the years ended March 31, 2005 ("2005"), March 31, 2006 ("2006"), March 31, 2007 ("2007"), and March 31, 2008 ("2008"), respectively. Each of these audit reports stated that, in PW Bangalore's opinion, Satyam's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the Company's financial position in conformity with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP"). Each audit report also stated that the underlying audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

11. On January 7, 2009, Satyam filed a Form 6-K with the Commission in which Satyam disclosed that its founder and then chairman stated that key financial results for Satyam had been manipulated, including overstating cash by $1 billion, overstating profits for the past several years, overstating the amounts owed to Satyam, and understating Satyam's liabilities.

12. On January 8, 2009, the Board issued an Order of Formal Investigation regarding the audits and reviews of Satyam's financial statements.

13. On January 14, 2009, Satyam reported to the Commission, on a Form 6-K, that PW Bangalore had advised Satyam that all audit reports for the period 2000-2008 should no longer be relied upon.

14. On February 12, 2009, PW Bangalore resigned as Satyam's auditor.

15. On March 16, 2010, the Board issued orders barring two former Lovelock senior managers, who worked on the Satyam audit engagement, from associating with registered public accounting firms, after the senior managers failed to comply with

ORDER

Accounting Board Demands requiring their testimony in the Board's formal investigation of the Satyam audit engagement.[5/]

C. Summary

16. This matter concerns a billion-dollar overstatement of the assets of Satyam that PW Bangalore (Satyam's independent registered public accounting firm) and Lovelock (the provider of the audit personnel PW Bangalore used on the engagement) failed to discover. PW Bangalore and Lovelock failed to identify this material overstatement of Satyam's assets, in part, because of the flawed audit procedures used to test the existence and valuation of Satyam's reported cash balance. During fiscal years 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008, Satyam management represented to the PW Bangalore partners and Lovelock staff who worked on the audit (collectively, the "Satyam engagement team" or "engagement team") that the Company had hundreds of millions of dollars in cash held on deposit at six banks. In the most recent audit year, 2008, Satyam represented to the engagement team that the cash on deposit at these six banks exceeded $1 billion, which constituted approximately half of Satyam's total reported assets.

17. PW Bangalore and Lovelock were required, among other things, to test the existence and valuation of Satyam's reported cash balance. In order to test the cash balance during the 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 Satyam audits, the engagement team planned to confirm cash with third parties. The audit procedures that the Satyam engagement team actually performed, however, failed to test the existence and valuation of this asset and, moreover, did not comply with PCAOB standards governing the confirmation process. The engagement team did not make direct contact with the six banks to confirm the bank balances that Satyam reported in its financial statements. Instead, and in violation of PCAOB auditing standards related to confirming cash, the engagement team relied exclusively on information provided by Satyam management. Indeed, the engagement team relied on Satyam management to mail out confirmation requests to Satyam's banks, and to return purported confirmation responses to the engagement team. On January 7, 2009, the chairman and chief executive officer of Satyam admitted that Satyam had been materially inflating its cash balances for several years, and that the 2008 cash balance was just $70 million.

ORDER

18. The failures in the cash confirmation process on the Satyam engagement were symptomatic of a larger problem at PW India. In audit engagements at each of the five member firms of PW India, auditors planned to test the existence and valuation of cash balances by performing confirmations, and then failed to control the cash confirmation process by relying on audit clients to send cash confirmation requests to banks and to return cash confirmation responses to the auditors. PW India's quality control system failed to detect that, for several years, and on multiple audit engagements, personnel at each of the PW India firms were not complying with PCAOB standards governing the cash confirmation process. Despite annual quality reviews at PW India, the first time that PW India's quality control monitoring system detected this non-compliance was in October 2008.

19. This matter also involves the failure of PW Bangalore and Lovelock to audit Satyam's accounts receivable balances in accordance with PCAOB standards. The engagement team relied on Company management to send confirmation requests associated with accounts receivable balances. The engagement team also failed to develop and perform audit procedures adequate to address identified control weaknesses that indicated heightened risks related to accounts receivable.

20. PW Bangalore and Lovelock also violated Section 10A of the Exchange Act, by failing to include in the Satyam audit engagement procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance of detecting illegal acts that would have a direct and material effect on the determination of financial statement amounts.

21. Finally, this matter concerns the actions taken by associated persons acting on behalf of PW Bangalore and Lovelock, after learning that the 2007 Satyam audit engagement would be inspected by the Board. Before PCAOB inspectors began their field work, and half of a year after the documentation completion date, as required by Auditing Standard No. 3 ("AS3"), Audit Documentation, members of the Satyam engagement team added documents to the audit working papers without disclosing the date the documents were added, the person preparing the documents, and the reason for adding these documents, in violation of AS3. The Satyam engagement team provided these documents to PCAOB inspectors in a misleading manner that suggested the documents were part of the original audit documentation, in violation of PCAOB Rule 4006.

ORDER

D. PW Bangalore and Lovelock Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards, and Section 10A of the Exchange Act.

22. PCAOB rules require that registered public accounting firms and their associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[6/] PCAOB auditing standards require that "[s]ufficient competent evidential matter is to be obtained . . . to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements under audit."[7/] PCAOB auditing standards require that "[d]ue professional care is to be exercised in the planning and performance of the audit."[8/] "Due professional care requires the auditor to exercise professional skepticism. Professional skepticism is an attitude that includes a questioning mind and a critical assessment of audit evidence."[9/] PCAOB auditing standards require that the auditor's report contain an opinion on the financial statements taken as a whole and contain a clear indication of the character of the auditor's work.[10/] The auditor can determine that he or she is able to issue an audit report containing an unqualified opinion only if the auditor has conducted the audit in accordance with PCAOB standards, and the financial statements have been prepared in conformity with GAAP.[11/]

The Satyam Engagement

The Audit of Cash

23. In Satyam's 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 financial statements, the Company reported, among other assets, balance sheet line items entitled (a) "cash and cash equivalents," and (b) "investments in bank deposits" (collectively, the "cash" line items). In 2005, Satyam reported cash of $541 million, constituting 61 percent of total reported assets. In 2006, Satyam reported cash of $697 million, constituting 59 percent of total reported assets. In 2007, Satyam reported cash of $920 million, constituting 57 percent of total reported assets. In 2008, Satyam reported cash of $1.11 billion, constituting 50 percent of total reported assets. The vast majority of the cash purportedly was on deposit at six banks.

24. PCAOB auditing standards state that the "audit program should set forth in reasonable detail the audit procedures that the auditor believes are necessary to accomplish the objectives of the audit."[12/] In the course of planning the audits of Satyam's 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 financial statements, the engagement team planned to test the existence and valuation of Satyam's reported cash balance by seeking confirmations from third parties, specifically from banks. The audit programs for the 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 audits explicitly acknowledged that the engagement team should maintain control of the process of sending confirmation requests and receiving confirmation responses relating to the confirmation of cash. The audit plans for the 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 Satyam audits never changed, and the working papers for each of those years document that the engagement team confirmed cash balances for all banks at which Satyam had "major" accounts.

25. Despite the fact that the engagement team planned to confirm cash, and documented in the working papers that it had confirmed cash, the audit work performed by the engagement team did not comply with the PCAOB auditing standards governing confirmations.

26. PCAOB auditing standards include specific requirements relating to an auditor's use of "confirmation," which is "the process of obtaining and evaluating a direct communication from a third party in response to a request for information about a particular item affecting financial statement assertions."[13/] Confirmation "is undertaken to obtain evidence from third parties about financial statement assertions made by management" consistent with the presumption that "'[w]hen evidential matter can be obtained from independent sources outside an entity, it provides greater assurance of reliability for the purposes of an independent audit than that secured solely within the entity.'"[14/] Confirmation may be used for a variety of items including accounts receivable, debt and encumbrances, and cash balances. PCAOB standards require that during "the performance of confirmation procedures, the auditor should maintain control over the confirmation requests and responses. Maintaining control means establishing direct communication between the intended recipient and the auditor to minimize the possibility that the results will be biased because of interception and alteration of the confirmation requests or responses."[15/]

27. The engagement team failed to maintain control over the process of sending the confirmation requests to the banks for, among other things, the confirmation of cash. Instead, members of the engagement team signed the confirmation requests, gave the requests to employees of Satyam, and relied on Satyam to send the confirmation requests to the banks. This violated PCAOB standards, which required the engagement team to maintain control of the cash confirmation request process, by establishing direct communications between the auditor and the banks.[16/] These violations of PCAOB standards occurred during the audits of Satyam's 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 financial statements.

28. The engagement team also failed to maintain control over the cash confirmation response process. In 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008, Satyam gave the engagement team what the Company represented to be confirmation responses received from six banks. These confirmation responses covered approximately 93 percent of Satyam's reported cash for each audit year. After receiving the purported confirmation responses from the Company, the engagement team made no attempt to establish direct contact with the banks to confirm the accuracy of the amounts reflected on the confirmation responses, even though the vast majority of Satyam's reported cash was on deposit at these six banks. This violated PCAOB standards, which required the engagement team to maintain control of the confirmation response process, by establishing direct communications between the auditor and the banks.[17/] These violations occurred during the audits of Satyam's 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 financial statements.

Potentially Conflicting Audit Evidence and Other Warning Signs Related to Cash

29. The Satyam engagement team also failed to perform any follow-up after receiving potentially conflicting audit evidence. During the 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 audits, the engagement team received confirmation responses, in the requested format, directly from the branches of certain banks. The engagement team also received "confirmations responses" purportedly from other branches of the same banks. The purported confirmation responses, however, were given to the engagement team by Satyam management, and were not provided in the requested format. The bank-provided confirmation responses reflected significantly lesser cash balances than Satyam management represented to be held in fixed deposits at the same banks, and significantly lesser cash balances than what was reflected in the purported bank confirmations that Satyam provided to the engagement team. The engagement team could have, but did not, contact the banks directly to attempt to determine the amounts that Satyam had on deposit with the banks. The engagement team took no steps to reconcile this potentially conflicting audit evidence, in violation of PCAOB standards.[18/]

30. For example, during the 2008 Satyam audit, Company management provided the engagement team with what was purported to be a confirmation response from the Mumbai branch of a bank. This document indicated that Satyam had approximately $176 million of fixed deposits with the bank. During the same audit, the engagement team received directly from the Hyderabad branch of the same bank a confirmation response indicating that Satyam had no fixed deposits with the bank. The engagement team took no steps to investigate further this potentially conflicting audit evidence.

31. Prior to PW Bangalore releasing its opinion on Satyam's 2008 financial statements, a partner from a PwC Network Firm located outside of India, provided the Satyam engagement team with written comments on the Satyam audit working papers which should further have alerted the engagement team to the fact that their cash confirmation procedures did not comply with PCAOB auditing standards.

[18/] See AU § 326.25, Evidential Matter ("auditor should consider relevant evidential matter regardless of whether it appears to corroborate or to contradict the assertions in the financial statements. To the extent the auditor remains in substantial doubt about any assertion of material significance, he or she must refrain from forming an opinion until he or she has obtained sufficient competent evidential matter to remove such substantial doubt").

32. In May 2008, in response to questions raised by the "foreign filing reviewer"[19/] of Satyam's draft 2008 Form 20-F, partners at PW India, and partners from two other PwC Network Firms suggested that the engagement partner responsible for the Satyam engagement request that a partner from a PwC Network Firm located outside of India (the "PwC Network Firm Partner") review the electronic working papers for the 2008 Satyam engagement.

33. In July 2008, one month before PW Bangalore released its unqualified opinion on Satyam's 2008 financial statements, the PwC Network Firm Partner reviewed the electronic working papers for the 2008 Satyam audit engagement, and provided the Satyam engagement team with written comments based on his review, including comments on the working papers related to the confirmation of cash. Among other comments, the PwC Network Firm Partner advised that the engagement team "can only take credit for [cash] confirmations we send [to] and receive directly [from the banks]." Likewise, the PwC Network Firm Partner noted that the Company had a significant balance of fixed deposits, and advised the engagement team to "document that confirmations have been received [from the banks] for such amounts."[20/]

34. Despite these explicit warnings regarding requirements related to cash confirmation procedures, the Satyam engagement team did nothing further to ensure [20/] The PwC Network Firm Partner did not share his comments about the cash confirmations on the Satyam engagement with PW India personnel beyond the members of the Satyam engagement team. that the confirmation procedures the engagement team relied upon in auditing Satyam's cash were performed in compliance with PCAOB standards.

The Audit of Accounts Receivable

35. During the relevant time period, Satyam's former senior management recorded fictitious receivables by exploiting weaknesses in the internal controls of the Company's accounts receivable system. Specifically, the Company's invoicing system allowed for the manual entry of customer invoices via the intervention of a "super user," acting outside the regular controls of the billing and invoicing process. Satyam's former senior management used this super user function to create thousands of false invoices totaling over $1 billion during the period of the fraud.

36. In connection with the audit of Satyam's 2007 financial statements, PW India's System and Process Assurance ("SPA") personnel, working under the supervision of the Satyam engagement team, tested the Company's internal controls, including the Company's Information Technology ("IT") internal controls. This was the first time that Satyam's IT controls were required to be tested under Section 404 of the Act. This testing revealed over 170 deficiencies in controls, including eight deficiencies that the engagement team determined were "significant." These significant deficiencies should have indicated a heightened risk with respect to receivables. The Satyam engagement team was aware of these control deficiencies during the 2007 and 2008 Satyam audit engagements, but failed to recognize the risk they posed, and did not modify the nature, timing and extent of audit procedures in the 2007 and 2008 audits to take these risks into consideration.[21/] The Satyam engagement team failed to develop audit procedures that addressed the increased risk of a material misstatement of the accounts receivable balance.

37. For both the 2006 and 2007 audits, the Satyam engagement team did not maintain control of the accounts receivable confirmation request process, and instead relied on Satyam's management to send confirmation requests. The Satyam engagement team received no responses to these confirmation requests, but made no attempt to follow up on the nonresponses with second confirmation requests. Although

However, no audit procedures were performed to ensure that the subsequent receipts were reconciled to individual invoices outstanding at fiscal year end. Additionally, despite the heightened risk posed by identified internal control deficiencies in both 2007 and 2008, the subsequent cash receipts testing was performed as of a date other than the fiscal year end date. These procedures did not provide the engagement team with sufficient competent evidential matter to verify the existence of receivables at fiscal year end.[23/]

Section 10A of the Exchange Act

39. The Satyam engagement team received: (1) cash confirmations, in the requested format, directly from certain branches of Satyam's banks; as well as (2) purported confirmation responses from other branches of the same banks, not in the requested format, that were given to the engagement team by Satyam management. The directly-received confirmation responses reflected significantly lower cash balances than the Satyam-provided confirmation responses. The Satyam engagement team, as well, was aware of significant deficiencies in Satyam's internal controls that indicated a heightened risk of fraud existed.

40. These warning signs should have, but did not, cause PW Bangalore and Lovelock to perform additional audit procedures to address the heightened risk of material misstatement of Satyam's cash and accounts receivable balances. PW Bangalore and Lovelock violated Section 10A(a) of the Exchange Act by failing to perform audit "procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance of detecting illegal

The field work for the Board's inspection was set to commence in mid-February 2008.

44. During the period of time leading up to the arrival of Board inspectors in India, the engagement team created certain documents, and gathered other documents, none of which previously were in the working papers. The engagement team added these documents to the hard-copy working papers which were made available to Board inspectors. None of the documentation added to the working papers stated the date the documentation was added, the person who prepared it, or the reason for adding this additional documentation, in violation of AS3.

45. In responding to the Board's inspection demands for working papers from the 2007 Satyam audit, members of the Satyam engagement team made available to the Board documents that had been added to the audit documentation only after PW Bangalore and Lovelock learned that the Board would inspect the 2007 Satyam audit engagement. Acting through certain associated persons, PW Bangalore and Lovelock made these documents available to the Board in a misleading manner that suggested the documents were part of the original audit documentation. As a result of this conduct, PW Bangalore and Lovelock violated PCAOB Rule 4006.

PW India's General Practice for Confirming Cash

50. In the course of auditing the existence and valuation of cash balances, PW India auditors routinely planned to perform confirmations, but engaged in a practice that was not reasonably assured to provide sufficient audit evidence, and did not comply with PCAOB auditing standards governing cash confirmations. This general practice was followed on one or more occasions by assurance partners at each of the five PW India firms, including the Risk and Quality Partner during the relevant period.

51. Consistent with this general practice, PW India auditors did not maintain control of the cash confirmation process. PW India engagement teams relied on audit clients to send confirmation requests to banks, and to transmit confirmation responses from the banks back to PW India engagement teams.

PW India's Quality Control System Failed to Detect this General Practice

52. Prior to October 2008, the quality control and monitoring process at PW India failed to detect that the general practice regarding cash confirmation procedures at each of the PW India firms was not in compliance with PCAOB standards. Moreover, at no time did PW India's quality control and monitoring process detect violations related to the cash confirmation process used on the 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 Satyam audits.

53. This general practice continued for multiple years, on multiple audits, in multiple PW India firms. Moreover, the Risk and Quality Partner knew that on certain of his own audits, his engagement teams were not controlling the cash confirmation process in compliance with the relevant PCAOB auditing standards. The Risk and Quality Partner understood that this failure was not being identified by PW India's quality control system.

54. By failing to identify this general practice regarding cash confirmation procedures at each of the PW India firms, the quality control system at PW India did not provide reasonable assurance that audit personnel were complying with professional auditing standards.[37/]

[37/] PW India purported to use the audit methodology employed by PwC Network Firms, which contains written policies and procedures for performing an audit consistent with PW India's standards of quality. This methodology explicitly required that "[c]onfirmations must be sent out under our control, and replies sent directly to us."

1. Acceptance of New SEC Issuer Audits. From the date of this Order, PW India shall not accept any new SEC Issuer Audits prior to the Interim Certificate of Compliance Date (defined at Paragraph IV(C)(10)). The term "SEC Issuer Audit(s)" is defined to mean an engagement to audit the consolidated financial statements filed with the Commission of an "Issuer" as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002. Following the later of March 31, 2012 or the Interim Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India shall conduct any new SEC Issuer Audit pursuant to the Interim Conditions set forth in Paragraph IV(C)(3) until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date (defined at Paragraph IV(C)(11)). Until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India agrees that the Lead Engagement Partner ("Lead Partner") on any SEC Issuer Audit must be deemed not unacceptable to the Independent Monitor (defined at Paragraph IV(C)(9)) before PW India commences work on any SEC Issuer Audit.

2. Acceptance of SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work. PW India shall not accept SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work for a new client for a period of six months following the date of this Order. The term "SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work" is defined to mean instances in which PW India: (a) conducts a full scope audit and provides, or should provide, consistent with Applicable Professional Standards (defined at Paragraph IV(C)(3)(a)), an interoffice opinion for an SEC Issuer-affiliated entity in connection with the audit of the SEC Issuer's consolidated financial statements filed with the Commission; or (b) provides audit work for an SEC Issuer-affiliated entity in connection with the audit of the SEC Issuer's consolidated financial statements filed with the Commission that constitutes ten percent or more of the SEC Issuer's consolidated assets, revenues, or expenses, as measured by the SEC Issuer's most recent fiscal year financial statements filed with the Commission. The term "new client" shall mean an SEC Issuer or a component of an SEC Issuer where PW India: (i) has not provided any audit or review services to the SEC Issuer or any of its components after January 1, 2010 through the date of the Order; and (ii) seeks to provide audit or review services to the SEC Issuer or any of its components after the date of the Order. After a period of six months following the date of this Order and until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India shall conduct SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work for new clients pursuant to the Interim Conditions set forth in Paragraph IV(C)(3).

3. Interim Conditions. From April 1, 2011 until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India shall conduct SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work for current clients pursuant to the conditions set forth below ("Interim Conditions"). Upon expiration of the relevant restricted periods specified in Paragraphs IV(C)(1) and IV(C)(2) above and until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India agrees that any new SEC Issuer Audit and any SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work for a new client shall be subject to the following Interim Conditions:

a. Staffing and Selection of Lead Partners, Engagement Managers, and Quality Review Partners. PW India's Assurance Leadership Team ("ALT"), a group which shall include among others PW India's Assurance Leader and Risk & Quality Leader, shall select, as part of meeting their quality control requirements, the Lead Partner, Engagement Manager, and Quality Review Partner ("QRP"), if required, for each SEC Issuer Audit and SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work after taking into account his or her respective performance on SEC Issuer Audits, SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work, and SEC Issuer-related client engagements that do not meet the thresholds described in Paragraph IV(C)(2) (collectively, "SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements") as indicated by the results of the Real Time Review and Engagement Compliance Review ("ECR") programs (Paragraph IV(C)(8)) and the real time review program undertaken by PW India during 2010. PW India undertakes to engage the engagement partner from the PwC Network Firm which is the lead auditor of the relevant SEC Issuer client ("Global Engagement Partner") to review the selection of any Lead Partner, Engagement Manager, and QRP before the commencement of any SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work. PW India shall provide the Global Engagement Partner with a summary of the results of the engagement quality review conducted in October 2010, any ECR conducted subsequent to the date of this Order, and any real time review conducted during 2010 for each engagement on which the partner or manager served as Lead Partner or Engagement Manager and shall provide the Global Engagement Partner with access to any other relevant information upon request. PW India agrees that, in the event the Global Engagement Partner informs PW India that he or she objects to the selection of the Lead Partner, Engagement Manager or QRP, to perform such work, PW India will select an alternative candidate that meets the conditions described in this Paragraph.

A QRP shall be assigned for all SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work that meets the 10 percent of assets, revenues, or expenses threshold in Paragraph IV(C)(2). For SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work that does not meet the 10 percent of assets, revenues, or expenses threshold, a QRP will be assigned, if requested by the Global Engagement Partner. The scope of the QRPs' role on such work shall be consistent with PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 7, Engagement Quality Review.

Any PW India partner or manager who served as the Lead Partner or Engagement Manager on any engagement that received an overall finding of unsatisfactory due to departures from Applicable Professional Standards[39/] in connection with the engagement quality review conducted in October 2010 or any ECR performed subsequent to the date of this Order shall not be permitted to perform any SEC Issuer Audit or SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work as a Lead Partner or Engagement Manager for a period of two fiscal years following the date of an overall finding of "unsatisfactory." Provided, however, that if PW India believes that an individual partner or manager whose engagement received an "unsatisfactory" rating should be exempt from the two-year practice restriction, then PW India, through its Assurance Leader, may make a written submission to the Independent Monitor explaining the reasons therefore and the Independent Monitor shall have the authority to exempt the individual partner or manager if he or she believes it is appropriate to do so. In no event, however, shall a partner or manager who receives an overall rating of "unsatisfactory" due to departures from Applicable Professional Standards in two consecutive quality reviews be exempt from the two-year practice restriction.

If a partner has an engagement on which he or she served as Lead Partner assessed as unsatisfactory due to departures from Applicable Professional Standards in an engagement quality review or ECR, that partner shall not be permitted to serve as a QRP on any SEC Issuer Audit or SEC Referred Work Engagement for a period of two fiscal years following the date of an overall finding of "unsatisfactory."

[39/] The term "Applicable Professional Standards" means "professional standards" as defined in Section 2(a)(10) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(vi).

ORDER

PW India shall comply with the conditions described in this Paragraph on a continuing basis until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date.

b. Training. In addition to the training-based undertakings set forth in Paragraph IV(C)(4), PW India agrees to require the Lead Partner, QRP, and Engagement Manager to complete at least: (a) eight hours of ethics training on an annual basis; and (b) 40 hours of specialized training in U.S. GAAP, PCAOB standards,[40/] and IFRS before initiating any SEC Issuer Audit or SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work and at least 16 hours of such training in each subsequent year that such work is performed. Training programs completed after June 2010 shall be credited towards satisfying the 40 hour specialized training requirement of this Paragraph. The specialized training requirements of this Paragraph may also satisfy the specialized training hours requirements of Paragraph IV(C)(4)(d). All other PW India audit staff on any SEC Issuer Audit or SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work shall be subject to the training undertakings set forth in Paragraph IV(C)(4).

c. Consultations. PW India undertakes to review all consultations with PW India's National Office concerning Applicable Professional Standards required by PW India's consultation policy ("Required Consultations") involving any SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work with the Global Engagement Partner.

Before accepting any SEC Issuer Audit, PW India undertakes to develop a process for review of all Required Consultations by an auditor from a PwC Network Firm outside of India. Such process must be reviewed and deemed acceptable by the Independent Monitor.

PW India further undertakes to resolve all Required Consultations in a manner consistent with PW India policies and procedures prior to the issuance of any opinion, report, or engagement completion document by PW India.

d. Pre-opinion Reviews. PW India undertakes, prior to the issuance of any opinion, report, or engagement completion document by PW India, to: (i) engage the Global Engagement Partner, or his or her partner or manager designee, to conduct a review of any PW India SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work; and (ii) conduct a Real Time Review (Paragraph IV(C)(8)) of all SEC Issuer Audits.

4. Training and Professional Development. PW India shall evaluate its existing professional development policy and shall make such revisions deemed necessary in order to adopt, implement, and enforce written policies and procedures designed to provide its audit professionals with reasonable training and education to minimize the risk of future violations of Applicable Professional Standards and United States federal securities laws and regulations. PW India agrees that such training and education shall include subjects relevant to the audits of SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements. To that end, PW India shall require that all audit professionals complete a training curriculum in the areas of traditional core audit and accounting, Applicable Professional Standards, professional skepticism, behavioral change management, technical audit competence, ethics standards, electronic and hard-copy audit documentation standards (including, as they relate to PCAOB inspections), acceptable and appropriate third-party confirmation procedures, and other relevant technical audit training.

a. Training Programs. Prior to March 31, 2011 and until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India agrees and undertakes to provide annually, two-week training programs covering the above-referenced audit topics as well as training and presentation skills to select PW India audit professionals who thereafter will lead the training of other PW India audit professionals. After March 31, 2011, only PW India audit professionals who have successfully completed a two-week training program will be permitted to lead the training of other PW India audit professionals.

b. Mandatory Annual Training. Prior to December 31, 2011 and until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India agrees and undertakes to require that all audit professionals complete an annual three-day program that includes training on the following topics: (i) audit basics; (ii) new audit and accounting standards; (iii) emerging issues in the profession; (iv) specific audit and accounting challenges identified in prior years' PW India audits; and (v) the role of the engagement quality reviewer.

c. Professional Skepticism Training. Prior to December 31, 2011, PW India agrees and undertakes to require that all audit professionals complete an eight-hour program that covers acceptable and appropriate professional skepticism and fraud detection. The course will be offered annually thereafter to new hires, through the Final Certificate of Compliance Date.

d. Specialized Training. In addition to the training and education described in Paragraphs IV(C)(4)(b) and IV(C)(4)(c), all PW India audit professionals must complete successfully the following core audit curriculum and specialized training before they commence audit work for any SEC Issuer Audit or SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work for financial statements after March 31, 2011:

(i) Minimum of 24 Hours of Audit-Related Training. The audit-related training requirement shall address the following topics: (1) assessing risks of material misstatements and developing responsive audit plans; (2) determining and documenting appropriate sampling methods and sample sizes, selecting samples, and evaluating and documenting results; (3) audit documentation; (4) obtaining and evaluating sufficient competent evidential matter; (5) acceptable and appropriate third-party confirmation procedures; (6) professional skepticism and corroboration of management's representations; (7) technical audit training; and (8) fraud detection. Training courses completed after June 2010 shall be credited towards satisfying the specialized audit training requirements of this Paragraph.

(ii) Minimum of 12 Hours of Specialized Training and Examination. Of the 24 hours of required audit-related training described above, a minimum of 12 hours shall involve live training taught by senior audit professionals from PwC Network Firms located outside of India, including those who have been seconded to PW India, who are experienced in auditing SEC Issuers and shall cover U.S. GAAP and PCAOB standards. The live training shall be followed by an examination of the topics covered. PW India audit professional must complete a minimum of six hours of such live training before they commence audit work for any SEC Issuer Audit or SEC Issuer-Referred Engagement work in each subsequent year.

e. Additional Training Programs. PW India agrees to consult with the Independent Monitor in designing its training and education program, and to submit to the Independent Monitor a detailed proposal within 60 days after retention of the Independent Monitor that describes the content and implementation of the training and education program. PW India undertakes and agrees to provide such additional training and workshops for its audit professionals on topics that include, but are not limited to: IFRS training; additional workpaper documentation standards; behavioral instruction; audit planning; PW India audit partner and manager supervisory training; audit quality training for all PW India audit partners; and other training deemed necessary to rectify deficiencies identified during the Quality Control Management Review and Engagement Compliance Review programs (described in Paragraph IV(C)(8)). The Independent Monitor shall review PW India's proposal describing the content and implementation of the training and education program; and such program must be deemed not unacceptable to the Independent Monitor.

5. Ethical Code of Conduct and Associated Training. PW India has represented that it has a Code of Ethical Business Conduct (the "Ethics Code") that defines standards of behavior for PW India audit professionals. PW India undertakes to: (a) adopt procedures designed to ensure that the Ethics Code is disseminated to PW India audit professionals; (b) conduct appropriate ethics training; (c) review the Ethics Code on a regular basis and update it as needed; (d) adopt an appropriate system of penalties to discourage and punish any violations of the Ethics Code; and (e) adopt procedures designed to verify, on a regular basis, compliance with the Ethics Code. In addition, PW India shall provide annual ethics training to PW India audit professionals deemed most likely to perform SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements.

6. Staffing

a. Audit Infrastructure Support. PW India undertakes to increase the size and improve the expertise of its audit support personnel by adding full-time or full-time equivalent senior professionals (i.e., managers and above) trained in and knowledgeable of U.S. GAAP and PCAOB standards from within PW India and from PwC Network Firms located outside of India in all areas of audit support.

b. Engagement Staffing. PW India shall undertake to alter the structure of its engagement teams on SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements. Such measures shall include: (i) policies and procedures designed to address the detection and resolution of potential issues concerning the quality of audit work performed by senior audit professionals; (ii) policies and procedures designed to ensure the QRP's role is in compliance with PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 7; (iii) greater emphasis on partner and manager time and attention; (iv) regular coaching of junior audit professionals by experienced senior audit professionals; and (v) as indicated below, recruitment of client service partners and other senior audit professionals from PwC Network Firms outside India to increase the size and improve the expertise of PW India's audit personnel.

c. Secondment. PW India undertakes to increase the number of senior audit professionals seconded from PwC Network Firms located outside of India that are trained in and knowledgeable of U.S. GAAP and PCAOB standards who will, among other responsibilities, be involved in the training of PW India audit professionals most likely to perform SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements. PW India also shall initiate an audit engagement exchange program for junior audit professionals to and from PW India with a particularized focus on the performance of integrated audit procedures on the financial statements of clients affiliated with an SEC Issuer.

7. Undertakings Concerning Audit Quality Management System. Prior to December 31, 2011, PW India shall revise as may be necessary, and then engage in steps to implement and enforce, such policies and procedures so as to provide reasonable assurance that PW India will comply with its obligations under professional, regulatory and firm requirements with respect to SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements. To that end, PW India agrees and undertakes to provide to the Independent Monitor for review and recommendation, its policies and procedures, including evidence of their implementation, concerning the following:

a. Completion of Planning Prior to the Commencement of Audit Fieldwork. Such policies and procedures shall provide reasonable assurance that, prior to the commencement of any significant audit procedures: (i) working papers identify all significant risks requiring additional testing; (ii) working papers identify all significant accounts and disclosures and their relevant assertions; (iii) working papers document the risks of material misstatements, and that the planned nature, timing, and extent of testing are finalized and reviewed and approved by the Lead Partner, and, when appropriate, the QRP; and (iv) working papers are tailored to address identified risks of material misstatement.

b. Third-Party Confirmations. Such policies and procedures shall be designed to provide reasonable assurance that all audit personnel perform third-party confirmation procedures in compliance with PCAOB standards.

c. Consultations. Such policies and procedures shall set forth consultation procedures and documentation requirements regarding procedures for the external review of PW India National Office Required Consultations, as well as for the resolution of such consultations.

d. Documentation. Such policies and procedures shall be designed to provide reasonable assurance that PW India's SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements comply with AS3. Such procedures shall emphasize that documentation must be prepared in sufficient detail for an experienced auditor, without prior knowledge of the engagement, to be able to reperform the work and require that any additions made after the documentation date[41/] must identify the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it. Additionally, PW India shall adopt a policy making it mandatory that a Lead Partner on an SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagement review each audit area designated by the engagement team as having a significant risk of material misstatement (whether due to fraud or error) for compliance with both PCAOB standards and related rules and firm policies and procedures.

e. Detection and Reporting of Illegal Client Activity ("Section 10A Compliance"). Such policies and procedures shall be designed to provide reasonable assurance that PW India complies with Section 10A of the Exchange Act, including without limitation, for each audit subject to Section 10A, procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance of detecting illegal acts that would have a direct and material effect on the determination of financial statement amounts, and to comply with all requirements under the standards of the Commission, the PCAOB, and Section 10A to evaluate and report suspected illegal acts.

f. Engagement Quality Control. Such policies and procedures shall be designed to provide reasonable assurance that PW India complies with PCAOB Auditing Standard 7, Engagement Quality Review.

g. Audit Opinions. Such policies and procedures shall be designed to provide reasonable assurance that the firm signing the audit report or opinion for an SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagement shall uniquely identify itself by, at a minimum, its PCAOB-registered name, and the location of the registered office.

8. Audit Quality Environment

a. Real Time Reviews. From the date of the Order through at least the Interim Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India shall engage senior audit professionals from PwC Network Firms located outside of India with experience in both U.S. GAAP and PCAOB standards to lead pre-opinion reviews of certain SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements ("Real Time Reviews"). All SEC Issuer Audits and a sample of other SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements, including at least one other SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagement for each partner serving as Lead Partner on such an engagement, shall be subject to a Real Time Review each year. These reviews shall be designed to identify areas for improvement and to provide support to PW India audit engagement teams working on SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements. SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work is subject to the pre-opinion reviews described in Paragraph IV(C)(3)(d) and shall be excluded from the Real Time Reviews.

b. Engagement Compliance Review. PW India shall engage senior audit professionals from PwC Network Firms located outside of India with experience in both U.S. GAAP and PCAOB standards to review selected, completed PW India SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagement working papers as part of the ECR program in order to assess PW India's compliance with Applicable Professional Standards. The ITL will select the engagements for review, which selection shall be part of the ECR planning and scope subject to review and recommendation by the Independent Monitor. As part of their engagement by PW India, these senior audit professionals shall develop an engagement quality review program designed to measure and assess compliance with Applicable Professional Standards and PW India partner performance on SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements through annual post-opinion evaluations of selected SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements. The ECR program will also identify remedial needs on an ongoing basis. As described further in Paragraph IV(C)(9), the planning and scope of the ECR program shall incorporate recommendations made by the Independent Monitor. The ECR program shall be overseen by an Independent Team Leader ("ITL") experienced in U.S GAAP and PCAOB standards and will continue on an annual basis until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date. All SEC Issuer Audits and SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work shall be included as part of the annual ECR.

c. Quality Control Management Review. PW India shall engage senior audit professionals from PwC Network Firms located outside of India experienced in PCAOB standards to devise and implement a quality control review program to measure and assess whether, and to what extent, PW India has in place systems, policies, and procedures to provide reasonable assurance that its audit personnel comply with applicable professional standards and PW India's standards of quality as defined by PCAOB Quality Control Standards[42/] when performing work on SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements (herein referred to as "Quality Control Management Review or

The planning and scope of the QCMR shall be overseen by the ITL and shall incorporate recommendations made by the Independent Monitor. The QCMR program shall continue on an annual basis until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date.

9. Undertakings Related to Reporting Requirements and the Role of the Independent Monitor

a. Independent Monitor Selection and Retention. PW India shall retain and pay for an independent third-party not unacceptable to PCAOB staff and Commission staff who has experience with public company reporting in the United States and is knowledgeable with Applicable Professional Standards ("Independent Monitor") to review PW India's compliance with the undertakings set forth in this Order. Within 60 days after the entry of this Order, PW India shall submit to PCAOB staff and Commission staff a proposal setting forth the identity, qualifications, and proposed terms of retention of the Independent Monitor. PW India may not retain as the Independent Monitor any individual or entity that has provided legal, auditing, or other services to, or has had any affiliation with, Satyam, PwC IL, or any PwC Network Firm during the prior two years.

PW India agrees that its engagement agreement with the Independent Monitor shall require the Independent Monitor to agree that, for the period of engagement and for a period of two years from completion of the engagement, the Independent Monitor shall not enter into any employment, consultant, attorney-client, auditing, or other professional relationship with Satyam, PwC IL, or any PwC Network Firm, or any of their present or former affiliates, directors, officers, employees, or agents acting in their capacity as such, and shall require that any firm with which the Independent Monitor is affiliated or of which the Independent Monitor is a member, or any person engaged to assist the Independent Monitor in performance of the Independent Monitor's duties under the Order not, without prior written consent of the PCAOB staff and Commission staff, enter into any employment, consultant, attorney-client, auditing, or other professional relationship with Satyam, PwC IL, or a PwC Network Firm, or any of their present or former affiliates, directors, officers, employees, or agents acting in their capacity as such for the period of the engagement and for a period of two years after the engagement.

The term of the Independent Monitor shall expire upon the Final Certificate of Compliance Date. PW India shall not have the authority to terminate the Independent Monitor before the Final Certificate of Compliance Date without the prior written approval of the PCAOB staff and the Commission staff.

b. Role and Responsibilities Overview. As set forth in this Order, the Independent Monitor's roles and responsibilities shall include: (i) pre-appointment review of new members of PW India's Assurance Leadership Team and Lead Partners on SEC Issuer-Audits – such individuals shall not be unacceptable to the Independent Monitor; (ii) approving the appointment of the ITL; (iii) reviewing and recommending revisions to the audit Quality Management System policies and procedures of PW India; (iv) reviewing and recommending revisions to PW India's ECR and QCMR programs and compliance work plans; (v) reporting upon PW India's progress after review and evaluation of PW India's semi-annual and annual reports set forth herein; (vi) assessing and recommending remedial steps deemed necessary to correct any deficiencies identified in the semi-annual and annual reports; (vii) preparing an annual written report concerning PW India's progress in implementing the undertakings; (viii) making findings as set forth in Paragraphs IV(C)(10) and IV(C)(11); and (ix) taking such reasonable steps as, in his or her view, may be necessary to fulfill his or her obligations set forth in this Order.

c. Monitoring Compliance with Undertakings. Within 60 days after retention of an Independent Monitor, PW India shall submit to the Independent Monitor a work plan that describes the manner in which PW India intends to set forth quantifiable goals in which it may measure its ongoing implementation of, and compliance with, the undertakings set forth in this Order. PW India undertakes to permit the Independent Monitor 30 days to make recommendations to its work plan and agrees to make a good faith effort to address and incorporate all such recommendations. PW India shall work cooperatively with the Independent Monitor to resolve any disagreements to the satisfaction of the Independent Monitor. If a matter that the Independent Monitor

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

believes is within his or her responsibility cannot be resolved, at the request of the Independent Monitor, PW India shall promptly provide written notice to the Independent Monitor and the PCAOB staff and Commission staff. Any disputes between PW India and the Independent Monitor with respect to the work plan shall be decided by the PCAOB staff and the Commission staff, and PW India shall abide by their decision.

For the period from the effective date of this Order to the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India agrees and undertakes periodically, at no less than six-month intervals, to provide a written report to the Independent Monitor regarding PW India's progress regarding the implementation of, and compliance with, the undertakings set forth in this Order. On an annual basis, PW India shall provide the Independent Monitor with a written report that explains the circumstances surrounding any failure to meet specific quantifiable goals set forth in the work plan (as well as the specific audit involved, if any) and shall provide a detailed description of what steps, if any, PW India has taken and shall take to remedy any such failure. PW India's follow-up reviews shall incorporate comments provided by the Independent Monitor on PW India's prior reviews and reports. As part of PW India's compliance with the undertakings set forth in this Order, the Independent Monitor shall also assess and report annually to PCAOB staff and Commission staff whether PW India is complying with the undertakings regarding SEC Issuer Audits and SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work.

d. Monitoring Compliance with PW India's Quality Control Management Review and Engagement Compliance Review. Within 60 days after retention of an Independent Monitor, PW India undertakes to engage the ITL to submit to the Independent Monitor the QCMR and ECR proposed plans.

PW India agrees and undertakes that, until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, the ITL and the two individuals with direct responsibility for the QCMR and ECR (the "Review Team Leaders") shall be senior audit professionals from a PwC Network Firm outside India with experience in U.S. GAAP and PCAOB standards that has not participated in any quality review of PW India prior to September 2010. The ITL must be approved by the Independent Monitor and deemed not unacceptable to both PCAOB staff and Commission staff.

PW India undertakes to engage the ITL to permit the Independent Monitor 60 days to make recommendations to its QCMR and ECR proposed plans and engages the ITL to make a good faith effort to incorporate all such recommendations. PW India shall engage the ITL to work cooperatively with the Independent Monitor to resolve any disagreements to the satisfaction of the Independent Monitor. If the matter cannot be resolved, at the request of the Independent Monitor, PW India, through the ITL, shall promptly provide written notice to the Independent Monitor and the PCAOB staff and Commission staff. Any disputes between PW India or the ITL and the Independent Monitor with respect to the QCMR and ECR proposed plans shall be decided by the PCAOB staff and the Commission staff, and their decision shall be final.

(i) Quality Control Management Review Reports. For the period from the effective date of this Order to the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India agrees and undertakes to provide, through the ITL, an annual written report to the Independent Monitor that assesses – and provides documented and supportable findings – as to whether, and to what extent, there is reasonable assurance that PW India's quality controls with respect to SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements are in compliance with PCAOB Quality Control Standards. PW India shall undertake follow-up reviews each year until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, incorporating comments provided by the Independent Monitor on PW India's prior reviews and reports, to further monitor and assess PW India's quality controls.

(ii) Engagement Compliance Review Reports. For the period from the effective date of this Order to the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India agrees and undertakes to provide, through the ITL, an annual written report to the Independent Monitor that assesses and provides documented and supportable findings as to whether, and to what extent, PW India's audits of SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements are compliant with Applicable Professional Standards.[44/] Such assessments and findings shall include, but not be limited to, documents sufficient to support the results developed from all engagement reviews from which the report is based. PW India shall undertake follow-up reviews each year until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, incorporating comments provided by the Independent Monitor on PW India's prior reviews and reports, to further monitor and assess PW India's engagement quality.

(iii) Independent Monitor Annual Report. Within 90 days of receiving the ECR or QCMR report, whichever is later, and for the period from the effective date of this Order to the Final Certificate Date, the Independent Monitor shall prepare an annual report ("IM Report") that assesses whether the QCMRs and ECRs were conducted according to reasonable procedures and indicates whether the Independent Monitor supports the findings and conclusions set forth in the QCMR and ECR reports. The Independent Monitor may extend the time period for the IM Report for up to thirty calendar days upon prior written notice to PW India, PCAOB staff, Commission staff, and the ITL. Within 30 days of receiving the IM Report, PW India may prepare a written response to the IM Report. If the Final Certificate of Compliance does not take effect within three years of the date of the Order, each IM Report thereafter shall include an assessment regarding whether, and to what extent, PW India continues to make substantial progress toward satisfying the undertakings set forth in this Order.

(iv) Remedial Measures Resulting from Annual Review Reports. To the extent that the annual ECR and QCMR reports, or the resulting IM Report, identify deficiencies or instances of non-compliance with respect to the standards articulated therein, PW India shall submit to the Independent Monitor a Remedial Plan within 60 days of its receipt of the IM Report. PW India shall permit the Independent Monitor 30 days to make recommendations to the remedial plan. PW India shall require the ITL to consult with the Independent Monitor and make a good faith effort to incorporate the remedial plan recommendations into the subsequent period's ECR and QCMR, as appropriate, and PW India shall require the ITL to work cooperatively with the Independent Monitor to resolve any disagreements to the satisfaction of the Independent Monitor. If the matter cannot be resolved, at the request of the Independent Monitor, PW India, through the ITL, shall promptly provide written notice to the Independent Monitor and the PCAOB staff and Commission staff. Any disputes between the ITL and the Independent Monitor with respect to the remedial plan shall be decided by the PCAOB staff and the Commission staff, and their decision shall be final.

(v) Reporting Requirements. PW India's Assurance Leader shall sign all QCMR, ECR, and Remedial Plan reports, attesting that he or she has read and understood their content and certifying satisfaction with any undertakings addressed, findings reached, and remedial steps required in the reports. PW India shall provide copies of all written reports described in this Paragraph to the appropriate PCAOB staff and Commission staff designees no later than 10 days from the date of completion.

(vi) Documentation Requirements. PW India agrees and undertakes to prepare and preserve a copy of all written plans, reports, and responses in connection with the undertakings set forth in this Order. In addition, PW India shall maintain sufficient documentation to provide a clear understanding of its purpose, sources of support, and conclusions that form the basis of all reports set forth in this Order. PW India agrees and undertakes that all such documentation shall be made available to the Independent Monitor and, upon reasonable request, to PCAOB staff and Commission staff. All such documentation will be retained for two years following the Final Certification of Compliance Date.

10. Interim Certificate of Compliance. Upon a finding by the Independent Monitor that PW India: (i) has developed an acceptable process for the review of Required Consultations (Paragraph IV(C)(3)(c)) for SEC Issuer Audits by an auditor experienced in U.S. GAAP and PCAOB standards from a PwC Network Firm located outside of India; (ii) has demonstrated significant progress toward completion of the undertakings set forth in this Order; and (iii) has evidenced reasonable assurances from the QCMRs and ECRs that there are no significant deficiencies or instances of material non-compliance with respect to an SEC Issuer Audit or SEC Issuer Referred Engagement Work completed and reviewed for the previous fiscal year, PW India's Chairman and Assurance Leader shall certify in writing that it has satisfied each of the above specified conditions ("Interim Certificate of Compliance"). The Interim Certificate of Compliance shall identify each of the relevant reports in which PW India demonstrated written evidence of satisfaction in the form of a narrative supported by exhibits sufficient to demonstrate compliance. The Interim Certificate of Compliance and supporting material shall be submitted to the appropriate Commission Division of Enforcement and PCAOB Division of Enforcement designee (the "Designees"). Upon receipt of the Interim Certificate of Compliance and any supporting material that the ITL and Independent Monitor deem necessary to support that Certificate, the Designees may make reasonable requests for further documents evidencing compliance and PW India agrees to provide the requested documents to the Designees and the Independent Monitor. Within the earlier of 30 days of receipt of the requested documents or 120 days after receipt of the Interim Certificate of Compliance, the Independent Monitor must either affirm or withdraw his or her initial findings regarding the Interim Certificate of Compliance in writing, a copy of which shall be provided to PW India, the ITL, and the Designees. The Interim Certificate of Compliance takes effect upon confirmation by both Designees that they have received the Independent Monitor's affirmation of findings in writing ("Interim Certificate of Compliance Date"), but in any event the Interim Certificate of Compliance Date shall not be before March 31, 2012.

11. Final Certificate of Compliance. Upon findings by the Independent Monitor that: (i) PW India has complied with the undertakings set forth in this Order; (ii) PW India has evidenced reasonable assurance that its quality controls in place for SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements are in compliance with PCAOB Quality Control Standards; and (iii) PW India has evidenced reasonable assurances that there are no significant deficiencies or instances of material non-compliance with respect to all of the SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements completed and reviewed for the previous two fiscal years, PW India's Chairman and Assurance Leader shall certify in writing that it has satisfied each of the above specified conditions (the "Final Certificate of Compliance"). The Final Certificate of Compliance shall identify each of the relevant reports in which the Independent Monitor has found that PW India demonstrated written evidence of compliance in the form of a narrative supported by exhibits sufficient to demonstrate compliance. The Final Certificate of Compliance and supporting material shall be submitted to the Designees. Upon receipt of the Final Certificate of Compliance and the relevant reports, the Designees may make reasonable requests for further documents evidencing compliance and PW India shall provide the requested documents to the Designees and the Independent Monitor. Within the earlier of 60 days of the Designees' receipt of the requested documents or 120 days after the Designees' receipt of the Final Certificate of Compliance, the Independent Monitor must either affirm or withdraw his or her initial findings regarding the Final Certificate of Compliance in writing, a copy of which shall be provided to PW India, the ITL, and the Designees. The Final Certificate of Compliance takes effect upon confirmation by both Designees that they have received the Independent Monitor's affirmation of findings in writing. ("Final Certificate of Compliance Date").

12. PCAOB Inspections. PW India shall provide the Independent Monitor with (a) inspection comment forms and responses, and (b) draft and final inspection reports, in PW India's possession pertaining to all PCAOB inspections of PCAOB-registered PW India firms that may occur from the date of this Order to the Final Certificate of Compliance Date. The goal of this undertaking is to provide the Independent Monitor with an opportunity to review and identify any criticisms or potential defects in PW India's quality control system that would indicate PW India has failed to evidence reasonable assurance that its quality controls in place for SEC Issuer-Related Audit Engagements are in compliance with PCAOB Quality Control Standards. If the Independent Monitor concludes that the results of a PCAOB inspection of a PCAOB-registered PW India firm are inconsistent with his or her findings made in connection with Paragraph IV(C)(11), the Final Certificate of Compliance Date will not take effect until the Independent Monitor provides a written report to PW India, the ITL, and the Designees that explains how the Independent Monitor has reconciled any such inconsistencies to his or her satisfaction.

ORDER

13. From the date of this Order and until the Final Certificate of Compliance Date, PW India agrees and undertakes that its Shared Service Center Engagements shall be subject to the following conditions: (a) all working papers prepared by PW India shall be provided to the Global Engagement Partner or his or her designee; (b) the Global Engagement partner shall engage a senior audit professional from a PwC Network Firm located outside of India to oversee and control the execution of the Shared Service Center Engagement; and (c) the Global Engagement Partner shall assume all responsibility for the Shared Service Center Engagement. The term "Shared Service Center" shall mean an outsourcing facility that is a component of, or a third-party vendor to, an SEC Issuer and which operates, controls, and processes the SEC Issuer's group financial transactions. The term "Shared Service Center Engagement" shall mean an audit engagement in which the Global Engagement Partner for an SEC-issuer group that is audited by a PwC Network Firm instructs PW India to audit the controls and processing of group financial transactions by a Shared Service Center. Where PW India audits a Shared Service Center's own financial statements and that engagement meets the definition of SEC-Issuer Referred Engagement Work, such engagement shall be subject to the limitations on acceptance of SEC-Issuer Referred Engagement Work set forth in Paragraph IV(C)(2), and the Interim Conditions set forth in Paragraph IV(C)(3).

In determining whether to accept the Offers, the Board has considered these undertakings. PW India agrees that if the Board staff believe that PW India has not satisfied these undertakings within a reasonable time, said staff may petition the Board to reopen the matter to determine whether additional sanctions are appropriate.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Chisholm, Bierwolf, Nilson & Morrill, LLC, Todd D. Chisholm, CPA, and Troy F. Nilson, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2011-003 April 8, 2011

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is revoking the registration of Chisholm, Bierwolf, Nilson & Morrill, LLC (the "Firm" or "CBNM"), and barring Todd D. Chisholm, CPA ("Chisholm") and Troy F. Nilson, CPA ("Nilson") (collectively, "Respondents") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that: (a) Chisholm and the Firm violated PCAOB rules, quality control standards, and auditing standards in connection with audits of three issuer clients between 2006 and 2007, noncooperation with a Board inspection, and noncooperation with a Board investigation; and (b) Nilson and the Firm violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with audits of two issuer clients between 2007 and 2008, noncooperation with a Board inspection, and noncooperation with a Board investigation.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rules 5200(a)(1) and (3) against Chisholm, Bierwolf, Nilson & Morrill, LLC, Todd D. Chisholm and Troy F. Nilson.

[1/] Nilson may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after five (5) years from the date of this Order.

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have submitted Offers of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which are admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Chisholm, Bierwolf, Nilson & Morrill, LLC is a Utah limited liability company with offices in Salt Lake City, Utah, and Bountiful, Utah.[3/] The Firm is licensed by the Utah State Board of Public Accountancy (License No. 5593082-2603). In 2003, the Firm registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. The Firm issued 52 audit reports for fiscal years ending in 2006 and 49 audit reports for fiscal years ending in 2007. During this time, the Firm's public audit practice had two partners, Chisholm and Nilson, and between five and nine professional staff. The Firm's

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (a) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (b) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

[3/] The Firm formed in 2000 as "Bierwolf Nilson & Associates PC." Due to changes in partnership structure, the Firm's name changed to "Chisholm, Bierwolf and Nilson, LLC" in 2004, and finally to "Chisholm, Bierwolf, Nilson & Morrill, LLC" in 2009.

ORDER

public audit clients are small issuers that generally trade on the OTC Bulletin Board or the Pink Sheets.

2. Todd D. Chisholm, 48, is a certified public accountant licensed in the State of Utah (License No. 163643-2601). At all relevant times, Chisholm was the Firm's managing partner, and was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

3. Troy F. Nilson, 45, is a certified public accountant licensed in the State of Utah (License No. 266146-2601). At all relevant times, Nilson was a partner at the Firm and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

4. This matter concerns violations by Chisholm and the Firm of PCAOB rules, quality control standards, and auditing standards in connection with audits of three issuer clients between 2006 and 2007, and violations by Nilson and the Firm of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with audits of two issuer clients between 2007 and 2008. In each of these audit reports, the Firm expressed an unqualified audit opinion, and stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, and that the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP"). As detailed below, Respondents failed to perform sufficient audit procedures in connection with the issuance of these audit reports in violation of PCAOB rules and auditing standards, and failed to appropriately supervise the work of audit assistants. Respondents' failure to ensure that sufficient audit procedures were performed on the audits resulted from a poor system of quality control, including inappropriate reliance on inexperienced audit assistants, excessive partner workload and deficient audit documentation practices.

5. In addition, Respondents violated PCAOB rules by failing to cooperate with a Board inspection of the Firm in 2007 by adding, and directing the Firm's assistants to add, audit documentation to audit files in advance of the Board inspection. The Respondents engaged in this conduct after the audits' respective document completion dates. Furthermore, Respondents failed to cooperate with a Board investigation of the Firm by altering audit documentation prior to providing that documentation to the staff of the Division of Enforcement and Investigations ("Division staff" or "Division") during the course of a Board investigation relating to the above-referenced audits.

ORDER

C. Chisholm and the Firm Violated PCAOB Rules and Quality Control Standards

6. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm comply with certain quality control standards.[4/] A firm should establish policies and procedures to encompass, among other things, (a) personnel management, (b) acceptance and continuance of clients and engagements, and (c) engagement performance.[5/] These policies and procedures should be communicated to the firm's personnel,[6/] and the firm should implement monitoring procedures to obtain reasonable assurance that its system of quality control is effective.[7/] In addition, PCAOB Rule 3502 prohibits an associated person of a registered public accounting firm from taking or omitting to take an action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that the act or omission would directly and substantially contribute to a violation of Board standards by that firm.[8/] As described below, the Firm violated the Board's quality control standards in several respects, and Chisholm directly and substantially contributed to those violations.

Personnel Management

7. PCAOB standards provide that policies and procedures should be established to provide the Firm with reasonable assurance that, among other things, (1) those hired possess the appropriate characteristics to enable them to perform competently, and (2) work is assigned to personnel having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances.[9/] PCAOB standards further provide that the more able and experienced the personnel assigned to an engagement are, the less direct supervision is needed.[10/] The Firm failed to comply with these standards.

4/ See PCAOB Rules 3100, 3400T.

5/ Quality Control ("QC") § 20.07.

6/ QC § 20.23.

7/ QC § 30.03.

8/ See PCAOB Rule 3502.

9/ QC § 20.13.

10/ QC § 20.11.

ORDER

8. At the time of the Firm's 2006 issuer audit engagements, several of the Firm's audit assistants, who performed the majority of work on the audits, had no more than 2 years of auditing experience. These audit assistants were often hired directly out of college with little or no audit experience. Nevertheless, at all relevant times, the Firm failed to train assistants how to audit in accordance with PCAOB standards, thereby failing to reasonably ensure that the Firm's audits were performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.

Acceptance and Continuance of Clients and Engagements

9. PCAOB standards require a firm to "[u]ndertake only those engagements that the firm can reasonably expect to be completed with professional competence."[11/] In calendar years 2006 and 2007, the Firm failed to comply with this standard by accepting more engagements than the Firm's partners and staff could appropriately manage and conduct. Specifically, Chisholm and Nilson each served as auditor with final responsibility for approximately 25 engagements, including domestic and international clients. During the same period, they each served as concurring reviewer on substantially all of each other's engagements.

10. The large number of clients severely limited the amount of time and attention that Chisholm and Nilson, the Firm's only audit partners, could spend providing supervision to audit assistants. As a result, planning for many audits consisted of little more than referring audit assistants to standardized audit programs and checklists, which failed to take into account, among other things, specific audit risks for each engagement.

11. The Firm's typical practice with respect to staffing audit engagements entailed one audit assistant teaming up with either Chisholm or Nilson. Consequently, the large number of issuer audit engagements prevented Chisholm and Nilson from providing appropriate supervision of audit procedures. Audit assistants with limited audit experience were often left to decide for themselves what audit procedures should be performed in an audit. Further, Chisholm and Nilson failed to properly evaluate whether the audit reports issued by the Firm were supported by sufficient competent evidential matter.

[11/] QC § 20.15.

ORDER

Engagement Performance

12. PCAOB standards provide that a firm should develop policies and procedures to provide it with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality.[12/] The Firm heavily relied on audit assistants who possessed little or no prior auditing or accounting experience. There were no policies and procedures in place to ensure that the staff performed procedures necessary to comply with PCAOB standards, or even knew what those standards required.

Chisholm's Substantial Contribution to Quality Control Violations

13. Chisholm was the managing partner of the Firm during the relevant time period and was principally responsible for setting the tone at the top.[13/] As the managing partner, Chisholm was responsible for designing, implementing and monitoring the Firm's system of quality control.[14/] Accordingly, Chisholm had overall responsibility for ensuring that the Firm complied with PCAOB rules and standards. He also was responsible for ensuring that the Firm staffed its issuer audit engagements with audit staff who had sufficient professional competence and were properly supervised. Chisholm was aware of the minimal training and inexperience of the Firm's audit staff. Notwithstanding their lack of adequate training and experience, he staffed his audit engagements and allowed the Firm to staff other issuer audit engagements with that staff. Further, Chisholm knew that the level of supervision that he and Nilson provided to the audit staff was not sufficient to overcome their lack of training and experience. All of the Firm's conduct described in paragraphs 8 through 12 above was either conduct of Chisholm's or omissions to act for which Chisholm was responsible. With respect to all such acts and omissions, Chisholm knew, or was reckless in not knowing, that his acts and omissions would directly and substantially contribute to the Firm's quality control failings described above, which constituted violations of the Board's quality control standards. Chisholm thereby violated PCAOB Rule 3502.

12/ QC § 20.17.

13/ Chisholm was also responsible for personnel decisions at the Firm and his compensation was considerably higher than that of the other partners, including Nilson's.

14/ QC § 20.20.

ORDER

D. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

14. In connection with the preparation and issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards and related professional practice standards.[15/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[16/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[17/]

15. Respondents failed to meet these standards in connection with the audits of four issuers, specifically the audits of the financial statements of: Hendrx Corp. ("Hendrx") for calendar years 2006 and 2007; Powder River Petroleum International, Inc. ("Powder River") for calendar years 2006 and 2007; AlphaTrade.com ("AlphaTrade") for calendar year 2007; and Jade Art Group Inc. ("Jade Art") for calendar year 2008. As detailed below, (a) Chisholm and the Firm violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with audits of three issuer clients between 2006 and 2007, noncooperation with a Board inspection, and noncooperation with a Board investigation, and (b) Nilson and the Firm violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with audits of two issuer clients between 2007 and 2008, noncooperation with a Board inspection, and noncooperation with a Board investigation.

a. Audits of Hendrx's 2006 and 2007 Financial Statements

16. Hendrx is a Nevada corporation with its principal office in Vancouver, Canada. Its common stock is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and is traded on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. public filings disclose that in 2004 it acquired 100% of the issued shares of Eastway Global Investment LTD, a British Virgin Islands corporation, and its wholly-owned operating subsidiary, Fujian Yuxin Electronic Equipment Co., based in the People's Republic of China. Hendrx's public filings disclose that it is engaged in the research, development, manufacture and distribution of water generation, filtration and purification devices. At all times relevant to this Order, Hendrx was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

17. The Firm audited Hendrx's 2006 financial statements and issued an audit report dated March 11, 2007, which was included in Hendrx's Form 10-KSB filed with the Commission on April 3, 2007.[18/] The Firm also audited Hendrx's 2007 financial statements and issued an audit report dated February 18, 2008, which was included in Hendrx's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on April 14, 2008. Chisholm was the audit engagement partner with final responsibility for both the 2006 and 2007 audits, while Nilson served as the concurring review partner.

18. Audit field work occurred primarily at the issuer's main operating facility in the People's Republic of China. Chisholm, who does not speak or understand Chinese, relied on Firm assistants with Chinese language skills to identify audit issues, communicate with management and third-parties, and analyze documents provided by the issuer.

i. Audit of Hendrx's 2006 Financial Statements

19. Hendrx's 2006 financial statements disclose goodwill in the amount of $31,854,137, representing 74% of total assets. Goodwill should be tested for impairment at least annually, and more frequently if events occur or circumstances change that would, more likely than not, reduce the fair value below its carrying amount.[19/] Chisholm and the Firm failed to perform sufficient audit procedures to determine whether management had appropriately tested goodwill for impairment. Even though Hendrx's financial statements disclose that its primary valuation technique for determining goodwill impairment was a discounted cash flow analysis, there is no

[18/] On May 29, 2007, the issuer filed a Form 10-KSB/A for this same reporting period. The amendments contained in the 10-KSB/A were not related to the audited financial statements.

audit evidence indicating that Chisholm and the Firm obtained and reviewed such analysis.[20/] Moreover, Chisholm and the Firm failed to consider audit evidence indicating that current year revenues had declined by 50%, which contradicted management's representations concerning an expected increase in the demand for its product. Instead, Chisholm and the Firm, in violation of PCAOB standards, simply relied on management representations that goodwill should not be impaired.[21/]

20. In relying exclusively on management representations, Chisholm and the Firm also failed to consider other events and circumstances indicating the potential for impairment of goodwill, including (i) technical issues associated with Hendrx's primary product, (ii) impairment of the value of patents granted under the laws of the People's Republic of China ("Chinese Patents"), which related to Hendrx's primary product, and (iii) legal disputes concerning ownership rights in the Chinese Patents.[22/]

21. By accepting management's representation that goodwill was not impaired, Chisholm and the Firm also failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to provide reasonable assurance that management's accounting estimates in determining the fair value of goodwill—which could have been material to the financial statements—had been developed, were reasonable under the circumstances, were presented in conformity with applicable accounting principles, and were properly disclosed.[23/] Chisholm and the Firm also failed to obtain an understanding as to how Hendrx developed its estimate concerning the fair value of goodwill, either by reviewing and testing the process used by management to develop the estimate, or by developing an independent expectation of the estimate to corroborate the reasonableness of management's estimate.[24/]

22. Hendrx's 2006 financial statements disclose that the Chinese Patents, which were included in intangible assets, had a net book value of $1,238,093. Hendrx relied on a report prepared by a Chinese firm to appraise and assess the fair market value of its patents. Based on an appraisal prepared by the Chinese firm, Hendrx wrote down the value of the Chinese Patents by $358,350, representing a 12% net loss for the year ended December 31, 2006. Chisholm and the Firm failed to perform sufficient audit procedures to evaluate if Hendrx's reliance on the report was appropriate. Chisholm and the Firm failed to evaluate appropriately the professional qualifications of the firm that prepared the appraisal to determine whether the firm possessed the necessary skill or knowledge to perform the appraisal, including whether the firm possessed any professional certification, license, or other recognition of the firm's competence as appraisers, the firm's reputation and standing in the views of its peers and others familiar with the firm's capability or performance, or the firm's experience in the type of appraisal work under consideration.[25/] Chisholm and the Firm also failed to obtain an understanding of the nature of the work performed by the firm that prepared the appraisal, including the objectives and scope of the firm's work, and any relationship with Hendrx.[26/] Finally, Chisholm and the Firm also failed to obtain an understanding of the methods and assumptions used by the firm that prepared the appraisal, to make appropriate tests of data provided to the firm, and to evaluate whether the findings with respect to the Chinese Patents supported the related assertions in the financial statements.[27/]

ii. Audit of Hendrx's 2007 Financial Statements

23. Chisholm and the Firm violated various PCAOB auditing standards in the course of the 2007 Hendrx audit. During the 2007 audit, Chisholm and the Firm again failed to evaluate sufficiently management's reliance on the Chinese firm's report with respect to the appraisal of the fair value of the Chinese Patents.[28/]

24. Chisholm and the Firm also repeated the failures of the prior year's audit in connection with Hendrx's goodwill. During the 2007 audit, Chisholm and the Firm failed to perform sufficient audit procedures to test management's determination concerning the impairment of goodwill. Chisholm and the Firm initially determined that goodwill should be impaired by 50%. Without any apparent basis or audit evidence,

Chisholm ultimately compromised with management that goodwill should be impaired by only 25%.[29/]

25. During the 2007 audit, Chisholm and the Firm also failed to perform a retrospective review of management's previous estimates of the fair value of goodwill and intangible assets to determine whether management's judgments and assumptions relating to the estimates indicated possible bias on the part of management and were reasonable.[30/]

26. Finally, Chisholm and the Firm failed to perform sufficient audit procedures related to the confirmation of certain accounts receivable selected for confirmation during the 2007 audit. Accounts receivable represented 17.5% of total current assets in Hendrx's 2007 financial statements. The engagement team failed to maintain control over the confirmation process and instead relied on the issuer's Chinese operating subsidiary's personnel to receive responses directly from the intended recipients and forward them to Firm auditors by email. Chisholm and the Firm took no steps to assure that the confirmations responses received were accurate, and relied on such confirmation responses to substantiate all of the confirmed accounts receivables of the operating subsidiary.[31/]

b. Audit of AlphaTrade.com's 2007 Financial Statements

27. AlphaTrade.com ("AlphaTrade") is a Nevada corporation based in Vancouver, Canada. Its common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is traded on the OTC Bulletin Board. In its public filings, the company states that it began as a web stock quote service that developed into a digital media marketing agency. At all relevant times, AlphaTrade was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii) .

28. The Firm audited AlphaTrade's 2007 financial statements. Chisholm was the auditor with final responsibility for the audit, and had supervisory responsibility for the assistants assigned to the engagement. Audit field work occurred at the issuer's facility in Vancouver, Canada. On January 18, 2008, the Firm issued an audit report which was included in the Form 10-K filed by AlphaTrade on April 2, 2008.

29. Chisholm and the Firm violated PCAOB standards during the 2007 audit of AlphaTrade. Chisholm and the Firm failed to exercise due professional care in the performance of the audit by failing to identify and address a departure from GAAP.[32/] The Firm's work papers contained all relevant agreements pertaining to AlphaTrade's advertising services, which included service periods extending beyond 2007 year end and into 2008. In exchange for these services, AlphaTrade accepted upfront payments in the form of equity securities issued by its customers. AlphaTrade was required to recognize revenue at the point in time in which revenue was realized or realizable and earned in accordance with GAAP, and to defer revenue relating to services to be provided in periods subsequent to its financial statements for which the related compensation had been received or recorded.[33/] Although the agreements pertaining to the issuer's advertising services featured elements requiring deferred revenue, the Firm did not determine that AlphaTrade should have been deferring revenue it was not deferring under these agreements.

30. During the audit of AlphaTrade's 2008 financial statements matters arose that led Chisholm and the Firm to review the prior year's audit documentation with respect to AlphaTrade's revenue agreements. During that review, the Firm realized that AlphaTrade had improperly recognized revenue under these agreements, as described above. As a result of this discovery, the issuer subsequently restated its 2007 financial statements, which reduced reported revenues by $885,600 (approximately 15%) and increased reported net loss by the same amount, or 24%. The Firm thus issued a revised unqualified audit opinion dated March 17, 2009.

[32/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. Any descriptions in this Order of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflect the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures in this Order, however, should not be understood as an indication that the Securities and Exchange Commission has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP.

31. According to GAAP, at each reporting period, securities classified as available-for-sale are required to be assessed to determine whether a decline in fair value is other than temporary. If there is a decline in fair value that is other than temporary, then the cost basis of the security shall be written down to fair value and the amount of the write-down shall be accounted for as a realized loss, as opposed to inclusion in other comprehensive income.[34/] In AlphaTrade's 2007 financial statements, total marketable securities available-for-sale constituted $664,090 (approximately 56%) of AlphaTrade's total assets. Chisholm and the Firm failed to perform any audit procedures to evaluate whether the decline in fair value of marketable securities available-for-sale was other than temporary.[35/] For all equity securities available-for-sale as of December 31, 2007 the fair value was 29% of cost basis; about one-half of those securities had been held greater than one year, for which fair value was only 6% of the original cost basis. Chisholm and the Firm failed to consider these factors indicating that the decline in fair value was other than temporary.[36/]

c. Audit of Powder River's 2006 Financial Statements

See also Staff Accounting Bulletin Topic 5.M., "Other than Temporary Impairment of Certain Investments in Equity Securities," which provides the following examples of factors that, individually or in combination, indicate that a decline in value of an equity security classified as available-for-sale is other than temporary: (a) the length of time and the extent to which the market value has been less than cost, (b) the financial condition and near-term prospects of the issuer, and (c) the intent and ability of the holder to retain its investment in the issuer for a period of time sufficient to allow for any anticipated recovery in market value.

Included with the second restated financial statements was a revised audit opinion by the Firm dated March 23, 2010. Since AlphaTrade had dismissed the Firm as its independent auditor on April 16, 2009, the Firm was not AlphaTrade's independent registered public accounting firm at the time of this second restatement.

registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was traded on the OTC Bulletin Board and Pink Sheets. Powder River was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). Until placed into receivership in 2008, Powder River's public filings reported that it was in the business of acquiring, developing and reselling working interests in oil and gas properties.[37/] The company disclosed that it used the proceeds of such sales to acquire additional working interests and to develop oil fields for actual petroleum production. Powder River sold these working interests to various third-party purchasers ("Third Parties") through an intermediary investment group in Singapore, Oilpods Singapore Pte, Ltd ("Intermediary"), who marketed the working interests to the Third Parties in exchange for commissions. Sales of these working interests, net of commission, accounted for 95% of the issuer's total revenues in 2006, or $13,174,394.[38/]

33. The Firm audited Powder River's 2006 financial statements. Chisholm was the auditor with final responsibility for the audit, and exercised supervisory responsibility for Firm assistants assigned to the engagement, while Nilson was the concurring review partner. Audit field work occurred at the issuer's offices in Alberta, Canada. On March 7, 2007, the Firm issued an audit report on Powder River's 2006 financial statements which was included in the Form 10-KSB filed by Powder River with the Commission on April 3, 2007.

[37/] Oil and gas producing companies at times obtain exploration and development capital through the sale of "working interests" (or "operating interests") to third-parties, who provide capital in exchange for an entitlement to future earnings from the production and sale of oil and gas on the properties being developed. Owners of working interests bear most or all of the cost of development and operation of the property. See AICPA Audit and Accounting Guides - Audits of Entities with Oil and Gas Producing Activities, ¶¶ 1.15 and 1.30.

[38/] Powder River's 2006 financial statements, which were included in the Form 10-KSB filing, disclosed its revenue recognition policy for the sale of working interests as follows: "The Company is also in the business of selling working interest to an investment group in Singapore. As the Company finds and purchases new properties, it makes arrangements to sell partial working interests to various individuals referred by the Singapore group. The revenues are recorded as operating revenues, net of any commission or other costs associated with earning the revenues. The related percentage of capitalized cost of the property sold is also removed from the oil and gas property account and offset against the proceeds to calculate the net revenue recorded in the operating revenues."

ORDER

34. During the audit of Powder River's 2006 financial statements, Chisholm and the Firm violated various PCAOB standards, including a failure to perform sufficient audit procedures with respect to revenues recognized from the sale of working interests in oil and gas properties. Although Chisholm and the Firm were aware of a 9% guaranteed return owed by Powder River to the Third Parties, they failed to evaluate the impact of the guarantee on the accounting treatment for those sales. Chisholm and the Firm should have considered: (a) whether the 9% guaranteed return, which was not disclosed in Powder River's 2006 financial statements, ought to have been disclosed; and (b) whether the associated sales of working interests should have been accounted for as a borrowing as opposed to revenue.[39/] Chisholm and the Firm also failed to perform any procedures with respect to commissions owed to the Intermediary, which were netted against revenues and approximated 22% of total gross revenues from property and working interest sales.[40/]

35. Chisholm and the Firm also failed to consider, or exercise professional skepticism in evaluating, whether information obtained during the audit represented risk factors for fraud.[41/] This information included: (i) the high percentage of revenues (95%) from the sale of working interests in contrast to the minor amount of revenue realized through petroleum production (the remaining 5%), (ii) the issuer's commitment to pay a 9% return to the Third Parties irrespective of success or failure in the development of oil fields, and (iii) the ambiguous roles of the parties involved in the purchases and sales of working interests.[42/]

[39/] Certain transactions, sometimes referred to as conveyances, are in substance borrowings repayable in cash or its equivalent and shall be accounted for as borrowings. See SFAS 19, "Financial Accounting and Reporting by Oil and Gas Producing Companies," ¶ 42-47.

[42/] On September 2, 2008, Powder River filed a Form 8-K with the Commission disclosing that the Intermediary and certain Third Parties had filed suit against Powder River and its CEO. According to the Form 8-K filing, which incorporated the initial report of the court-appointed receiver, the Intermediary and the Third Parties alleged that the issuer and the CEO engaged in gross negligence and fraud in a number of respects, including (a) failing to drill or perform promised re-completion work on leases, (b) hiring an operator with a criminal and regulatory history of investor fraud, (c) failing to take steps to preserve company assets, (d) taking actions which caused the

Consequently, Chisholm and the Firm failed to exercise due professional care.[45/]

37. Generally, estimates of oil and gas reserves for financial reporting purposes are prepared by specialists, such as petroleum reservoir engineers and geologists. During the 2006 audit, Chisholm and the Firm relied on the work of specialists who had been retained by the issuer with respect to estimates of oil and gas reserves.[46/] Specifically, in assessing impairment and evaluating depletion expense with respect to capitalized costs of oil and gas properties, Chisholm and the Firm unreasonable loss of company assets, (e) withholding funds due to Powder River from affiliated entities controlled by the CEO, (f) transferring company assets without an exchange of reasonably equivalent value, (g) filing misleading reports with regulators, and (h) paying the CEO an exorbitant salary and bonuses that were not justified under the circumstances. At the time of this Order, that matter remained pending in the District Court of Tulsa County (State of Oklahoma), docket number CJ-2008-4855.

[44/] Some audit evidence suggested that the Intermediary acted as Powder River's sales agent. Other audit evidence indicated that the Intermediary itself purchased working interests from Powder River, and then resold the working interests to the Third Parties.

[46/] Estimates of oil and gas reserves are made by specialists for entities as a part of their ongoing business practices. Information about reserves typically may include, among other things, estimates of: (i) the reserves quantities; (ii) the future-producing rates from such reserves; (iii) the future net revenue from such reserves; and (iv) the present value of such future net revenue. The exact type and extent of such information must necessarily take into account the purpose for which it is being prepared and, correspondingly, statutory and regulatory provisions, if any, that are applicable to its intended use. obtained and relied on only a few pages from each of the specialists' reports. Further, Chisholm and the Firm took no steps to evaluate the professional qualifications of the specialists to determine if they possessed the necessary skill or knowledge to perform the work, nor did they obtain an understanding of the nature of the specialists' work, including the objectives and scope of that work.[47/] Chisholm and the Firm failed to evaluate the specialists' relationship with the issuer.[48/] Finally, Chisholm and the Firm failed to perform procedures to obtain an understanding of the methods and assumptions used by the specialists, to make appropriate tests of the data provided to and used by the specialists, or to evaluate whether the specialists' findings supported the related assertions in the financial statements.[49/]

2. Nilson and the Firm's Audit Violations

a. Audit of Powder River's 2007 Financial Statements

38. The Firm audited Powder River's 2007 financial statements. Nilson served as the auditor with final responsibility for the 2007 audit, and exercised supervisory responsibility for the Firm assistants assigned to the engagement.[50/] Audit field work occurred at the issuer's offices in Alberta, Canada. On March 19, 2008, the Firm issued an audit report which was included in the Form 10-KSB filing made by Powder River on April 14, 2008.

39. Nilson and the Firm violated PCAOB standards during the 2007 Powder River audit. This was Nilson's first year as the auditor with final responsibility for the Powder River audit, and Nilson had limited experience in performing audits related to the oil and gas industry. Despite these facts, Nilson failed to gain a sufficient understanding of the client's business or to obtain the technical competency needed to perform an audit in that industry.[51/] To prepare for the audit, Nilson merely relied on Chisholm's general descriptions of the client's business operations and financial condition, and on the prior year's audit documentation. During the 2007 Powder River audit, planning consisted of little more than reference to the prior year's audit work papers, and referring Firm assistants to standardized audit programs and checklists. No steps were taken to identify the risks of material error or fraud and thereby develop a tailored audit plan.

40. Nilson and the Firm failed to obtain sufficient competent audit evidence regarding Powder River's sales of working interests. Nilson and the Firm relied on uncorroborated representations made by Powder River's management concerning Powder River's 2007 revenues.[52/] Specifically, Nilson and the Firm failed to obtain a sufficient understanding of the arrangements for revenues generated from the sales of working interests, including the impact on revenue of the 9% return on investment guaranteed by Powder River to the Third Parties. Nilson, without sufficient understanding of the industry and related revenue recognition methodologies to provide adequate supervision, relied on a Firm assistant to audit revenues.

41. Powder River's 2007 financial statements disclosed net accounts receivable of approximately $1.2 million, which included an outstanding receivable from the Intermediary in the amount of $510,000 (approximately 42% of total accounts receivable). Nilson and the Firm failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support this material outstanding receivable. Nilson and the Firm requested a confirmation from the Intermediary, and after the Intermediary failed to provide a response to the confirmation request, Nilson and the Firm failed to perform alternative procedures. Instead, Nilson and the Firm solely relied on an amount represented by management as owed by the Intermediary.[53/] Similarly, Nilson and the Firm failed to perform any audit procedures with respect to commissions earned by the Intermediary for the sales of working interests which, as noted above, were netted against revenues and accounted for approximately 23% of total gross revenues from working interest sales.

42. During the 2007 audit, Nilson and the Firm failed to consider or exercise professional skepticism in evaluating whether information obtained during the audit represented risk factors for fraud. This information included: (i) the high percentage of revenues from the sale of working interests (in contrast to the minor amount of revenue realized through oil production), (ii) the issuer's commitment to pay a 9% return to the Third Parties irrespective of the success or failure in the development of oil fields, and

(iii) the ambiguous roles of the parties involved in the purchases and sales of working interests.[54/]

43. During the 2007 audit, Nilson and the Firm inappropriately relied on the same few pages from the specialists' reports used during the 2006 audit in assessing impairment and evaluating depletion expense with respect to capitalized costs of oil and gas properties. As with the 2006 audit, Nilson and the Firm failed to take any steps to evaluate the professional qualifications of the specialists to determine if they possessed the necessary skill or knowledge to perform the work, and also failed to assess their relationship with the client and obtain an understanding of the nature of the work performed as required by PCAOB standards.[55/] Nilson and the Firm failed to obtain an understanding of the methods and assumptions used by the specialists, make appropriate tests of data provided to and used by the specialists, and evaluate whether the specialists' findings supported the related assertions in the financial statements.[56] Compounding these failures was the fact that the reserve reports relied on by Nilson and Firm were the same reports used for the 2006 audit, even though such reports should have been updated at least annually.[57/]

44. Finally, Nilson and Firm failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter regarding amounts disclosed in the financial statements as notes payable and

See also, id., at ¶5.106 (Capital Cost Limitations), which provides the following: "The full cost method prescribes a ceiling test for capitalized costs. The auditor should review the components of the cost ceiling computation to determine that they are computed in accordance with the prescribed guidelines. The rationale behind the ceiling test is that oil and gas property costs should be recoverable from the underlying assets. Therefore, any capitalized costs—net of accumulated [depletion, depreciation, and amortization] and related deferred income taxes—in excess of the ceiling are written off to expense. In those situations where costs approach or exceed the ceiling, it may be advisable to consider consultation with independent outside specialists."

represented by management to be outstanding from an installment sales agreement.[58/] The agreement related to Powder River's acquisition of a leasehold in an oilfield which was recorded as an asset within "Net Oil and Gas Properties" on Powder River's 2007 financial statements. According to the December 31, 2007 financial statements, the balance shown as notes payable under this agreement was $5,025,000, or 47%, of total liabilities. When the Firm did not receive a response to its request for a confirmation concerning the unpaid balance, Nilson and the Firm performed alternative procedures, tracing installment payments to bank statements. Nilson and the Firm failed to exercise due professional care in performing this procedure, as they failed to identify from the bank statements that Powder River made these installment payments to an entity that was not the counterparty under the installment agreement.[59/] Moreover, the copy of the installment agreement contained in the audit documentation clearly stated that the final installment payment under the agreement had been due by December 15, 2006. Nilson and the Firm failed to investigate the circumstances surrounding these contradictions and corroborate management's representations that the installment agreement had been modified and the terms extended.[60/]

b. Audit of Jade Art Group, Inc.'s 2008 Financial Statements

45. Jade Art Group, Inc. ("Jade Art") is a Nevada corporation with its principal place of business in the People's Republic of China. Its common stock is traded on the OTC Bulletin Board and Pink Sheets. In its public filings, the company states that in 2008, it formed a wholly-owned Chinese subsidiary, JiangXi SheTai Jade Industrial Company Limited, to engage in the sale and distribution of raw jade throughout China. At all relevant times, Jade Art was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

46. The Firm audited Jade Art's 2008 financial statements. Nilson was the auditor with final responsibility for the audit, and exercised supervisory responsibility for the Firm assistants assigned to the engagement. Nilson and Firm assistants performed audit field work at the issuer's offices in China. On May 15, 2009, the Firm issued an audit report, which was included in the Form 10-K filed with the Commission on May 18, 2009.

ORDER

47. Nilson and the Firm violated PCAOB standards during the 2008 Jade Art audit. Planning consisted of little more than referring Firm assistants to standardized audit programs and checklists. Nilson provided insufficient guidance to Firm assistants assigned to the audit beyond providing the standardized audit programs and checklists. Nilson improperly delegated to Firm assistants with insufficient audit experience the decisions about what audit procedures should be performed.[61/]

48. Nilson and the Firm violated additional PCAOB auditing standards during the 2008 Jade Art audit. The issuer disclosed that it had engaged in a non-monetary exchange transaction in which it had exchanged its rights in a wood-carving subsidiary for the exclusive right to distribute certain amounts of raw jade from a mining operation at specified prices. Generally, GAAP requires that the cost of the jade distribution right be determined by the fair value of the wood-carving subsidiary surrendered in that exchange, unless the fair value of the jade distribution right received was more clearly evident.[62/] In Jade Art's 2008 financial statements, the fair value of this distribution right comprised 98% of its total assets and was based on an appraisal of the wood-carving business relinquished in the exchange.

49. To test the amounts recorded by the issuer in the non-monetary exchange, Nilson and the Firm relied on unverified, unsigned documents that they understood to be translations of reports originally prepared by a Chinese appraisal organization. Nilson and the Firm took no steps to evaluate the professional qualifications of the appraisal organization to determine that it possessed the necessary skill or knowledge to perform the appraisals and reach the conclusions described in the appraisals. Nilson and the Firm did not assess the appraisal organization's professional certifications, license, or other recognition of its competence. Nilson and the Firm did not inquire as to the organization's reputation and standing in the views of its peers and others familiar with its past performance, nor did they inquire as to the organization's experience in the type of work under consideration, all as required by PCAOB standards.[63/] Nilson and the Firm failed to obtain an understanding of the methods and assumptions used by the appraisal organization, to make appropriate tests of data provided to and used by the appraisal organization, or to evaluate whether the appraisal organization's findings supported the related assertions in the financial statements. Nilson and the Firm failed to obtain an understanding of the nature of the work performed by the appraisal organization, including the objectives and scope of that work, and did not assess whether the organization had a relationship with the client.[64/] Finally, Nilson and the Firm failed to obtain copies of the original appraisal reports or any evidence that the documents on which they relied were true or complete translations of the original reports that they purported to represent.[65/]

50. Nilson and the Firm failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter regarding the amortization by Jade Art of the intangible distribution right. Specifically, Nilson and the Firm failed to determine whether the intangible distribution right was being amortized over the useful life to the reporting entity and whether the method of amortization reflected the pattern in which the economic benefits of the intangible asset were being consumed. Nilson and the Firm accepted Jade Art management's representation that the distribution right should be amortized on a straight line basis over 25 years, even though according to the contract, the life of the distribution right was 50 years.[66/]

51. During planning, Nilson and the Firm concluded that deteriorating business conditions in China warranted an evaluation of potential impairment of the intangible asset representing Jade Art's distribution right.[67/] Despite this conclusion, the Firm performed no audit procedures to test for the impairment of the intangible asset.[68/]

Such events or changes in circumstances include, but are not limited to, current period operating or cash flow losses or a projection or forecast that demonstrates continuing losses associated with the use of the long lived asset.

52. Nilson and the Firm failed to perform sufficient audit procedures to test Jade Art's costs of goods sold. Nilson and the Firm inappropriately relied on a substantive analytical review of month-to-month gross profit without either assessing the appropriateness of the resulting gross profit percentage or developing expectations to be used in connection with the analytical procedure.[69/]

E. Respondents Failed to Adequately Supervise Firm Assistants

53. PCAOB standards require that audit field work "be adequately planned."[70/] In planning an audit, "the auditor should consider the nature, extent, and timing of work to be performed and should prepare a written audit program (or set of written audit programs) for every audit."[71/] PCAOB standards require the auditor with final responsibility for the audit to direct the efforts of assistants who are involved in accomplishing the objectives of the audit, determine whether those objectives were accomplished, remain informed of significant problems encountered, and review the work performed, all commensurate with the complexity of the subject matter and the qualifications of the assistants.[72/]

54. Respondents violated these standards during the audit engagements described above. In each engagement, planning consisted of little more than referring Firm assistants to standardized audit programs and checklists. In addition, Respondents provided insufficient guidance to Firm assistants assigned to the audits beyond providing the standardized audit programs and checklists. Respondents improperly delegated decisions as to what audit procedures should be performed to Firm assistants with limited audit experience.[73/]

F. Respondents Engaged in Multiple and Repeated Violations of PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3

55. Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation, ("AS No. 3") requires that an auditor prepare audit documentation in sufficient detail to document the procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached with respect to relevant financial statement assertions, and to demonstrate clearly that the work was in fact performed.[74/] Prior to the report release date, the auditor must have completed all necessary auditing procedures and obtained sufficient evidence to support the representations in the auditor's report. A complete and final set of audit documentation should be assembled for retention as of a date not more than 45 days after the report release date (documentation completion date).[75/] Circumstances may require additions to audit documentation after the report release date. While information and documentation may be added after that date, any added information or documentation must indicate the date the information was added, the name of the person who added the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it.[76/]

56. In the summer of 2007, Respondents received notice that the Board's Division of Registration and Inspections ("Inspections") planned to inspect the Firm in the fall of 2007. In preparation for the Board's inspection, Chisholm and Nilson, and at their instruction, Firm assistants, created and added audit documentation to the audit files that were subject to the inspection months after the audits' respective document completion dates. Chisholm and Nilson created and added audit documentation to the audit files to create the misleading appearance that the Firm had performed, documented and signed-off on audit procedures prior to the issuance of the audit opinions and the audit completion dates. Chisholm and Nilson did not document, or instruct the assistants to document, in the audit files that (1) the audit documentation described above had been created or changed after the documentation completion dates, or (2) certain audit procedures had been performed after the audit report release dates.

57. At the direction of Chisholm and Nilson, several Firm assistants spent hundreds of hours between August and October 2007 creating and adding this audit documentation to audit files that were subject to the Board's inspection. Among other documentation, audit programs and checklists were created and added to the 2006 audit files. For example, Chisholm, Nilson and Firm assistants created and added approximately 10 documents to the 2006 Powder River audit file and approximately 20 documents to the 2006 Hendrx audit file, all well after the audits' respective document completion dates. In addition, Firm assistants created and added audit documentation to at least 16 other audit files that were subject to the Board's 2007 inspection, months after the audits' respective document completion dates.

58. In a number of instances, Chisholm's and Nilson's efforts included directing Firm assistants to add information to the audit files to create the appearance that Firm auditors had performed certain audit procedures that had not, in fact, been performed during the audits. Specifically, under Chisholm and Nilson's supervision, Firm assistants performed audit procedures, including clearing engagement partner comments and reconciling the working trial balances provided by an issuer client to the published financial statements.

59. From October 29, 2007 to November 2, 2007, and from November 12, 2007 to November 15, 2007, PCAOB inspectors reviewed audit files for five issuer clients at the Firm's offices in Utah, including the 2006 audits of Powder River and Hendrx. During the inspection process, Chisholm and Nilson provided the altered audit documentation described above to Inspections without any clarification or explanation of the aforementioned changes and additions.

60. In addition, Respondents violated AS No. 3 with respect to the Firm's audit of AlphaTrade's 2007 financial statements. As described above, in 2009, the Firm identified information that led to the restatement of the AlphaTrade's 2007 financial statements. During that process, Respondents reviewed the Firm's 2007 audit documentation and discovered that, during the 2007 audit, the engagement team failed to determine that AlphaTrade improperly accounted for deferred revenues.[77/] As a result, Respondents caused certain information to be added to the audit documentation for accounts receivable that suggested that the engagement team had performed certain steps during the 2007 audit concerning accounts receivable. Respondents failed to specify the date on which these changes were made to the audit documentation, the name of the person making the changes, and the reasons for the changes.

G. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rule 4006 and Failed to Cooperate with the Board's Investigation

1. Noncooperation in Connection with a Board Inspection

61. PCAOB rules require registered firms and their associated persons to cooperate in the performance of any Board inspection.[78/] This obligation to cooperate includes "an obligation not to provide misleading documents or information in connection with the Board's inspection processes…."[79/] Respondents' conduct in creating and altering audit documentation in anticipation of a Board inspection violated PCAOB Rule 4006.

62. As detailed above, Respondents and Firm assistants (acting at the Respondents' instruction) created and added information to over a dozen audit files, including those related to Powder River and Hendrx, long after the audit report release dates in preparation for the 2007 PCAOB inspection of the Firm. Respondents and Firm assistants did so without specifying the dates the information was added, the names of the persons adding the information, and the reasons for adding the information. Audit documentation was added to the audit files in advance of a Board inspection to create the misleading appearance that the Firm had performed, documented and signed-off on audit procedures prior to the issuance of the audit opinions and the audit completion dates. In doing so, Respondents' conduct violated PCAOB Rule 4006.

2. Noncooperation In Connection with the Board's Investigation

ORDER

Board rules include procedures for implementing that authority.[81/] Noncooperation with a Board investigation includes knowingly making any false material declaration or making or using any other information, including any book, paper, document, record, recording, or other material, knowing the same to contain any false material declaration.[82/] As described below, Respondents failed to cooperate with a Board investigation by submitting audit documentation to the Division that they knew to contain false declarations.

64. On August 1, 2008 and May 6, 2009, as part of an informal inquiry, the Division requested that Respondents produce certain work papers, correspondence, billing information and other documents concerning particular engagements ("Document Requests"). Respondents subsequently provided certain material to the Division. On June 29, 2009, July 23, 2009, August 5, 2009 and October 26, 2009, as part of a formal investigation, the Division issued Accounting Board Demands ("ABDs") to Respondents for documents and for other materials. On July 31, 2009, Respondents, through their counsel, informed Division staff that Respondents were relying in part on their prior production in response to the Document Requests of August 1, 2008 and May 6, 2009 to fulfill their obligation to produce documents under the ABDs of June 29, 2009 and July 23, 2009. Thereafter, Respondents produced to the staff additional documents called for by the ABDs.

65. In response to and in preparation for providing audit documentation to the Division in response to the Document Requests and ABDs, Respondents, and at their instruction, Firm assistants, created and added audit documentation to the audit files that were subject to the Document Requests and ABDs, in addition to those files that had been subject to the previous inspection. Respondents produced to Division staff audit documentation that had been created or changed months after the documentation completion dates for the respective audits. The changes to the audit documentation were not annotated with the actual dates of the changes, the identities of the persons who made the changes, or the reasons for the changes.

66. Chisholm and Nilson knew this effort to create and complete audit documentation was designed to mislead the Division to conclude that such audit documentation had in fact been created during the various audits, and not subsequent to the release of the audit reports and documentation completion dates. As a result, Respondents failed to cooperate with a Board investigation.

ORDER

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Sections 105(b)(3) and 105 (c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rules 5300(a)(1) and 5300(b)(1), the registration of Chisholm, Bierwolf, Nilson & Morrill, LLC is permanently revoked;

B. Pursuant to Sections 105(b)(3) and 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rules 5300(a)(2) and 5300(b)(1), Todd D. Chisholm is permanently barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i);

C. Pursuant to Sections 105(b)(3) and 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rules 5300(a)(2) and 5300(b)(1), Troy F. Nilson is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i); and

D. After five (5) years from the date of this Order, Troy F. Nilson may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Darrin G. Estella, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2011-004 August 1, 2011

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is barring Darrin G. Estella, CPA ("Estella" or "Respondent") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the improper creation, addition, and backdating of audit documentation prior to a Board inspection.

I.

On December 6, 2010, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, these proceedings were not public. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, Respondent did not consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds that:[2/]

A. Respondent

1. Darrin G. Estella, 36, of Salem, Massachusetts, is a certified public accountant who is licensed under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts (license no. 22794). At all relevant times, Estella was a senior manager in the Boston, Massachusetts office of Ernst & Young LLP ("E&Y"), and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). E&Y removed Estella from the audit engagement team for the "Company," as defined below in paragraph four, in June 2010, and subsequently separated Estella from employment.

B. Summary

2. E&Y has been the independent auditor for the Company since May 4, 2002. E&Y issued an audit report expressing an unqualified opinion on the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements. Respondent was the senior manager for the audit of the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements ("Audit") and began working on the Company audit engagement in 2005. Respondent was supervised by

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

Peter C. O'Toole, an E&Y engagement partner,[3/] and supervised other members of the audit engagement team including Jacqueline A. Higgins, an E&Y manager.[4/]

3. This matter concerns Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards. Respondent repeatedly violated both Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, and Auditing Standard No. 3 ("AS3"), Audit Documentation. Under O'Toole's supervision and with his authorization, Respondent, and others supervised and authorized by him, improperly created, added, and backdated working papers in advance of the Board's inspection of the Audit, and provided misleading documents and information to the Board, in violation of Rule 4006. In violation of AS3, Respondent, and others supervised and authorized by him, and with O'Toole's authorization: added documents to the working papers without indicating the dates that documents were added to the working papers, the names of the persons preparing the additional documentation, and the reason for adding the documentation months after the documentation completion date.

C. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards.

4. The Company is an "issuer" as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). In April 2010, the Board inspected E&Y's audit of the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements.

5. PCAOB rules require that an associated person of a registered public accounting firm "shall cooperate with the Board in the performance of any Board inspection."[5/] This cooperation obligation "includes an obligation not to provide misleading documents or information in connection with the Board's inspection processes."[6/] PCAOB rules also require that associated persons of registered public accounting firms comply with the Board's auditing standards.[7/] Among other things, PCAOB auditing standards require that an auditor make certain written disclosures if the auditor adds audit working papers after the documentation completion date.[8/] As detailed below, Respondent violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards when he and others supervised and authorized by him: (1) improperly created, added, and backdated audit working papers; and (2) provided misleading audit documentation to the Board in connection with the Board's inspection of the Audit.

The Audit

6. E&Y audited the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements. E&Y's audit report was dated November 23, 2009. The audit report expressed an unqualified opinion and stated that the Audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. The audit report stated that the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the Company's financial position, results of operations, and changes in net assets in conformity with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP"). The audit report was included in the Company's annual report filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") on November 27, 2009.

7. The audit report release date for the Audit was November 24, 2009.[9/] The documentation completion date, therefore, was January 8, 2010.[10/] While information may be added to the working papers after the documentation completion date, the new documentation must disclose the date the information was added, the person preparing the additional documentation, and the reason for adding the information to the working papers after the documentation completion date.[11/]

Steps Taken in Advance of the Board's Inspection

8. On March 30, 2010, the Board notified E&Y that the Board's Division of Registration and Inspections ("Board's Inspection Division") would inspect the Audit. The Act "requires the Board to conduct a 'continuing program of inspections to assess the degree of compliance of each registered public accounting firm and associated persons . . . with [the Act], the rules of the Board, the rules of the Commission, or professional standards.'"[12/]

9. On or before March 31, 2010, Respondent, O'Toole, and Higgins were notified that the Audit would be inspected by the Board's Inspection Division. Field work for the inspection was scheduled to commence the week of April 19, 2010.

10. On or before March 31, 2010, Respondent, O'Toole, and Higgins each had received an email in which E&Y expressly instructed the members of the Audit engagement team that no modifications, additions, or deletions should be made to the working papers of the Audit in preparation for the Board's inspection.

Respondent and Others Reviewed the External Working Papers

11. On or about March 31, 2010, O'Toole directed an E&Y staff person on the Company audit engagement team to retrieve the hard copy external working papers for the Audit ("external working papers"). The staff person retrieved the external working papers from the Records Center in E&Y's Boston office, and placed the working papers in a conference room in E&Y's Boston office.

12. On or about April 5, 2010, Respondent, O'Toole, and Higgins began working together in this conference room, in the course of preparing for the upcoming Board inspection. O'Toole directed Respondent and Higgins to review the external working papers. On April 6, 2010, Respondent and O'Toole were informed that the Board's sole area of focus for the Inspection would be "securities valuation."

Respondent and O'Toole Created and Backdated a Working Paper

13. After review of the external working papers, O'Toole told Respondent that a document needed to be created summarizing work that Respondent and O'Toole asserted was done during the Audit concerning the valuation of one of the Company's investments in another company's common and convertible preferred shares (the "Asset"). Respondent and O'Toole understood that the valuation of the Asset was the most significant issue in the Audit, and that the audit work related to the valuation of the Asset could be an area of focus for the Board during the upcoming inspection. O'Toole and Respondent decided to create a document summarizing work that Respondent and O'Toole asserted was done during the Audit concerning the valuation of the Asset, and to add this document to the external working papers.

14. With O'Toole's knowledge, Respondent called an E&Y staff person, who was not a member of the Company Audit engagement team, into the conference room containing the external working papers, asked the staff person to give Respondent the staff person's laptop, and asked the staff person to leave the conference room. Respondent inserted a flash drive into the laptop. The flash drive contained a form document. Respondent used the form to draft a memorandum regarding audit work related to the valuation of the Asset ("H10.3 Working Paper"). O'Toole reviewed the draft document on the laptop and made revisions. Respondent then printed out the final version of the H10.3 Working Paper. In an effort to limit any electronic record of the creation of the H10.3 Working Paper, Respondent did not save the memorandum on the laptop, or on the flash drive. Respondent threw away the flash drive and returned the laptop to the staff person.

15. O'Toole and Respondent, at O'Toole's direction, backdated the final version of the H10.3 Working Paper to November 24, 2009, despite the fact that it was created in April 2010, in order to make it appear that the working paper had been created at the time of the Audit. Respondent, with O'Toole's knowledge and authorization, added the H10.3 Working Paper to the external working papers. In violation of AS3, the H10.3 Working Paper did not indicate the date it was added to the working papers, the person preparing the additional documentation, or the reason for adding the additional information to the working papers three months after the documentation completion date.

16. At the time of this conduct, Respondent understood that he was violating E&Y policy on audit documentation as well as professional auditing standards.

Respondent Authorized Others Improperly To Alter, Add, and Backdate Working Papers

17. Based on her review of the external working papers, Higgins identified for Respondent and O'Toole certain documents she believed were not in the external working papers about which the Board's Inspection Division might inquire. Under O'Toole's supervision and with his authorization, Respondent thereafter authorized Higgins improperly to alter, add, and backdate documents in the external working papers.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

18. First, Respondent, under O'Toole's supervision and with his authorization, directed Higgins to create and print out a "Review Procedures Memorandum" and to backdate the document to November 30, 2009. Respondent also backdated his sign-off on this working paper. Respondent directed Higgins to add this document to the working papers.

19. Second, Respondent, under O'Toole's supervision and with his authorization, directed Higgins to assemble three checklists obtained after the documentation completion date and in advance of the inspection into a single document ("HH6.8 Working Paper") and to backdate her sign-off on this working paper to November 2009. Respondent, as well, backdated his sign-off on this working paper. Respondent directed Higgins to add the HH6.8 Working Paper to the external working papers.

The Misleading Engagement Profile

20. Before inspection field work began, E&Y produced to the Board a document entitled Public Company Accounting Oversight Board 2010 Inspection Period Engagement Profile ("Engagement Profile"). Respondent drafted the Engagement Profile, and O'Toole reviewed the document and provided revisions to it.

21. One of the questions in the Engagement Profile stated: "Have there been any changes made to the audit documentation subsequent to the documentation completion date [?] If yes, please explain the nature of the changes below, and provide a summary log of when the changes were made." In reply to this question, Respondent and O'Toole represented that "[n]o changes [had] been made."

22. At no point in time did Respondent disclose to the Board's Inspection Division that the Respondent, O'Toole, and Higgins had, in fact, improperly created, added, and backdated documents in the external working papers, months after the documentation completion date, and shortly before the inspection.

Misleading Documents Provided to the Board During the Board's Inspection

23. Field work for the Board's inspection took place during the week of April 19, 2010. During field work, E&Y made the external working papers available to the Board's inspectors, including the improperly added documents which were placed in the external working papers shortly before the Board's inspection. Respondent did not advise the inspectors that any of these documents were improperly added to the external working papers in April 2010.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

24. Respondent understood that the Board's inspectors could request and receive copies of working papers from the Audit. During field work, Board inspectors requested copies of certain external working papers, including certain of the late-added documents. On April 22, 2010, Higgins emailed to a Board inspector copies of the H10.3 Working Paper and the HH6.8 Working Paper. Respondent did not disclose to the Board that these documents were improperly added to the external working papers in April 2010.

25. On May 21, 2010, the Board issued an inspection comment form to E&Y ("Comment Form"). By May 24, 2010, Respondent had received a copy of the Comment Form. The Comment Form discussed the audit work related to the valuation of the Asset. The Comment Form quoted directly from the backdated H10.3 Working Paper.

26. At no time, however, did Respondent disclose to the Board's Inspection Division that the document the Comment Form was quoting was improperly backdated, and that it was improperly added to the external working papers in April 2010, just before the Board's inspectors began their field work.

27. As a result of the conduct described above, Respondent violated Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, and AS3, Audit Documentation.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Darrin G. Estella, CPA, is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i); and

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Peter C. O'Toole, CPA, Respondent.	)	PCAOB Release No. 105-2011-005 August 1, 2011

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is (1) barring Peter C. O'Toole, CPA ("O'Toole" or "Respondent") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, and (2) imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $50,000 against him.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the improper creation, addition, and backdating of audit documentation prior to a Board inspection.

I.

On December 6, 2010, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, these proceedings were not public. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, Respondent did not consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds that:[2/]

A. Respondent

1. Peter C. O'Toole, 43, of West Roxbury, Massachusetts, is a certified public accountant who is licensed under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts (license no. 17005). At all relevant times and beginning in 2006, O'Toole was a partner in the Boston, Massachusetts office of Ernst & Young LLP ("E&Y") and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). E&Y removed O'Toole from the audit engagement team for the "Company," as defined below in paragraph four, in June 2010, and separated O'Toole from employment in September 2010 (effective September 30, 2010).

B. Summary

2. E&Y has been the independent auditor for the Company since May 4, 2002. E&Y issued an audit report expressing an unqualified opinion on the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements. Respondent was the engagement partner for the audit of the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements ("Audit"), and had served as the engagement partner for the Company's audits since 2005. Respondent supervised the members of the Audit engagement team, including Darrin G. Estella, an

The sanctions that the Board is imposing in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

3. This matter concerns Respondent's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards. Respondent repeatedly violated both Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, and Auditing Standard No. 3 ("AS3"), Audit Documentation. Respondent improperly created, added, and backdated a working paper in advance of the Board's inspection of the Audit. Others under his supervision and authorization improperly created, added, and backdated other working papers in advance of the Board's inspection. Respondent, and others supervised and authorized by him, provided misleading documents and information to the Board, in violation of Rule 4006. This conduct also violated AS3 because the documents added to the working papers did not indicate the dates that documents were added to the working papers, the names of the persons preparing the additional documentation, and the reason for adding the documentation months after the documentation completion date.

C. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

4. The Company is an "issuer" as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). In April 2010, the Board inspected E&Y's audit of the Company's September 30, 2009 financial statements.

Respondent and Estella Created and Backdated a Working Paper

13. After review of the external working papers, Respondent told Estella that a document needed to be created summarizing work that Respondent and Estella asserted was done during the Audit concerning the valuation of one of the Company's investments in another company's common and convertible preferred shares (the "Asset"). Respondent and Estella understood that the valuation of the Asset was the most significant issue in the Audit, and that the audit work related to the valuation of the Asset could be an area of focus for the Board during the upcoming inspection. Respondent and Estella decided to create a document summarizing work that Respondent and Estella asserted was done during the Audit concerning the valuation of the Asset, and to add this document to the external working papers.

14. With Respondent's knowledge, Estella called an E&Y staff person, who was not a member of the Company Audit engagement team, into the conference room containing the external working papers, asked the staff person to give Estella the staff person's laptop, and asked the staff person to leave the conference room. Estella inserted a flash drive into the laptop. The flash drive contained a form document. Estella used the form to draft a memorandum regarding audit work related to the valuation of the Asset ("H10.3 Working Paper"). Respondent reviewed the draft document on the laptop and made revisions. Estella then printed out the final version of the H10.3 Working Paper. In an effort to limit any electronic record of the creation of the H10.3 Working Paper, Estella did not save the memorandum on the laptop, or on the flash drive. Estella threw away the flash drive and returned the laptop to the staff person.

15. Respondent and Estella, at Respondent's direction, backdated the final version of the H10.3 Working Paper to November 24, 2009, despite the fact that it was created in April 2010, in order to make it appear that the working paper had been created at the time of the Audit. Estella, with Respondent's knowledge and authorization, added the H10.3 Working Paper to the external working papers. In violation of AS3, the H10.3 Working Paper did not indicate the date it was added to the working papers, the person preparing the additional documentation, or the reason for adding the additional information to the working papers three months after the documentation completion date.

16. At the time of this conduct, Respondent understood that he was violating E&Y policy on audit documentation as well as professional auditing standards.

Respondent Authorized Others Improperly To Alter, Add, and Backdate Working Papers

17. Based on her review of the external working papers, Higgins identified for Respondent and Estella certain documents she believed were not in the external working papers about which the Board's Inspection Division might inquire. Respondent thereafter authorized others under his supervision improperly to alter, add, and backdate documents in the external working papers. Those documents were: (1) a "Review Procedures Memorandum;" (2) a newly created document which tied-out the

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

final financial statements; (3) the Average Forward Foreign Currency Contracts Calculation working paper; and (4) an HH6.8 Working Paper that compiled three checklists obtained after the documentation completion date and in advance of the inspection.

The Misleading Engagement Profile

18. Before inspection field work began, E&Y produced to the Board a document entitled Public Company Accounting Oversight Board 2010 Inspection Period Engagement Profile ("Engagement Profile"). Estella drafted the Engagement Profile, and Respondent reviewed the document and provided revisions to it.

19. One of the questions in the Engagement Profile stated: "Have there been any changes made to the audit documentation subsequent to the documentation completion date [?] If yes, please explain the nature of the changes below, and provide a summary log of when the changes were made." In reply to this question, Respondent and Estella represented that "[n]o changes [had] been made."

20. At no point in time did Respondent disclose to the Board's Inspection Division that the Respondent, Estella, and Higgins had, in fact, improperly created, added, and backdated documents in the external working papers, months after the documentation completion date, and shortly before the inspection.

Misleading Documents Provided to the Board During the Board's Inspection

21. Field work for the Board's inspection took place during the week of April 19, 2010. During field work, E&Y made the external working papers available to the Board's inspectors, including the improperly added documents which were placed in the external working papers shortly before the Board's inspection. Respondent did not advise the inspectors that any of these documents were improperly added to the external working papers in April 2010.

22. Respondent understood that the Board's inspectors could request and receive copies of working papers from the Audit. During field work, Board inspectors requested copies of certain external working papers, including certain of the late-added documents. On April 22, 2010, Higgins emailed to a Board inspector copies of the H10.3 Working Paper and the HH6.8 Working Paper. Respondent did not disclose to the Board that these documents were improperly added to the external working papers in April 2010.

23. On May 21, 2010, the Board issued an inspection comment form to E&Y ("Comment Form"). By May 24, 2010, Respondent had received a copy of the

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Comment Form. The Comment Form discussed the audit work related to the valuation of the Asset. The Comment Form quoted directly from the backdated H10.3 Working Paper.

24. At no time, however, did Respondent disclose to the Board's Inspection Division that the document the Comment Form was quoting was improperly backdated, and that it was improperly added to the external working papers in April 2010, just before the Board's inspectors began their field work.

25. As a result of the conduct described above, Respondent violated Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, and AS3, Audit Documentation.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Peter C. O'Toole, CPA, is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i);

B. After three (3) years from the date of this Order, Peter C. O'Toole may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm; and

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $50,000 is imposed. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Peter C. O'Toole shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer in accordance with instructions furnished by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter which identifies Peter C. ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of GLO CPAs, LLLP, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2011-006 November 30, 2011

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring GLO CPAs, LLLP (the "Firm" or "GLO") and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $1000. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report in both 2010 and 2011 and timely pay an annual fee in 2011.

I.

On August 5, 2011, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, GLO did not file an answer indicating the firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondent

1. GLO is a limited liability limited partnership located in Houston, Texas. It is licensed under the laws of the State of Texas to engage in the practice of public accounting (license no. P05304). The firm is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board Rules. Public records indicate that it has issued no audit reports for issuers in 2011, no audit reports for issuers in 2010, one audit report for an issuer in 2009, nine audit reports for issuers in 2008, and ten audit reports for issuers in 2007.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, GLO failed to timely file an annual report for 2010 and 2011.

3. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, GLO failed to timely pay its annual fee in 2011.

C. Subsequent Events

4. The Board instituted these proceedings on August 5, 2011. GLO failed to file an answer pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5421(b).

5. On September 1, 2011, GLO filed its annual fee for 2011.

6. On September 1, 2011, GLO filed its annual report for 2010.

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

7. On October 3, 2011, GLO filed a Form 1-WD to request leave to withdraw its registration from the Board.

8. On October 6, 2011, GLO filed its annual report for 2011.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), GLO CPAs, LLLP is censured; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act, and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $1000 is imposed upon GLO CPAs, LLLP. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. GLO CPAs, LLLP shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer pursuant to instructions provided by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter, which identifies GLO CPAs, LLLP as a respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover letter and money order or check shall be sent to Office of the Secretary, Attention: J. Gordon Seymour, General Counsel and Secretary, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

V.

Upon performance by GLO of Part IV above, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 2107, the Board shall consider GLO's Form 1-WD and whether to grant it leave to withdraw. In doing so, the Board shall not take into consideration its findings contained in Part III herein.

ISSUED BY THE BOARD.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Bentleys Brisbane Partnership and Robert John Forbes, CA Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2011-007 December 20, 2011

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is: (1) revoking the registration of Bentleys Brisbane Partnership (the "Firm" or "Bentleys Brisbane"); (2) imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $10,000 upon Bentleys Brisbane; and (3) barring Robert J. Forbes, CA ("Forbes") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] (Bentleys Brisbane and Forbes are collectively referred to as "Respondents.") The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that Forbes and Bentleys Brisbane violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the audit of one issuer client during 2006, and also violated PCAOB quality control standards.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Bentleys Brisbane and Forbes.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement (the "Offers") that [1/] Bentleys Brisbane may reapply for registration after two (2) years from the date of this Order. Forbes may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which are admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds that:[2/]

A. Respondents

1. Bentleys Brisbane Partnership is a public accounting firm headquartered in Brisbane, Commonwealth of Australia. In 2006, the Firm registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules.[3/] Since registering with the Board, the Firm has issued one audit report for one issuer client, Alloy Steel International, Inc. ("Alloy Steel") for the year ended September 30, 2006. At the time of the 2006 audit of Alloy Steel, Bentleys Brisbane was a member of Bentleys MRI (now known as Bentleys, and referred to herein as the "Bentleys MRI network"), an independent association of Australian accounting firms. Members of the Bentleys MRI network were affiliated only, and were not in partnership with one another.

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding. The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

[3/] The Firm registered with the Board (effective April 25, 2006) under the name "Bentleys MRI Brisbane Partnership," and it conducted its sole audit of an issuer client under that name. The Firm changed its name to Bentleys Brisbane Partnership in 2008.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

2. Robert John Forbes, 57, was at all relevant times a registered company auditor licensed by the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (License Number 5927) and a chartered accountant licensed by the Institute of Chartered Accountants in Australia. At all relevant times, Forbes was the office managing partner of Bentleys Brisbane and was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

3. In connection with the preparation and issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards and related professional practice standards.[4/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[5/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[6/] Auditing standards in effect at the time of the 2006 Alloy Steel audit required that the auditor with final responsibility for the audit adequately plan the audit and supervise any assistants.[7/]

4. Respondents failed to meet these standards in connection with the audit of Alloy Steel for the year ended September 30, 2006. As detailed below, Respondents failed to plan, perform or supervise the 2006 Alloy Steel audit in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards. Rather, a Bentleys MRI network member firm that was not registered with the Board ("Firm A") purportedly performed the 2006 audit of Alloy Steel, and Respondents performed a limited review of the work papers. Nonetheless, Bentleys Brisbane expressed an unqualified opinion in its audit report on Alloy Steel's 2006 financial statements filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission").

5. Bentleys Brisbane also violated PCAOB rules and quality control standards by failing to develop policies and procedures to provide it with reasonable assurance that the work performed by its engagement personnel met applicable PCAOB auditing standards and to provide reasonable assurance that the Firm undertook only those engagements that the Firm could reasonably expect to be completed with professional competence. Forbes substantially contributed to those quality control violations.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules And Auditing Standards In Connection With The 2006 Alloy Steel Audit

6. Alloy Steel International, Inc. was, at all relevant times, a Delaware corporation headquartered in Malaga, Commonwealth of Australia. According to its public filings, Alloy Steel manufactured and distributed a specialized alloy for the mining, mineral-processing and steel manufacturing industries, through a wholly-owned Australian operating subsidiary. At all relevant times, Alloy Steel's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; its stock was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board; and it was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).[8/]

7. In June 2006, Bentleys Brisbane (through Forbes) was contacted by an unregistered member of the Bentleys MRI network, Firm A, and the two firms agreed that Firm A would perform the audit of Alloy Steel for the year ended September 30, 2006, and that Bentleys Brisbane and Forbes would review the work papers and sign the audit opinion. Respondents knew that Firm A was not registered with the PCAOB, and that Alloy Steel required an audit opinion issued by a PCAOB-registered accounting firm.

8. Forbes served as the engagement partner for the 2006 Alloy Steel audit and had final responsibility for the audit as that phrase is used in AU § 311, Planning and Supervision. He authorized the issuance of Bentley Brisbane's audit report dated December 22, 2006, which was included in a Form 10-KSB that Alloy Steel filed with the Commission on the same day. In that report, Bentleys Brisbane expressed an unqualified opinion on Alloy Steel's consolidated balance sheet as of September 30, 2006, and the related consolidated statements of operations, stockholders' equity and cash flows for each of the two years in the period ended September 30, 2006. Bentleys Brisbane's audit report stated that the audit had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, and that, in Bentleys Brisbane's opinion, Alloy Steel's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, its financial position in conformity with United States generally accepted accounting principles ("US GAAP").

Respondents Failed To Perform The 2006 Allow Steel Audit In Accordance With PCAOB Standards

9. On December 22, 2006, Respondents issued an unqualified opinion on Alloy Steel's financial statements without forming its opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[9/] In fact, Respondents neither performed the 2006 Alloy Steel audit, nor did they ensure that that the audit by Firm A was performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. Respondents performed no audit procedures, and collected no evidential matter.[10/] They never visited Alloy Steel;[11/] they performed none of the fieldwork in the 2006 Alloy Steel audit; and they prepared no work papers relating to the audit. Respondents' audit procedures were limited to Forbes's review of work papers provided by Firm A. Bentleys Brisbane recorded only 6.3 hours of work for the audit, all related to that limited review of Firm A work papers, performed within four days of issuance of the Firm's audit opinion. (Other than Forbes, no one at Bentleys Brisbane worked on the 2006 Alloy Steel audit.) Firm A purportedly performed the 2006 Alloy Steel audit.

10. Respondents failed to exercise due professional care in connection with this audit.[12/] Indeed, Forbes, who had final responsibility for the engagement, did not know the relevant professional accounting and auditing standards that governed the 2006 Alloy Steel audit.[13/] Moreover Forbes knew or should have known that the members of the Firm A audit team that performed the audit probably had no experience with US GAAP or PCAOB auditing standards, and that Firm A conducted the 2006 Alloy Steel audit in accordance with Australian auditing standards (not PCAOB auditing standards).[14/]

11. Further, when Respondents learned during the audit that the engagement partner on the Firm A team on the 2006 Alloy Steel audit had been sanctioned by Australian regulators for auditing misconduct, Respondents made no effort to learn about the facts underlying the sanction, nor to consider whether these facts raised concerns about Firm A engagement partner's level of knowledge, skill, and ability.[15/]

12. Respondents failed to plan the 2006 Alloy Steel audit, as required under PCAOB standards.[16/] Respondents did not consider or determine the nature, extent and timing of the work to be performed, and they did not prepare a written audit program for the audit setting forth the audit procedures they believed were necessary to accomplish the objectives of the audit.[17/] Among other things, Respondents did not consider (or even review) the applicable PCAOB standards before or during the 2006 Alloy Steel audit; review the prior years' work papers; read the current year's interim financial statements; discuss the type, scope and timing of the audit with the client's management; or establish the timing of the audit work; or establish and coordinate staffing requirements for the audit.[18/]

13. Respondents also failed to supervise the audit work performed during the 2006 Alloy Steel audit, in violation of PCAOB standards.[19/] Specifically, Respondents did not: instruct the Firm A audit team; review the work performed (except for a limited review of work papers provided by Firm A in the days before the audit report was signed); inform members of the audit team of their responsibilities or the objectives of the procedures to be performed; or inform members of the Firm A audit team of matters that may have affected the nature, extent, and timing of procedures they were to perform.[20/]

14. As Alloy Steel's new auditors for 2006, Respondents were required to make specific inquiries of Alloy Steel's predecessor auditor.[21/] Respondents, however, failed to make the required inquiries of the predecessor auditor, either before or after accepting the Alloy Steel engagement.

15. As a result of Respondents' failures to comply with PCAOB standards, Forbes improperly authorized the issuance of the Firm's audit report (dated December 22, 2006) on Alloy's financial statements for 2006 year, which incorrectly stated that the Firm had conducted an audit in accordance with PCAOB standards.[22/]

D. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Quality Control Standards

16. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm comply with certain quality control standards.[23/] Specifically, a firm should develop policies and procedures to provide it with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality.[24/] A firm's policies and procedures

also should provide reasonable assurance that the firm "undertakes only those engagements that the firm can reasonably expect to be completed with professional competence."[25/]

17. In 2006, Bentleys Brisbane's quality control policies and procedures did not provide the Firm with reasonable assurance that its work complied with PCAOB auditing standards. The Firm provided no training to its staff with respect to PCAOB auditing standards or US GAAP, and did not require its personnel to participate in continuing professional education or professional development activities to ensure that its staff would conduct its audits of US issuers in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards, US GAAP, and applicable Commission reporting requirements. There were no policies and procedures in place to ensure that the staff performed procedures necessary to comply with PCAOB standards or to even be aware of what those standards required. The Bentleys MRI network's Audit and Assurance Services Manual (used by all members of the Bentleys MRI network, including Bentleys Brisbane) did not even mention PCAOB auditing standards, but rather focused on compliance with Australian Auditing Standards and International Auditing Standards.

18. Bentleys Brisbane's policies and procedures also did not provide reasonable assurance that the Firm undertook only those engagements that the Firm could reasonably expect to be completed with professional competence. Bentleys Brisbane did not require that partners obtain approvals before taking on audit clients, to provide reasonable assurance that the Firm could provide audit services to the client with professional competence and in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards.

19. Forbes was the managing partner of Bentleys Brisbane during the relevant time period. As the managing partner, Forbes was responsible for designing, implementing and monitoring the Firm's system of quality control.[26/] Accordingly, Forbes had overall responsibility for ensuring that the Firm complied with PCAOB rules and standards. Forbes was aware that he, other Bentleys Brisbane personnel, and the Firm A team that performed the 2006 Alloy Steel audit, had no training or experience in conducting audits pursuant to PCAOB auditing standards. Notwithstanding the lack of adequate training and experience, he accepted the 2006 Alloy Steel audit engagement

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Bentleys Brisbane Partnership is revoked;

B. After two (2) years from the date of this Order, Bentleys Brisbane Partnership may reapply for registration by filing an application pursuant to PCAOB Rule 2101;

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $10,000 is imposed upon Bentleys Brisbane Partnership. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Bentleys Brisbane Partnership shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer in accordance with instructions furnished by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter which identifies Bentleys Brisbane Partnership as a respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Reuben E. Price & Co., Public Accountancy Corp., Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2011-008 December 20, 2011

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Reuben E. Price & Co., Public Accountancy Corp. (the "Firm" or "Reuben Price") and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $2000. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report and timely pay an annual fee in both 2010 and 2011.

I.

On August 5, 2011, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, Reuben Price did not file an answer indicating the Firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Reuben Price is a California corporation located in San Francisco, California. It is licensed under the laws of the State of California to engage in the practice of public accounting (license no. 3402).[2/] The Firm is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board Rules. In 2006, the Board imposed a censure on the Firm on the basis of its findings concerning the Firm's violation of Section 10A(b)(2) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 in failing to take prompt and appropriate steps in response to indications that an issuer audit client may have committed an illegal act.[3/] In 2009, the California Board of Accountancy revoked the licenses of the Firm and Richard Price, the Firm's sole shareholder. The revocations were stayed for three years.[4/] The last audit report by the Firm was issued in 2006.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2/] The license is under "probation." The California Board of Accountancy defines "probation" to mean that the license is current and valid. In addition, the licensee can engage in the practice of public accountancy prior to the license expiration date. "Probation" also means that the licensee has been disciplined and may have part of the disciplinary order (for example, revocation or suspension) stayed and may continue to practice under specific terms and conditions.

3. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, Reuben Price failed to timely pay its annual fee in 2010 and 2011.

C. Subsequent Events

4. The Board instituted these proceedings on August 5, 2011. Reuben Price failed to file an answer pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5421(b).

5. On November 18, 2011, Reuben Price filed its annual reports for 2010 and 2011.

6. On November 22, 2011, Reuben Price filed a Form 1-WD to request leave to withdraw its registration from the Board.

7. On December 2, 2011, Reuben Price paid its annual fees for 2010 and 2011.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, fair, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Reuben E. Price & Co., Public Accountancy Corp. is censured; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act, and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $2000 is imposed upon Reuben E. Price & Co., Public Accountancy Corp. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Reuben E. Price & Co., Public Accountancy Corp. shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer pursuant to instructions provided by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Ernst & Young LLP, Jeffrey S. Anderson, CPA, Ronald Butler, Jr., CPA, Thomas A. Christie, CPA, and Robert H. Thibault, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2012-001 February 8, 2012

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is (1) censuring the registered public accounting firm Ernst & Young LLP ("E&Y" or "Ernst & Young"); (2) barring Jeffrey S. Anderson, CPA ("Anderson") and Robert H. Thibault ("Thibault") from being associated with a registered public accounting firm;[1/] (3) censuring Ronald Butler, Jr., CPA ("Butler"), and Thomas A. Christie, CPA ("Christie"); and (4) imposing civil money penalties in the amounts of $2,000,000 as to E&Y, $50,000 as to Anderson, $25,000 as to Thibault, and $25,000 as to Butler.

The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of findings concerning E&Y, Anderson, Thibault, Butler, and Christie (collectively, "Respondents") for violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards related to E&Y's audits of the December 31, 2005, 2006, and 2007 (the "relevant time period") financial statements of Medicis Pharmaceutical Corporation and subsidiaries (collectively, "Medicis" or "the Company") and a consultation concerning Medicis's accounting for product returns (the "Product Returns Consultation") stemming from E&Y's Audit Quality Review of the December 31, 2005 Medicis audit in 2006 (the "2006 AQR").

I.

On March 8, 2011, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondents. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, these proceedings were not public. Pursuant to Section 105(c) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, Respondents did not consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents each submitted an Offer of Settlement (collectively, "Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents each consent to the entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[2/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds that:[3/]

A. Respondents

1. E&Y is, and at all relevant times was, a public accounting firm organized as a limited liability partnership under the laws of the state of Delaware and headquartered in New York, New York. E&Y has offices in multiple locations, including Phoenix, Arizona, and is licensed by, among others, the Arizona State Board of Accountancy (license No. 967-B). E&Y is, and at all relevant times was, registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules. E&Y has been Medicis's independent auditor since 1990.

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other persons or entities in this or any other proceeding.

[3/] The Board finds that each Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

2. Jeffrey S. Anderson, 56, of Paradise Valley, Arizona, is a certified public accountant licensed to practice under the laws of Arizona (license No. 4662-R), Colorado (license No. 24518), and New Mexico (license No. 4997). At all relevant times, he was a partner working from the Phoenix, Arizona office of E&Y, and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Anderson was the auditor with final responsibility[4/] for E&Y's audits of Medicis's financial statements for the fiscal years ended June 30, 2003, 2004, and 2005, the six months ended December 31, 2005, and the year ended December 31, 2007.[5/] In that capacity, he supervised E&Y's audit engagement teams and authorized the issuance of E&Y's audit reports for the foregoing financial statements. Anderson also participated in the 2006 AQR and the Product Returns Consultation.

3. Robert H. Thibault, 65, of Blaine, Washington, is a certified public accountant licensed to practice under the laws of California (license No. 56568). Thibault's license is currently inactive. He was the independent review partner for E&Y's audits of Medicis's financial statements for the six months ended December 31, 2005, and the year ended December 31, 2006. In that capacity, Thibault exercised the responsibilities of a "concurring or reviewing partner" under Regulation S-X, 17 C.F.R. § 210.2-01(f)(7)(ii)(B). Prior to July 1, 2005, Thibault was E&Y's Professional Practice Director for the Pacific Southwest Sub-Area. From July 1, 2005 until his retirement from E&Y, effective June 30, 2007, Thibault remained a member of E&Y's Professional Practice Group for the Pacific Southwest Sub-Area. Thibault participated in the Product Returns Consultation. At all relevant times, he was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

4. Ronald Butler, Jr., 42, of Phoenix, Arizona, is a certified public accountant licensed to practice under the laws of Arizona (license No. 10380-E). He was the second partner, supervised by Anderson, for E&Y's audits of Medicis's financial statements for the fiscal years ended June 30, 2004 and 2005, and the six months ended December 31, 2005. While not a direct participant in the Product Returns Consultation stemming from the 2006 AQR, Butler concurred with, and documented, the results of the consultation. He was the auditor with final responsibility for E&Y's audit of Medicis's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2006. In that capacity, he supervised E&Y's audit engagement team and authorized the issuance of E&Y's audit report for the 2006 financial statements. At all relevant times, he was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

5. Thomas A. Christie, 50, of Phoenix, Arizona, is a certified public accountant licensed to practice under the laws of Arizona (license No. 6501-E) and California (license No. 70718). Christie joined the Medicis engagement team in or about September 2007. He was the second partner, supervised by Anderson, for E&Y's audit of Medicis's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2007. At all relevant times, he was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Issuer

6. Medicis Pharmaceutical Corporation is a Delaware corporation with principal executive offices located in Scottsdale, Arizona. The Company's common stock is registered pursuant to Section 12(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and is listed on the New York Stock Exchange (ticker symbol "MRX"). At all relevant times, Medicis was an "issuer" as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

C. Summary

7. This matter concerns Respondents' failures to properly evaluate a material component of Medicis's financial statements – its sales returns reserve. Specifically, Respondents failed to comply with PCAOB auditing standards in evaluating Medicis's sales returns reserve estimate, including evaluating Medicis's practice of reserving for most of its estimated product returns at the cost of replacing the product ("replacement cost"). The audit evidence available to Respondents indicated that, at all relevant times, Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 48, Revenue Recognition When a Right of Return Exists ("SFAS 48") applied to Medicis's product sales subject to a right of return due to expiration and required Medicis to reserve for all of those estimated returns at gross sales price. Reserving for most of its estimated returns at replacement cost, rather than gross sales price, resulted in Medicis's reported sales returns reserve being materially understated and its reported revenue being misstated.[6/] Overall, Respondents' approach to evaluating Medicis's sales returns reserve methodology and estimate was inconsistent with their obligations to exercise professional skepticism as the Company's independent auditor.

[6/] See Medicis Pharmaceutical Corp. Form 10-K/A, filed November 10, 2008.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

8. In connection with the December 31, 2005 audit, Anderson, Thibault, and Butler failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter supporting Medicis's conclusion that an "exchange" exception to SFAS 48's general rule of reserving at gross sales price supported Medicis's reserving for most of its product returns at replacement cost. They concurred with this conclusion notwithstanding contradictory audit evidence indicating that the product returns in question were not eligible for the exchange exception to SFAS 48. Therefore, they failed to identify and appropriately address a material departure from U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP") resulting from Medicis's reliance on the exchange exception.[7/]

9. Merely two months after Anderson, Thibault, and Butler had concurred with the application of the SFAS 48 exchange exception, E&Y personnel responsible for the 2006 AQR questioned Medicis's reliance on the exchange exception and, with Anderson, Thibault and Butler, concluded that the exchange exception did not support Medicis's use of replacement cost. Rather than appropriately addressing this material departure from GAAP, Anderson, Thibault, and other E&Y personnel decided that a different accounting rationale supported Medicis's reserving at replacement cost for most of its estimated product returns. They concluded that Medicis's existing accounting result was supported by reference or analogy to warranty accounting under Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 5, Contingencies ("SFAS 5"). Butler did not participate in formulating the analogy to warranty accounting, but concurred with the warranty rationale. At all relevant times, however, Respondents understood that the product returns at issue were not returns of defective products pursuant to a warranty and that customers returning the products to Medicis were not relying on a warranty in making such returns. Instead, customers were returning products because Medicis provided them with a right to return expired products. After the Product Returns Consultation, Medicis, with E&Y's concurrence, relied on the flawed warranty accounting rationale to continue reserving for most of its product returns at replacement

[7/] An auditor's opinion that an issuer's financial statements are presented in conformity with GAAP must be based on an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. See AU § 508.07, Reports on Audited Financial Statements. PCAOB standards require an auditor to perform audit procedures sufficient to evaluate the issuer's adherence to GAAP. See, e.g., AU § 110.01, Responsibilities and Functions of the Independent Auditor. This Order's description of audit failures relating to GAAP departures in an issuer's financial statements necessarily reflects the Board's judgment concerning the proper application of GAAP. Any such description of GAAP departures, however, should not be understood as an indication that the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") has considered or made any determination concerning the issuer's compliance with GAAP.

cost in 2005, 2006, and 2007. As a result, Anderson, Thibault, and Butler failed to identify and appropriately address a material departure from GAAP.[8/]

10. This matter also involves the failure to comply with PCAOB standards in auditing Medicis's new "units-in-channel" methodology for calculating its year-end returns reserve estimate in 2006 and 2007. Anderson, Butler, and Christie failed to appropriately test, or ensure the performance of adequate procedures to test, key assumptions underlying management's new estimation methodology.[9/] Furthermore, notwithstanding contradictory audit evidence, they placed undue reliance on management's representation that the assumptions were reasonable.[10/]

11. Finally, this matter also involves the failure to adequately consider whether Medicis needed to disclose in its financial statements its practice of reserving for product returns at replacement cost, its application of the analogy to warranty accounting in 2006, and significant changes in its returns reserve estimation methodology in 2006 and 2007.

12. In connection with a 2008 inspection of E&Y's audits of Medicis, the PCAOB inspection staff questioned E&Y's acceptance of Medicis's use of replacement cost to calculate its returns reserve. After the PCAOB staff questioning, E&Y's National Accounting Group determined that Medicis's use of replacement cost was not appropriate. Additionally, E&Y made internal inquiries of audit partners in relevant practice groups to determine whether any of its other audit clients or other pharmaceutical companies reserved for product returns at replacement cost. E&Y was unable to identify any other comparable companies that accounted for their returns reserve as Medicis did. Ultimately, E&Y concluded that Medicis's reserving at replacement cost was not in conformity with GAAP and the Company was required to restate its accounting for its returns reserve.

13. On November 10, 2008, Medicis filed with the Commission an amended annual report on Form 10-K/A, restating the Company's financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2007 and 2006, the six months ended December 31, 2005, and the fiscal year ended June 30, 2005. In the restatement, Medicis's returns reserve increased $94.6 million (585%) as of December 31, 2005, $52.1 million (148%) as of December 31, 2006, and $58.9 million (600%) as of December 31, 2007. Medicis's restated financial statements for the foregoing periods and issued an audit report dated November 6, 2008, in which E&Y expressed an unqualified opinion that the restated financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Medicis's financial position and results of operations in conformity with GAAP.

D. Background

Medicis's Policy of Providing Customers With a Right to Return Expired Product for Which They Would Receive a Full Credit for the Sales Price

14. At all relevant times, Medicis sold pharmaceutical products that were time-dated. Medicis primarily sold its products to wholesale distributors and retail chain drug stores, which resold Medicis's products to others. Medicis's standard "Return Goods Policy," in effect at all relevant times, gave customers the right to return product if the product was returned within four or six months before expiration or up to 12 months after expiration (collectively, "expired product"). The majority of the Company's products had a shelf life of 18 to 24 months.

15. When customers returned expired product, Medicis's Return Goods Policy provided that Medicis would give customers a full credit by issuing a credit memo in the amount of "the original purchase price or pricing one (1) year prior to the date the warehouse receives the return."

16. The Return Goods Policy did not require customers to purchase the same or similar product as a condition of receiving or using a credit from Medicis for returning expired product. Medicis's customers, however, routinely applied return credits to purchases of the same or similar products as the products that were returned due to expiry. Moreover, most subsequent purchases occurred during the same quarter in which the return credit was issued.

Medicis's Revenue Recognition and Returns Reserve and Applicable GAAP

17. At all relevant times, SFAS 48 applied to Medicis's revenue recognition for its product sales because Medicis gave its customers the right to return expired product. Under SFAS 48, a company, which sells product subject to a right to return, may recognize revenue from those sales transactions at the time of sale only if certain conditions, including the ability to estimate the amount of future returns, are met.[11/] If those conditions are not met, revenue recognition must be postponed. If they are met, sales revenue and cost of sales reported in the income statement must be reduced to reflect estimated returns.[12/]

18. At all relevant times, Medicis represented to E&Y that it recognized product revenue at the time of sale in accordance with SFAS 48. Because its customers had the right to return expired product, Medicis also recorded estimates of future product returns at the time of sale. Medicis used these estimates to establish a sales returns reserve that reduced revenue reported in its financial statements.

19. For accounting purposes, Medicis referred to product returns where the customer used the return credit to purchase, in whole or in part, the same or similar product in the same quarter in which the return occurred as "returns replaced in quarter" or "returns replaced." Expired product returns where the return credit was used in subsequent quarters for purchases of different product or the same or similar product were referred to as "returns not replaced in quarter" or "returns not replaced." For its sales returns reserve, Medicis reserved for returns replaced at replacement cost and returns not replaced at gross sales price. Medicis's Return Goods Policy did not distinguish between returns replaced and returns not replaced. To the contrary, under Medicis's business policy, customers received a full credit in the amount of the gross sales price for product returns regardless of when customers used their credit to buy "replacement product."

20. At all relevant times, 97% of all of Medicis's product returns were for expired products, and returns replaced were the predominant share of expired product returns. For example, in performing the 2006 audit, the E&Y engagement team determined that "approximately 72% of all expired products returned were replaced in the same quarter" during 2006.

21. The audit evidence obtained by Respondents indicated that SFAS 48 applied and that Medicis needed to reserve for estimated returns due to expiry at gross sales price with an offsetting reduction to revenue. By reserving at replacement cost for most of its estimated returns, Medicis recorded its 85% gross margin as revenue at the time of sale even though it would issue a credit for the gross sales price when the product was eventually returned months or years later. Audit evidence obtained by Respondents indicated that reserving at replacement cost, and not at gross sales price, had a material impact on Medicis's returns reserve estimate. For example, information contained in E&Y's 2005 audit work papers demonstrated that, if Medicis reserved for all estimated returns at gross sales price versus using both gross sales price and replacement cost, Medicis's reserve would have increased by over $54 million.

ORDER

22. As discussed in more detail below, over the relevant time period, Medicis's accounting rationale supporting reserving for returns replaced in quarter at replacement cost and its methodology for calculating its returns reserve changed significantly. Specifically, in 2005, Medicis relied on the exchange exception in footnote 3 of SFAS 48 to support replacement cost, but, in 2006, Anderson, Thibault, and other E&Y personnel concluded in the Product Returns Consultation that an analogy to warranty accounting supported the use of replacement cost to reserve for product returns. Medicis, with E&Y's concurrence, thereafter utilized the warranty analogy to support the continued use of replacement cost in establishing its sales returns reserve. Additionally, beginning at year-end 2006, Medicis applied a different reserve methodology that relied on significant assumptions that were inconsistent with Medicis's historical return patterns. Respondents failed to comply with PCAOB standards in evaluating and accepting Medicis's returns reserve accounting policies and estimation methodologies during the relevant audits.

E. Respondents Failed to Comply with Certain PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

23. Under PCAOB auditing standards, an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards. Among other things, these standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[13/] Respondents failed to comply with these and other standards in connection with the 2005, 2006, and 2007 Medicis audits, and the Product Returns Consultation stemming from the 2006 AQR.

The December 31, 2005 Audit

24. E&Y audited Medicis's financial statements for the six month transition period-ended December 31, 2005 and issued an unqualified opinion that the financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Medicis's financial position and results of operations in conformity with GAAP. Anderson led the audit and authorized the issuance of E&Y's audit report. Butler was supervised by Anderson and acted as second partner on the audit. Thibault was independent review partner (i.e., concurring review partner) for the audit.

ORDER

25. During the six months ended December 31, 2005, Medicis's internally documented accounting policy relied on footnote 3 of SFAS 48 to support the use of replacement cost for estimated returns replaced. Footnote 3 creates an exception to the general rule of reserving for expected future product returns at the gross sales price and deferring the recognition of an equal amount of revenue. Specifically, footnote 3 of SFAS 48 provides:

> Exchanges by ultimate customers of one item for another of the same kind, quality, and price (for example, one color or size for another) are not considered returns for purposes of this Statement.

26. In performing the audit of Medicis's financial statements for the six months ended December 31, 2005, Anderson, Thibault,[14/] and Butler violated PCAOB standards by accepting Medicis's conclusion that the exchange exception to SFAS 48 supported reserving for estimated returns replaced at replacement cost.

27. At the time of the December 31, 2005 audit, Anderson, Thibault, and Butler were aware that Medicis made the majority of its product sales to resellers, not "ultimate customers." They knew or should have known that Medicis's returns were not returns of products in exchange for products of "the same kind, quality, and price," as required by footnote 3. Rather, Medicis's returns were of unsalable product for which a credit equal to the original gross sales price was issued. Moreover, the credit received was often applied to the purchase of new product priced differently from the original gross sales price of the returned product.

28. Anderson, Thibault, and Butler's acceptance of Medicis's reliance on footnote 3 of SFAS 48 not only conflicted with the plain language of the exchange exception, it also conflicted with E&Y's internal accounting literature. Specifically, E&Y's internal guidance stated:

> "[E]xchange" transactions, as defined in footnote 3 of Statement 48, are limited to transactions with the "ultimate customer" and not the reseller as demonstrated in the following examples:
> * * *
> 2. Returns by resellers for later versions of the same product (i.e. software and other computer or technology related products) should be accounted for as a right-of-return. Exchange accounting would not apply to a reseller in any situation.

3. Arrangements where vendors only allow returns for credits against future purchases and returns for other products fall within the scope of a sale with a right-of-return, as opposed to an "exchange." The fact that there will not be a net reduction in revenue after the sale of the first product is not relevant; the first product is, in fact, being returned.

4. A common example of an exchange with the ultimate customer is one when a consumer exchanges a red sweater for a blue sweater.

29. Although Anderson, Thibault, and Butler knew that Medicis reserved for returns replaced at replacement cost and for returns not replaced at gross sales price, they failed to adequately consider whether Medicis needed to disclose this practice in its financial statements for the six months ended December 31, 2005, and the notes thereto.[15/] They also knew that Medicis relied on footnote 3 of SFAS 48, but failed to adequately consider whether this reliance should be disclosed by Medicis in its financial statements.

30. For the reasons given above, Anderson, Thibault, and Butler failed to obtain, or ensure the performance of procedures to obtain, sufficient competent evidential matter supporting the conclusion that estimated returns replaced were eligible for the exchange exception to SFAS 48. They were aware of contradictory audit evidence indicating that returns replaced were not eligible for the exchange exception to

While use of replacement cost for returns replaced was neither supported by the audit evidence obtained nor consistent with GAAP, even if Anderson, Thibault, and Butler had properly concluded that it was, PCAOB standards required them to consider whether Medicis needed to disclose the policy in its financial statements, which they failed to do. The 2006 E&Y Audit Quality Review of the December 31, 2005 Audit

32. In May 2006, the December 31, 2005 Medicis audit was the subject of an E&Y AQR. The AQR program was administered and overseen at a National Office level within E&Y and was part of E&Y's system of quality controls and procedures. AQRs were, among other things, designed to identify any deficiencies in selected E&Y audits and to require engagement teams to remediate such deficiencies. In this instance, the AQR appropriately identified the 2005 audit team's acceptance of Medicis's reliance on the exchange exception to SFAS 48 to justify the use of replacement cost as a deficiency. However, rather than appropriately remediating the deficiency by requiring Medicis to reserve for all returns at gross sales price, Anderson, Thibault, and other E&Y personnel concluded that a new equally deficient rationale supported Medicis's continued use of replacement cost.[18/]

33. The E&Y personnel responsible for the AQR had no prior involvement with the Medicis engagement. The AQR identified Medicis's use of the exchange exception to SFAS 48 for product returns as a potential AQR finding, and asked the engagement team to consider whether Medicis's reliance on footnote 3 of SFAS 48 to reserve for returns replaced in quarter at replacement cost complied with GAAP.

34. By e-mail message dated May 9, 2006, the AQR Team Leader informed a representative of E&Y's National AQR group (the "National AQR Member") as follows:

16/ See AU § 333.04; AU § 326.25.

18/ Thibault served in a National office role as a consulting resource even though he was also the independent review partner for the 2005 audit. While firm guidelines allowed him to serve in both roles at the time, E&Y's consultation policy and guidelines no longer permit personnel to do so.

> [Medicis] applies the exchange provisions of SFAS 48 which provides that for estimated exchanges of a product for a similar product, the reserve should only be for the cost related to the return and not for the sales value of the product returned. In the case of Medicis, the margins are huge, so the difference in reserving sales value as a return vs. cost as an exchange is material … SFAS 48 specifically precludes exchange accounting for sales to resellers, and also is clear that the exchange must be for a similar item with the same functionality (e.g. a red sweater for a blue sweater). In this case, the sales are to resellers and the customers are exchanging expired products with no use/functionality with new, unexpired products with full use/functionality.
> I have not discussed this with the partners on the engagement yet, as I wanted to discuss with you and determine if we need to get National PPD [Professional Practice Director] involved. There was no technical memo with PPD approval on this, however, this issue was in the SRM [Summary Review Memorandum] and the IRP [Independent Review Partner Thibault] is the Area PPD.

[Emphasis added.]

35. On or about May 12, 2006, E&Y personnel took part in a consultation regarding the sales returns reserve issue that arose in the AQR (the Product Returns Consultation). The participants included, among others, Anderson, Thibault (in his National Office role), and another National Office partner. Butler did not participate in the Product Returns Consultation.

36. The participants in the Product Returns Consultation determined that Medicis's reserving for returns replaced in quarter at replacement cost could not be supported by the exchange exception, but could be supported by reference or analogy to warranty accounting under SFAS 5. On or shortly after May 12, 2006, E&Y's National Director of Area Professional Practice orally concurred with the warranty accounting rationale.

37. Information available to the E&Y personnel participating in the Product Returns Consultation showed that returns replaced were not analogous to a warranty, as they did not involve returns of products that were defective or failed to meet their specifications, pursuant to a product warranty. Instead, the returns to Medicis were solely due to expiry.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

38. The participants in the Product Returns Consultation accepted the analogy to warranty accounting without adequately considering whether such a rationale had general acceptance and was appropriate in the circumstances.[19/]

39. Having concluded that the exchange exception to SFAS 48 did not apply to returns replaced in quarter, Anderson, Thibault, and the E&Y personnel who participated in the Product Returns Consultation failed to appropriately address why they believed SFAS 48 itself did not require full gross sales price deferral when revenue was recognized on Medicis's product sales subject to a right to return the product. Indeed, before reaching a conclusion that an analogy to warranty accounting was appropriate, they needed to address why they believed SFAS 48 itself did not require full gross sales price deferral. However, they neglected to gather appropriate evidence to support a conclusion that SFAS 48 itself did not require full gross sales price deferral and disregarded significant audit evidence to the contrary.

40. A consultation memorandum regarding the warranty accounting rationale (the "Consultation Memorandum") was prepared on or about May 12, 2006. The Consultation Memorandum was reviewed by Anderson and signed by him on May 15, 2006. Thibault, in his National Office role, also reviewed and approved the Consultation Memorandum and signed it on May 16, 2006.

41. The Consultation Memorandum stated in part:

> By allowing its customers to send back expired product the Company is essentially offering a "warranty" on products sold. This means that the economic cost to the Company of "guaranteeing freshness" of the product is the cost basis of the product.

42. This statement was contradicted by E&Y's internal accounting guidance, with which Respondents were familiar, which provided: "Warranty provisions differ from right-of-return provisions because the ultimate customer is returning a defective product."

43. The Consultation Memorandum provided that returns replaced in quarter were reserved for differently than returns replaced in subsequent quarters, but failed to address why different accounting for the returns was appropriate for sales made of the same products to the same distributors under the same returns policies. In fact, the Consultation Memorandum stated that "[p]ast experience has shown that the majority of expired products returned are replaced by customers in the same quarter with the balance almost always replaced through orders in the subsequent quarter." The memorandum failed to provide any authoritative basis for accounting for the returns differently.

44. The Consultation Memorandum also failed to address the applicability of SFAS 48. For example, it did not address that SFAS 48 applies where "product may be returned … for a credit applied to amounts owed or to be owed for other purchases, or in exchange for other products."[20/] Moreover, the Memorandum was silent as to SFAS 48 specifically excluding "sales transactions in which a customer may return defective goods, such as under warranty provisions," but not returns due to expiry.[21/] Nor did the Memorandum address SFAS 48, Appendix A, ¶ 13, which makes clear that SFAS 48 applies to circumstances in which a "customer has not been able to resell the product to another party."

45. When Anderson and Thibault signed the Consultation Memorandum, and when Butler reviewed it, they knew that the warranty accounting rationale set forth in the Consultation Memorandum differed from Medicis's rationale that the SFAS 48 exchange exception supported reserving for returns replaced in quarter at replacement cost during the six months ended December 31, 2005. Only two months before, Anderson, Thibault, and Butler had concurred with the SFAS 48 exchange exception in connection with the December 31, 2005 audit.

46. While E&Y, Anderson, Thibault, and other E&Y personnel accepted the warranty analogy to resolve the deficiency identified during the 2006 AQR, upon receiving the Consultation Memorandum, the AQR Team Leader sent an e-mail dated June 1, 2006 to the National AQR Member, with a copy to the AQR Reviewer, forwarding the Consultation Memorandum and stating as follows:

> Are you guys available to discuss this? While the memo is factually correct, it is quite different than the Company's policy, which assessed this issue based on exchange accounting, and not as a warranty. The memo does not even mention SFAS 48, which is what the Company's internal accounting policy is based on, and what the audit workpapers include. It's as if we are saying the client got the accounting right, but for the totally wrong reason and rationale.

> [National E&Y AQR Member], we probably need some guidance on this. Also, I thought it was understood that there would be PPD sign off, and it sure seems like this is a new policy, or at least a policy the company never knew it was following.[22/]

47. During the December 31, 2005 audit and at the time of the 2006 AQR, Medicis had no documentation setting forth a warranty accounting rationale for reserving at replacement cost. E&Y did not inform Medicis of the warranty accounting rationale for reserving at replacement cost before E&Y concluded that the rationale was appropriate. It was not until the 2006 audit procedures (performed in the first quarter of 2007) that Medicis provided E&Y with any documentation setting forth a warranty accounting rationale for reserving at replacement cost.

48. Anderson, Thibault, and Butler added the Consultation Memorandum to E&Y's audit documentation for the December 31, 2005 Medicis audit. Butler wrote a memorandum to the audit file, dated June 29, 2006, that he and Anderson signed, explaining the addition of the Consultation Memorandum to the audit documentation. Anderson, Thibault, and Butler knew that Medicis's accounting for product returns remained the same due to Medicis's application of the warranty accounting rationale. They also knew or should have known that if replacement cost could not be supported by an appropriate accounting basis, Medicis would have to reserve for returns replaced in quarter at the gross sales price, and reduce revenue accordingly, pursuant to SFAS 48. Finally, they knew or should have known that such a change would have had a material effect on Medicis's financial statements and required it to restate its December 31, 2005 financial statements.

49. A final 2006 AQR findings report was issued and transmitted to E&Y's National AQR group. The report was signed by Anderson on July 6, 2006 and also signed by members of the AQR team. The report found that Medicis's use of footnote 3 to SFAS 48 to justify reserving at replacement cost was not appropriate because "the company's customers are distributors (i.e. resellers), and returned goods are medicines near or beyond the expiration date, while replacement goods are the same medicines significantly prior to the expiration date." The report also found that "the company's disclosures in the footnotes are not transparent/complete regarding its policy by indicating that 'exchanges for expired product are established as a reduction of product sales revenues at the time such revenues are recognized.'"

22/ There is no evidence how, if at all, E&Y responded to the concerns expressed by the AQR Team Leader in his June 1, 2006 e-mail to the National AQR Member.

50. Butler made a presentation concerning the 2006 AQR and the Product Returns Consultation to the Audit Committee of Medicis on July 10, 2006 and explained that the exchange exception to SFAS 48 did not apply to Medicis's returns replaced in quarter. No explanation was given as to why SFAS 48 did not require a full gross sales price deferral for returns replaced in quarter. Nor was any such explanation shared with the Audit Committee prior to issuance of E&Y's 2006 audit report dated February 26, 2007.

51. At the time of the Product Returns Consultation, Anderson, Thibault, and Butler knew or should have known that Medicis's reserving for returns replaced in quarter at replacement cost was not prescribed by any GAAP literature identified in AU § 411, The Meaning of Present Fairly in Conformity With Generally Accepted Accounting Principles.

52. At the time of the Product Returns Consultation, Anderson, Thibault, and Butler knew that Medicis's disclosure in its December 31, 2005 Form 10-K/T, regarding its usage of SFAS 48 to account for product returns, differed from the warranty accounting rationale. Despite this knowledge, they failed to appropriately re-assess the adequacy of the disclosures in the December 31, 2005 financial statements; failed to appropriately re-assess whether E&Y's previously issued unqualified audit opinion on the December 31, 2005 financial statements remained appropriate; and failed to adequately consider whether any action was required to safeguard against future reliance on E&Y's audit report on the December 31, 2005 financial statements.[23/]

The December 31, 2006 Audit

53. E&Y audited Medicis's financial statements for the year-ended December 31, 2006 and issued an unqualified opinion that the financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Medicis's financial position and results of operations in conformity with GAAP. Butler led the audit and authorized the issuance of E&Y's audit report.[24/] Thibault was independent review partner for the audit.

54. During 2006, Medicis continued to rely on the analogy to warranty accounting to support its sales returns reserve estimate but developed a new methodology, at year end, to estimate the sales return reserve for newer products. As a result of over $17 million of unexpected returns during the fourth quarter of 2006, Medicis significantly changed its methodology for calculating its year-end returns reserve estimate. With Butler and Thibault's consultation and concurrence, Medicis implemented a new methodology for determining its sales returns reserve for a portion of its expired product returns.

55. At year end, Medicis broke its reserve into two categories: (1) products launched within the last four years ("non-legacy products") and (2) products launched more than four years earlier ("legacy products"). For legacy products, Medicis used the same methodology as in 2005 which utilized historical return rates and lag times and reserved for returns replaced at replacement cost ("historical method"). For non-legacy products, the returns reserve was based on estimating the total units of inventory in the distribution and retail channels and comparing that total estimate to an estimate of the units of inventory in the channels that would not be returned for expiry due to product demand. Medicis reserved for the difference between these two estimates at gross sales price. This methodology was based on several new key assumptions not considered under the historical method. (The new methodology is hereinafter referred to as the "units-in-channel methodology" or "units-in-channel method").

Failure to Appropriately Audit the Legacy Returns Reserve Estimate

56. As part of the 2006 year-end audit procedures, Medicis prepared a memorandum dated March 1, 2007, documenting its reliance on the SFAS 5 warranty accounting rationale, as determined in the Product Returns Consultation, as support for reserving for legacy product returns replaced at replacement cost under the historical method. Butler and Thibault concurred with Medicis's reliance on the warranty accounting rationale and incorporated this memorandum into the work papers for the December 31, 2006 audit. In performing the audit, Butler and Thibault failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter supporting the conclusion that an analogy to warranty accounting supported reserving for legacy product returns replaced at replacement cost and was an appropriate application of GAAP.

57. Butler and Thibault knew or should have known that the application of warranty accounting to legacy product returns was not prescribed by any GAAP literature identified in AU § 411.

58. Based on the audit evidence available to them in performing the December 31, 2006 audit, Butler and Thibault knew or should have known that reserving for returns at gross sales price (whether replaced in quarter or otherwise), and reducing revenue accordingly was the generally accepted accounting treatment pursuant to SFAS 48.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

59. In performing the 2006 audit, Butler and Thibault failed to adequately consider whether Medicis needed to disclose in its Form 10-K: (1) its practice of reserving for legacy returns replaced in quarter at replacement cost; (2) its reliance on a warranty accounting rationale as support for that accounting practice; and (3) its change from relying on the SFAS 48 exchange exception to an analogy to SFAS 5 warranty accounting.[25/]

Failure to Appropriately Audit the Units-In-Channel Non-Legacy Returns Reserve Estimate

60. During 2006, Butler encouraged Medicis's management to improve its sales returns reserve estimation process. As a result of the fourth quarter material unforeseen returns, consistent with Butler's prior encouragement, management incorporated new information into its reserve methodology. Specifically, for the first time management considered channel inventory information and forecasted prescription ("script") demand data in its returns reserve methodology. However, instead of incorporating this data into its existing methodology that considered historical returns experience, Medicis developed the units-in-channel methodology.

61. To calculate the returns reserve for non-legacy products under the units-in-channel methodology, management had to estimate (1) future product demand, (2) actual inventory levels in the channel, and (3) the level of inventory in the channel below which returns would not occur. PCAOB standards required E&Y and Butler to obtain and evaluate sufficient competent evidential matter to support Medicis's significant accounting estimates, including its non-legacy returns reserve estimate.[26/] Butler, however, failed to perform, or ensure the performance of, sufficient audit procedures to support the reasonableness of key assumptions underlying management's units-in-channel methodology, including the level of inventory in the channel below which management assumed returns would not occur.[27/] Consequently, they did not obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support the returns reserve estimate calculated by the units-in-channel methodology.

[25/] See AU § 420, Consistency of Application of Generally Accepted Accounting Principles; AU § 431. The failure to adequately consider the sufficiency of the disclosure was exacerbated by the fact that, in connection with the 2006 AQR, E&Y developed an "Action Plan" which stated, in part, that "the Company's disclosures in future filings with the SEC . . . should include even greater transparency in the accounting for such returns."

62. Management concluded that 12 weeks of projected script demand was the appropriate level of inventory in the channel ("the 12-week assumption"). In other words, management assumed that no returns would occur if channel inventory levels were below 12 weeks of total forecasted script demand. Management premised their 12-week assumption on eight weeks of inventory in the wholesale distribution channel and four weeks of inventory in the retail channel. The greater the number of weeks of inventory that management assumed was appropriately in the channel, the smaller its reserve — and the smaller the reduction to net revenue reported in the income statement.

63. Butler concluded that the 12-week assumption was reasonable based primarily on discussions with E&Y personnel and management's representation that Medicis's use of contract manufacturers caused production lead times to be up to 20 weeks. Butler knew or should have known that such evidence did not support the assumption that all sales below 12 weeks of script demand would not be returned. Butler failed to appropriately consider, or gather sufficient evidence to support, the contention that manufacturing lead times were a relevant factor in determining if a product in the channel was likely to be returned for expiry.[28/] Additionally, Butler was aware of audit evidence indicating that 12 weeks of channel inventory was above industry average and that, as documented in the work papers, each additional week of channel inventory assumed not to be returned decreased the estimated returns reserve by approximately $4.2 million.[29/] Butler was also aware that Medicis had not previously tracked the amount of inventory in the distribution channel, so there was no historical evidence against which to compare the 12-week assumption. Notwithstanding these facts, Butler failed to obtain sufficient competent evidence supporting that 12 weeks was a reasonable estimate for this key assumption.[30/]

64. A work paper reviewed by Butler contained information showing that the combined legacy and non-legacy reserve was approximately 10% ($3.4 million) larger than if the Company had continued to use its historical methodology at December 31, 2006 (i.e., the methodology that priced the majority of reserved units at replacement cost instead of at gross sales price). Butler knew or should have known that this work paper did not provide evidence supporting the reasonableness of the units-in-channel methodology and that, if all returns under the historical method calculation had been reserved for at gross sales price as in the units-in-channel calculation, the reserve would have been materially higher due to the significant difference between cost and sales price resulting from Medicis's 85% gross margins on product sales.

65. In performing the 2006 audit, Butler failed to adequately consider whether Medicis needed to disclose in its Form 10-K its change to the units-in-channel methodology for non-legacy product returns.[31/]

66. As a result of E&Y, Butler, and Thibault's failure to comply with PCAOB standards, Butler, with Thibault's review and approval, improperly authorized the issuance of E&Y's audit report dated February 26, 2007, on Medicis's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2006, which incorrectly expressed an unqualified opinion that the financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Medicis's financial position and results of operations in conformity with GAAP.[32/]

The December 31, 2007 Audit

67. E&Y audited Medicis's financial statements for the year-ended December 31, 2007 and issued an unqualified opinion that the financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Medicis's financial position and results of operations in conformity with GAAP. Anderson led the audit and authorized the issuance of E&Y's audit report. Christie was supervised by Anderson and acted as second partner on the audit.

68. Over the course of 2007, Medicis continued to change how it estimated its sales returns reserve estimate. For the first two quarters, it developed the estimate as it had at 2006 year-end – by using units-in-channel for non-legacy products and the historical method for legacy products.

69. In the third quarter of 2007, Medicis began reserving for all estimated returns under the units-in-channel methodology. Thus, for the first time, Medicis reserved for all returns at gross sales price. However, like at year-end 2006, Medicis compared the reserve estimate calculated under both the units-in-channel and historical methodologies to determine if the transition was appropriate. The historical method produced a legacy product reserve 81% higher than the units-in-channel method —

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

even though the historical method reserved for most estimated legacy returns at replacement cost instead of gross sales price. The fact that the historical method at replacement cost produced a reserve nearly double the units-in-channel method at gross sales price should have caused Anderson and Christie to question the continued reasonableness of the units-in-channel methodology. Instead, based on this comparison, they accepted management's decision to record a reserve equal to the mid-point between the two estimates at September 30, 2007.

70. At year-end, due in part to the comparison done at September 30, 2007, with the concurrence of Anderson and Christie, Medicis used only the units-in-channel methodology for developing its returns reserve estimate. The units-in-channel methodology resulted in a reserve of $9.6 million at December 31, 2007 – a 70% decline from the reserve recorded at December 31, 2006.

71. In addition, as shown in the audit work papers, Anderson and Christie knew that the December 31, 2006 returns reserve of $35.2 million – which was intended to cover approximately 18 months worth of future returns – was insufficient to cover the 12 months of 2007 returns alone, which totaled $53.8 million at gross sales price. And, management's December 31, 2007 returns reserve of $9.6 million was less than the actual returns in the fourth quarter of 2007 alone. PCAOB standards required E&Y, Anderson, and Christie to consider these facts and, to the extent management believed its historical return pattern would not continue, obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support the reasonableness of the year-end reserve estimate.[33/] Anderson and Christie failed to comply with this requirement.

Failure to Adequately Test Management's 12-Week Assumption

72. In performing the audit, Anderson and Christie failed to adequately test or ensure the performance of audit procedures to test management's estimate that 12 weeks of product inventory in the distribution channel was an appropriate estimate of the number of units of product not likely to be returned. Instead, the engagement team relied on management's representation that the 12-week assumption was appropriate and on the prior year audit team's insufficiently supported acceptance of the 12-week assumption as the basis for the continued use of the assumption in 2007.

73. As noted above, Anderson and Christie knew or should have known that the December 31, 2006 reserve estimate had proven not to be sufficient to cover anticipated returns. Moreover, they knew that the third quarter comparison between the historical and units-in-channel methodologies showed that the units-in-channel

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

methodology produced a materially lower reserve estimate for legacy products even though it was based on gross sales price. These facts required Anderson and Christie to obtain additional audit evidence supporting the 12-week assumption, but they failed to do so.[34/]

Failure to Adequately Test Management's Retail Inventory Estimate

74. Anderson and Christie were aware that management did not have access to data concerning the level of product inventory in the retail distribution channel at December 31, 2007. They also knew that management estimated how much inventory was in the retail channel by assuming that all retail customers had 30 days of inventory on hand of each Medicis product. Anderson and Christie failed to perform any procedures or gather any evidence to assess the reasonableness of this assumption in violation of PCAOB standards.

75. In performing the audit, Anderson and Christie also failed to adequately evaluate whether Medicis's adoption of the units-in-channel methodology for legacy product returns required disclosure.[35/]

76. As a result of E&Y, Anderson, and Christie's failure to comply with PCAOB standards, Anderson, with Christie's review and approval, improperly authorized the issuance of E&Y's audit report dated February 26, 2008, on Medicis's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2007, which incorrectly expressed an unqualified opinion that the financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, Medicis's financial position and results of operations in conformity with GAAP.[36/]

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. The Board, in determining the appropriate sanctions as to E&Y, has taken into account the undertakings E&Y previously agreed to in the settlement of an unrelated Securities and Exchange Commission administrative proceeding. Those undertakings would have prohibited the independent review partner from participating in

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Brock, Schechter & Polakoff, LLP, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2012-002 May 22, 2012

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (the "Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Brock, Schechter & Polakoff, LLP ("BSP," or "Respondent"), revoking BSP's registration, and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $20,000 upon BSP.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that BSP violated PCAOB rules, quality control standards, and auditing standards, in connection with the audits of three China-based and Taiwan-based issuer clients.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against BSP.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement (the "Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary

ORDER

Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions (the "Order") as set forth below.[2/]

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[3/] that:

A. Respondent

1. BSP is, and at all relevant times was, a public accounting firm organized as a limited liability partnership under the laws of the State of New York, and headquartered in Buffalo, New York. BSP is licensed by the New York State Education Department (License No. 074249). BSP is, and at all relevant times was, registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules. At all relevant times, BSP was the independent auditor for each of the issuers identified in paragraph two, below.

B. Summary

2. This matter concerns BSP's failures to comply with PCAOB quality control standards. BSP failed to develop policies and procedures sufficient to provide it with reasonable assurance that the firm undertook only those public company audit engagements that it reasonably could expect to complete with professional competence. In 2006, BSP began auditing the financial statements of public companies located in the Republic of China ("Taiwan") and the People's Republic of China ("China"). At that time, BSP had no prior experience auditing public companies pursuant to PCAOB auditing standards, and BSP had no prior experience auditing

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[3/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondent in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

companies based in Taiwan or China. Despite BSP's lack of professional staff with relevant training or experience, BSP accepted engagements to audit: (1) the 2006 through 2008 financial statements of Kid Castle Educational Corporation ("Kid Castle"), (2) the 2007 financial statements of China Junlian Integrated Surveillance, Inc. ("China Junlian"), (3) the 2008 financial statements of North American Gaming & Entertainment Corporation ("North American Gaming"), and (4) North American Gaming's internal controls over financial reporting ("ICFR") as of December 31, 2008 (collectively, the "Audits").

3. BSP also failed to develop quality control policies and procedures sufficient to ensure that the audit personnel assigned to work on public company audit engagements, including the auditor with final responsibility, possessed the degree of technical training and proficiency required to fulfill their engagement responsibilities. Finally, BSP's monitoring program, which failed to select any of BSP's public company audit engagements for review, was insufficient to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that its system of quality control was effective at assessing whether the firm's audits were performed in compliance with applicable professional standards.

4. This matter also involves BSP's failure to comply with PCAOB auditing standards related to the planning, performance, and supervision of the Audits. BSP failed to gather sufficient competent evidential matter, and failed to use due care and to exercise professional skepticism in the course of the Audits. The Audits were planned and performed by two other audit firms, one located in Taiwan (the "Taiwan Firm") and one located in China (the "China Firm") (collectively, the "Foreign Firms"),[4/] not by BSP. During the Audits, BSP had minimal contact with the Foreign Firms, and performed an inadequate review of the working papers prepared by the Foreign Firms.

5. Finally, this matter concerns BSP's failure to comply with Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS3"), by failing to ensure that it obtained and reviewed engagement completion documents from the Foreign Firms prior to issuing audit reports.

[4/] Both of the Foreign Firms are registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules.

C. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Quality Control Standards.

6. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm comply with certain quality control standards.[5/] PCAOB quality control standards require that a registered public accounting firm "shall have a system of quality control for its accounting and auditing practice."[6/] PCAOB quality control standards state that policies and procedures "should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality."[7/] A firm's policies and procedures should provide reasonable assurance that the firm undertakes "only those engagements that the firm can reasonably expect to be completed with professional competence."[8/] Policies and procedures, as well, should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that work "is assigned to personnel having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances."[9/] Finally, PCAOB quality control standards provide that policies and procedures "should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that the policies and procedures established by the firm for each of the other elements of quality control . . . are suitably designed and are being effectively applied."[10/] As detailed below, BSP failed to comply with PCAOB quality control standards in connection with the Audits.

BSP Agrees to Audit Taiwan-Based and China-Based Issuers

7. In May 2006, the Foreign Firms solicited several U.S.-based auditing firms, including BSP, to work with the Foreign Firms in auditing the financial statements of Taiwan-based and China-based issuers. Neither BSP nor any of its professional staff had any prior experience working with the Foreign Firms when BSP responded to the solicitations. The Foreign Firms proposed that they would perform all of the audit field work, but that BSP would issue the audit reports.

8. After being approached by the Foreign Firms, BSP's Director of Accounting and Auditing, James R. Waggoner,[11/] and BSP's managing partner traveled to China and Taiwan to meet with the Foreign Firms. These meetings—conducted over a 10-day, multi-city trip—were introductory in nature. BSP representatives discussed business opportunities with the Foreign Firms, and discussed how the Foreign Firms and BSP would divide responsibility for completing audits. BSP and the Taiwan Firm also met with representatives of Kid Castle.

9. The partners of BSP, nonetheless, agreed that the firm could accept audit engagements in which the Foreign Firms would perform all of the audit field work, and BSP would issue the audit opinions based on the audit work of the Foreign Firms. BSP determined to accept these engagements despite the fact that BSP had no professional staff with: (1) experience auditing the financial statements of issuers under PCAOB auditing standards; (2) experience auditing companies based in Taiwan and China; or (3) the ability to understand or communicate in Chinese.

Engagement Acceptance

10. As stated above, at the time that BSP and its partners determined to accept audit engagements for public companies based in Taiwan and China, BSP lacked any professional staff with training or experience in conducting public company audits pursuant to PCAOB standards. BSP did nothing to provide relevant training to its existing staff, and it did not hire additional staff with the necessary training or experience. BSP's policies and procedures did not provide reasonable assurance that the firm undertook only engagements that the firm could reasonably expect to be completed with professional competence.[12/]

Personnel Management

11. BSP assigned Waggoner to serve as the practitioner-in-charge of the Audits. BSP understood, prior to the firm accepting the Kid Castle, China Junlian, and North American Gaming audit engagements, that Waggoner had never audited a public company. BSP understood that Waggoner had no experience or training in auditing public companies under PCAOB auditing standards. BSP also understood that Waggoner had no experience or training in performing an ICFR audit.

12. BSP did not provide Waggoner with relevant training.[13/] BSP also did not provide Waggoner with professional staff possessing relevant training or experience.[14/] BSP's quality control policies and procedures were not adequate to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that (a) the practitioner-in-charge of the Audits possessed the competencies necessary to fulfill his engagement responsibilities, and (b) work was assigned to personnel having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances.[15/]

Monitoring Procedures

13. One element of quality control is monitoring, to provide a firm with reasonable assurance "that its system of quality control is effective."[16/] Monitoring procedures may include preissuance or postissuance reviews of selected audit engagements.[17/] As part of its quality control system, BSP participated in a peer review program every three years, and it also conducted its own internal postissuance reviews of selected audit engagements in years that were not subject to peer review. The firm's internal review program was administered by Waggoner in his capacity as BSP's Director of Accounting and Auditing. The Accounting and Auditing committee, under Waggoner's leadership, was also responsible for providing information to the audit firm that performed BSP's peer reviews.

14. Despite the fact that the Kid Castle, China Junlian and North American Gaming audits were BSP's first audit engagements subject to PCAOB auditing standards, and despite the fact that these audits were BSP's first audit engagements for companies with operations in China and Taiwan, none of these Audits were selected for review either in BSP's internal review program or during peer reviews. BSP understood that BSP's postissuance review and peer review programs were not selecting any of these audits for review. The same person who was serving as the auditor with final responsibility for the Audits, Waggoner, also was administering BSP's postissuance review program, and leading the committee that interacted with BSP's peer reviewers. BSP's monitoring procedures did not enable the firm to obtain reasonable assurance that its system of quality control was effective.[18/]

D. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards in Connection With the Audits.

15. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[19/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[20/] Among other things, PCAOB standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[21/]

16. PCAOB auditing standards in effect at the time of the Audits also required that an audit be adequately planned and that assistants be properly supervised.[22/] "Supervision involves directing the efforts of assistants who are involved in accomplishing the objectives of the audit and determining whether those objectives were accomplished. Elements of supervision include instructing assistants, keeping informed of significant problems encountered, reviewing the work performed, and dealing with differences of opinion among firm personnel."[23/] As detailed below, BSP failed to comply with these standards in connection with the Audits.

Audits of Kid Castle's 2006-2008 Financial Statements

17. At all relevant times, Kid Castle was a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Florida, with its headquarters in Taipei, Taiwan. As disclosed in its public filings, Kid Castle was a provider of English-language instruction and educational services to children for whom Chinese is the child's primary language. At all relevant times, Kid Castle was required to file periodic reports with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"), and its shares were traded on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. At all relevant times, Kid Castle was an issuer as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

18. The Taiwan firm approached BSP concerning the Kid Castle audit engagement on or about June 22, 2006. Kid Castle engaged BSP as its auditor beginning on or about July 26, 2006. In audit reports dated June 14, 2007, March 28, 2008, and March 13, 2009, BSP expressed unqualified opinions on Kid Castle's financial statements for the fiscal years ended December 31, 2006 ("2006"), December 31, 2007 ("2007"), and December 31, 2008 ("2008"), respectively. The audit reports were included in Forms 10-K which Kid Castle filed with the Commission on June 14, 2007 (for the 2006 audit), March 31, 2008 (for the 2007 audit), and March 17, 2009 (for the 2008 audit). BSP also expressed an unqualified opinion on Kid Castle's restated financial statements for fiscal year 2007, in an audit report dual-dated March 28, 2008, and September 17, 2008, that was included in Kid Castle's Form 10-K/A filed with the Commission on September 23, 2008. to, collectively, as the "Kid Castle audits." Each audit report stated that, in BSP's opinion, Kid Castle's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States ("US GAAP"), and that BSP's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

19. BSP failed to comply with applicable professional standards in connection with the Kid Castle audits.[24/] First, the BSP engagement team failed to adequately plan the audits by failing to consider the nature, extent, and timing of the work to be performed. BSP wholly relied upon the Taiwan Firm to consider the nature, extent, and timing of the work to be performed, to prepare a written audit program, and to modify planned audit procedures as the audit progressed. The BSP engagement team also failed to adequately supervise the audits by failing: (1) to determine the technical training and ability of the Taiwan Firm assistants, and to assign audit tasks to the assistants according to their abilities; (2) to instruct the Taiwan Firm assistants; (3) to inform the Taiwan Firm assistants of their responsibilities and the objectives of the audit procedures to be performed; (4) to inform the Taiwan Firm assistants of matters that may have affected the nature, extent, and timing of the procedures they were to perform; and (5) to direct the Taiwan Firm assistants to bring to BSP's attention significant accounting and auditing questions raised during the audits.[25/]

20. BSP's principal involvement in the Kid Castle audits was its post-field work review of the work performed by the Taiwan Firm assistants. BSP failed to adequately perform this review. In the 2006 audit, Waggoner, the auditor with final responsibility for the audit, assigned the review of the working papers to a BSP staff member. The BSP staff member identified deficiencies related to the audit procedures performed, and audit evidence gathered, for material account balances in Kid Castle's financial statements. Waggoner forwarded the staff person's list of identified deficiencies to the Taiwan Firm. However, the BSP engagement team did not require the Taiwan Firm assistants to perform any additional procedures or to gather any additional evidence, and the BSP engagement team did not otherwise determine whether these deficiencies were properly addressed by the Taiwan Firm, prior to BSP issuing its audit report containing an unqualified opinion on the financial statements.[26/]

For the 2007 audit, despite knowing of deficiencies identified in the preceding year's audit work, the BSP engagement team did not receive or review any working papers from the Taiwan Firm, except for a set of worksheets showing the consolidation of Kid Castle's subsidiary accounts. For the 2008 audit, the BSP engagement team did not review any working papers from the Taiwan Firm.

22. As a result of the BSP engagement team's failures to comply with PCAOB auditing standards, including failing to ensure that the Taiwan Firm assistants gathered sufficient competent evidential matter,[27/] BSP improperly issued its audit reports for Kid Castle's 2006-2008 financial statements, which incorrectly stated that BSP had conducted the Kid Castle audits in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards.[28/]

23. Finally, BSP failed to comply with AS3 in connection with each of the Kid Castle audits. Audit of China Junlian's 2007 Financial Statements

24. At all relevant times, China Junlian was a Nevada corporation, with its headquarters in Guangzhou, China. As disclosed in its public filings, China Junlian, through its wholly owned subsidiary, was organized to engage in consulting, systems development, and customer service in the field of surveillance technology. At all relevant times, China Junlian's common stock was registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act. At all relevant times, China Junlian reported that there was no active market for its securities. In an audit report dated April 15, 2008, BSP expressed an unqualified opinion on China Junlian's 2007 financial statements. The audit report was included in a Form 10-KSB that China Junlian filed with the Commission on April 15, 2008. The audit report stated that, in BSP's opinion, China Junlian's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with US GAAP, and that BSP's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

Audit of North American Gaming's 2008 Financial Statements and ICFR

30. At all relevant times, North American Gaming was a Delaware corporation, with its headquarters in Xi'An, China. As disclosed in its public filings, North American Gaming was engaged in the business of exploring for gold, zinc, lead and other mineral products in China. At all relevant times, North American Gaming's common stock was registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and its common stock was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, North American Gaming was an issuer as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

31. The China Firm approached BSP concerning the North American Gaming audit engagement on or about May 13, 2008. North American Gaming engaged BSP as its auditor beginning on or about August 11, 2008. BSP performed an integrated audit of North American Gaming's annual financial statements for the fiscal year ended December 31, 2008, and management's assessment of ICFR as of December 31, 2008 (the "Integrated Audit"). In an audit report dated April 15, 2009, BSP expressed a qualified opinion on North American Gaming's 2008 financial statements. The audit report stated that, except for the company's goodwill balance, the impairment of which would affect the results of operations, in BSP's opinion, the financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with US GAAP, and that BSP's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

32. In a separate report dated April 15, 2009, BSP issued an unqualified opinion for BSP's audit of management's assessment of the effectiveness of ICFR. This report stated that, in BSP's opinion, North American Gaming maintained, in all material respects, effective internal control over financial reporting as of December 31, 2008. The ICFR report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. Both the financial statement audit report and the ICFR audit report were included in a Form 10-KSB that North American Gaming filed with the Commission on April 15, 2009, and in a Form 10-KSB/A that North American Gaming filed with the Commission on March 22, 2010.

33. BSP failed to comply with applicable professional standards in connection with the North American Gaming Integrated Audit.[36/] First, the BSP engagement team failed to comply with PCAOB auditing standards in planning the Integrated Audit.[37/] BSP wholly relied upon the China Firm to consider the nature, extent, and timing of the work to be performed, to prepare a written audit program, and to modify planned audit procedures as the audit progressed. Although the China Firm provided the BSP engagement team with a document purporting to memorialize planning for the Integrated Audit, that document was written in Chinese, was largely untranslated, and was not adequate to provide the BSP engagement team with an understanding of the audit plan.[38/]

34. The BSP engagement team also failed to adequately supervise the Integrated Audit by, among other things, failing: (1) to determine the technical training and ability of the China Firm assistants, and to assign audit tasks to the assistants according to their abilities; (2) to adequately instruct the China Firm assistants; (3) to adequately inform the China Firm assistants of their responsibilities and the objectives of the audit procedures to be performed; (4) to adequately inform the China Firm assistants of matters that may have affected the nature, extent, and timing of the procedures they were to perform; and (5) to direct the China Firm assistants to bring to

35. BSP's principal involvement in the Integrated Audit was its post-field work review of the work performed by the China Firm assistants. BSP failed to adequately perform this review. Waggoner, the auditor with final responsibility for the audit, assigned the review of the China Firm's working papers to a BSP staff member. The BSP staff member identified deficiencies related to the audit procedures performed, and audit evidence gathered, for material account balances in North American Gaming's financial statements, and advised the China Firm of these deficiencies. However, the BSP engagement team failed to determine whether these deficiencies were properly addressed prior to BSP issuing its audit reports.

As a result of the BSP engagement team's failures to comply with PCAOB auditing standards, including failing to ensure that the China Firm assistants gathered sufficient competent evidential matter,[40/] BSP improperly issued its audit reports on North American Gaming's ICFR and financial statements.[41/] Both of the reports incorrectly stated that BSP had conducted its audit in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of James R. Waggoner, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2012-003 May 22, 2012

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (the "Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring James R. Waggoner, CPA ("Waggoner" or "Respondent") and barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing this sanction on the basis of its findings that Waggoner violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with (a) the audits of three China-based and Taiwan-based issuer clients, and (b) the improper creation, addition, and backdating of audit documentation prior to a Board inspection.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Waggoner.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement (the "Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary

[1/] Waggoner may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

ORDER

Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions (the "Order") as set forth below.[2/]

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[3/] that:

A. Respondent

1. James R. Waggoner, 54, of Kenmore, New York, is a certified public accountant who is licensed to practice under the laws of the State of New York (License No. 053569). At all relevant times, Waggoner was a principal of Brock, Schechter & Polakoff, LLP[4/] (the "Firm," or "BSP"), and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). At all relevant times, Waggoner was BSP's Director of Accounting & Auditing. Waggoner was the auditor with final responsibility for BSP's audits of the financial statements of each of the issuers identified in paragraph two, below. BSP separated Waggoner from employment with the Firm on or about July 11, 2011.

B. Summary

2. This matter arises from BSP's audits of: (1) the 2006 through 2008 financial statements of Kid Castle Educational Corporation ("Kid Castle"), (2) the 2007 financial statements of China Junlian Integrated Surveillance, Inc. ("China Junlian"), (3) the 2008 financial statements of North American Gaming & Entertainment Corporation

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[3/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondent in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

ORDER

("North American Gaming"), and (4) North American Gaming's internal controls over financial reporting ("ICFR") as of December 31, 2008 (collectively, the "Audits"). Waggoner was the auditor with final responsibility for the Audits.

3. Waggoner failed to comply with PCAOB auditing standards related to the planning, performance, and supervision of the Audits. Also, Waggoner failed to gather sufficient competent evidential matter, and failed to use due care and to exercise professional skepticism in the course of the Audits. As detailed below, the Audits were planned and performed by two other audit firms, one located in the Republic of China (the "Taiwan Firm") and one located in the People's Republic of China (the "China Firm") (collectively, the "Foreign Firms"),[5/] not by Waggoner and BSP. During the Audits, Waggoner had minimal contact with the Foreign Firms, and performed an inadequate review of the working papers prepared by the Foreign Firms.

4. In addition, Waggoner failed to comply with Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS3"), by failing to ensure that BSP obtained and reviewed engagement completion documents from the Foreign Firms prior to authorizing BSP to issue the audit reports.

5. Waggoner also failed to comply with Auditing Standard No. 5, An Audit of Internal Control Over Financial Reporting That Is Integrated with an Audit of Financial Statements ("AS5"), in the course of auditing North American Gaming's ICFR. Waggoner authorized BSP's issuance of an audit report containing an unqualified opinion on the effectiveness of North American Gaming's ICFR as of December 31, 2008, despite knowing that North American Gaming could not perform an impairment analysis over a material asset as of December 31, 2008. Waggoner failed to perform any audit procedures to determine whether this control deficiency constituted a material weakness in North American Gaming's ICFR.

6. Waggoner also violated PCAOB Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, and AS3 in connection with the Board's inspection of the audits of the 2007 financial statements of Kid Castle and China Junlian. Waggoner improperly created, added, and altered audit working papers, after the relevant documentation completion dates, and shortly before the Board's inspection of these audits. This misleading documentation was provided to the Board in connection with the Board's inspection. The late-added documentation did not indicate the date that information was added to the working papers, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it, as required by AS3.

[5/] Both of the Foreign Firms are registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

7. Finally, Waggoner violated PCAOB Rule 3502, Responsibility Not to Knowingly or Recklessly Contribute to Violations. Waggoner omitted to take steps, in his capacity as BSP's Director of Accounting and Auditing, to ensure that one or more of the Audits were selected for postissuance review by the firm. Waggoner knew, or was reckless in not knowing, that this omission would directly and substantially contribute to BSP's failure to comply with PCAOB quality control standards relating to the monitoring element of the firm's quality control system.

C. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards in Connection with the Audits.

8. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[6/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[7/] Among other things, PCAOB standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[8/] PCAOB auditing standards in effect at the time of the Audits required that the auditor with final responsibility for the audit adequately plan the audit and supervise any assistants.[9/]

9. Although "portions of the planning and supervision" of the audit may be delegated to assistants,[10/] the auditor with final responsibility remains "responsible for

Elements of supervision include instructing assistants, keeping informed of significant problems encountered, reviewing the work performed, and dealing with differences of opinion among firm personnel."[12/] As detailed below, Waggoner failed to comply with these standards in connection with the Audits.

Waggoner and BSP Agree to Audit Taiwan-Based and China-Based Issuers

10. In May 2006, the Foreign Firms solicited several U.S.-based auditing firms, including BSP, to work with the Foreign Firms in auditing the financial statements of Taiwan-based and China-based issuers. Neither Waggoner nor BSP had any prior experience working with the Foreign Firms when BSP responded to the solicitations. The Foreign Firms proposed that they would perform all of the audit field work, but that BSP would issue the audit reports.

11. After being approached by the Foreign Firms, Waggoner and BSP's managing partner traveled to China and Taiwan to meet with the Foreign Firms. These meetings—conducted over a 10-day, multi-city trip—were introductory in nature. Waggoner and the BSP managing partner discussed business opportunities with the Foreign Firms, and discussed how the Foreign Firms and BSP would divide responsibility for completing audits. Waggoner, BSP's managing partner, and the Taiwan Firm also met with representatives of Kid Castle.

12. Waggoner accepted the audit engagements on behalf of BSP, and assumed the role of the auditor with final responsibility for all of the Audits.[13/] Waggoner did so despite the fact that neither he nor any other BSP auditor: (1) had any experience auditing the financial statements of issuers under PCAOB auditing standards; (2) had any experience auditing companies based in Taiwan or China; or (3) had any ability to understand or communicate in Chinese.

13. At all relevant times, Kid Castle was a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Florida, with its headquarters in Taipei, Taiwan. As disclosed in its public filings, Kid Castle was a provider of English-language instruction and educational services to children for whom Chinese is the child's primary language. At all relevant times, Kid Castle was required to file periodic reports with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under Section 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"), and its shares were traded on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. At all relevant times, Kid Castle was an issuer as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

14. The Taiwan firm approached BSP concerning the Kid Castle audit engagement on or about June 22, 2006. Kid Castle engaged BSP as its auditor beginning on or about July 26, 2006. In audit reports dated June 14, 2007, March 28, 2008, and March 13, 2009, BSP expressed unqualified opinions on Kid Castle's financial statements for the fiscal years ended December 31, 2006 ("2006"), December 31, 2007 ("2007"), and December 31, 2008 ("2008"), respectively. The audit reports were included in Forms 10-K which Kid Castle filed with the Commission on June 14, 2007 (for the 2006 audit), March 31, 2008 (for the 2007 audit), and March 17, 2009 (for the 2008 audit). BSP also expressed an unqualified opinion on Kid Castle's restated financial statements for fiscal year 2007, in an audit report dual-dated March 28, 2008, and September 17, 2008, that was included in Kid Castle's Form 10-K/A filed with the Commission on September 23, 2008. The 2006-2008 audits of Kid Castle are referred to, collectively, as the "Kid Castle audits." Each audit report stated that, in BSP's opinion, Kid Castle's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States ("US GAAP"), and that BSP's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

15. Waggoner failed to comply with applicable professional standards in connection with the Kid Castle audits.[14/] First, Waggoner failed to adequately plan the audits by failing to consider the nature, extent, and timing of the work to be performed. Waggoner wholly relied upon the Taiwan Firm to consider the nature, extent, and timing of the work to be performed, to prepare a written audit program, and to modify planned audit procedures as the audit progressed. Waggoner also failed to adequately supervise the audits by failing: (1) to determine the technical training and ability of the Taiwan Firm assistants, and to assign audit tasks to the assistants according to their abilities; (2) to instruct the Taiwan Firm assistants; (3) to inform the Taiwan Firm assistants of their responsibilities and the objectives of the audit procedures to be performed; (4) to inform the Taiwan Firm assistants of matters that may have affected the nature, extent, and timing of the procedures they were to perform; and (5) to direct the Taiwan Firm assistants to bring to Waggoner's attention significant accounting and auditing questions raised during the audits.[15/]

16. Waggoner also failed to adequately review the work performed by the Taiwan Firm assistants. In the 2006 audit, Waggoner assigned the review of the working papers to a BSP staff member. The BSP staff member identified deficiencies related to the audit procedures performed, and audit evidence gathered, for material account balances in Kid Castle's financial statements. Waggoner forwarded the staff person's list of identified deficiencies to the Taiwan Firm. However, Waggoner did not require the Taiwan Firm assistants to perform any additional procedures or to gather any additional evidence, and Waggoner did not otherwise determine whether these deficiencies were properly addressed by the Taiwan Firm, prior to authorizing BSP to issue its audit report containing an unqualified opinion on the financial statements.[16/]

17. For the 2007 audit, despite knowledge of the deficiencies identified by BSP staff in the preceding year's audit work, Waggoner did not receive or review any working papers from the Taiwan Firm, except for a set of worksheets showing the consolidation of Kid Castle's subsidiary accounts. For the 2008 audit, Waggoner did not review any working papers from the Taiwan Firm.

18. As a result of Waggoner's failures to comply with PCAOB auditing standards, including Waggoner's failure to ensure that the Taiwan Firm assistants gathered sufficient competent evidential matter,[17/] Waggoner improperly authorized the issuance of the Firm's audit reports for Kid Castle's 2006-2008 financial statements, which incorrectly stated that BSP had conducted the Kid Castle audits in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards.[18/]

Audit of China Junlian's 2007 Financial Statements

20. At all relevant times, China Junlian was a Nevada corporation, with its headquarters in Guangzhou, China. As disclosed in its public filings, China Junlian, through its wholly owned subsidiary, was organized to engage in consulting, systems development, and customer service in the field of surveillance technology. At all relevant times, China Junlian's common stock was registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act. At all relevant times, China Junlian reported that there was no active market for its securities. At all relevant times, China Junlian was an issuer as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

21. The China Firm approached BSP concerning the China Junlian audit engagement on or about May 21, 2007. China Junlian engaged BSP as its auditor beginning in or about July 2007. BSP audited China Junlian's financial statements for the fiscal year ended December 31, 2007. In an audit report dated April 15, 2008, BSP expressed an unqualified opinion on China Junlian's 2007 financial statements. 23. Waggoner also failed to adequately review the work performed by the China Firm assistants. Waggoner assigned the review of the China Firm's working papers to a BSP staff member. Although the audit working papers received from the China Firm revealed discrepancies in the audit evidence relating to material accounts, including revenue, Waggoner did not determine whether those discrepancies were properly addressed by the China Firm prior to authorizing BSP to issue its audit report containing an unqualified opinion.

As a result of Waggoner's failures to comply with PCAOB standards, including Waggoner's failure to ensure that the China Firm assistants gathered sufficient competent evidential matter,[23/] Waggoner improperly authorized the issuance of the Firm's audit report for China Junlian's 2007 financial statements, which incorrectly stated that BSP had conducted the audit in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards.[24/]

At all relevant times, North American Gaming was an issuer as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

27. The China Firm approached BSP concerning the North American Gaming audit engagement on or about May 13, 2008. North American Gaming engaged BSP as its auditor beginning on or about August 11, 2008. BSP performed an integrated audit of North American Gaming's annual financial statements for the fiscal year ended December 31, 2008, and management's assessment of ICFR as of December 31, 2008 (the "Integrated Audit"). In an audit report dated April 15, 2009, BSP expressed a qualified opinion on North American Gaming's 2008 financial statements. The audit report stated that, except for the company's goodwill balance, the impairment of which would affect the results of operations, in BSP's opinion, the financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with US GAAP, and that BSP's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

28. In a separate report dated April 15, 2009, BSP issued an unqualified opinion for BSP's audit of management's assessment of the effectiveness of ICFR. This report stated that, in BSP's opinion, North American Gaming maintained, in all material respects, effective internal control over financial reporting as of December 31, 2008. The ICFR report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. Both the financial statement audit report and the ICFR audit report were included in a Form 10-KSB that North American Gaming filed with the Commission on April 15, 2009, and in a Form 10-KSB/A that North American Gaming filed with the Commission on March 22, 2010.

Planning, Supervision and Performance of the Integrated Audit

29. Waggoner failed to comply with applicable professional standards in connection with the North American Gaming Integrated Audit.[26/] First, Waggoner failed to comply with PCAOB auditing standards in planning the Integrated Audit.[27/] Waggoner wholly relied upon the China Firm to consider the nature, extent, and timing of the work to be performed, to prepare a written audit program, and to modify planned audit procedures as the audit progressed. Although the China Firm provided BSP with a document purporting to memorialize planning for the Integrated Audit, that document was written in Chinese, was largely untranslated, and was not adequate to provide Waggoner with an understanding of the audit plan.[28/]

30. Waggoner also failed to adequately supervise the Integrated Audit by, among other things, failing: (1) to determine the technical training and ability of the China Firm assistants, and to assign audit tasks to the assistants according to their abilities; (2) to adequately instruct the China Firm assistants; (3) to adequately inform the China Firm assistants of their responsibilities and the objectives of the audit procedures to be performed; (4) to adequately inform the China Firm assistants of matters that may have affected the nature, extent, and timing of the procedures they were to perform; and (5) to direct the China Firm assistants to bring to Waggoner's attention significant accounting and auditing questions raised during the Integrated Audit.[29/]

31. Waggoner also failed to adequately review the work performed by the China Firm assistants in the Integrated Audit. Waggoner assigned the review of the China Firm's working papers to a BSP staff member. The BSP staff member identified deficiencies related to the audit procedures performed, and audit evidence gathered, for material account balances in North American Gaming's financial statements, and advised the China Firm of these deficiencies. However, Waggoner failed to determine whether these deficiencies were properly addressed prior to authorizing BSP to issue its audit reports.

Performance of the ICFR Audit

32. Waggoner failed to comply with AS5 in the course of auditing North American Gaming's ICFR. AS5 required Waggoner to evaluate the severity of each control deficiency that came to his attention, and to determine whether the control deficiency constituted a material weakness.[30/] AS5 requires that an issuer's ICFR can be deemed effective only if no material weaknesses in internal controls exist.[31/]

ORDER

33. In the course of auditing North American Gaming's 2008 financial statements, Waggoner determined that the inability of North American Gaming to complete an impairment analysis of its goodwill asset could produce a material misstatement in the financial statements. Waggoner also determined that this control deficiency precluded BSP from issuing an unqualified opinion on North American Gaming's 2008 financial statements. However, Waggoner took no steps to evaluate the severity of this known control deficiency in order to determine whether it constituted a material weakness in North American Gaming's ICFR.[32/] Waggoner failed to comply with AS5 when he improperly authorized the issuance of the Firm's unqualified audit report on North American Gaming's ICFR .

Completion of the Integrated Audit

34. As a result of Waggoner's failures to comply with PCAOB standards, including Waggoner's failure to ensure that the China Firm assistants gathered sufficient competent evidential matter,[33/] Waggoner improperly authorized the issuance of the Firm's audit reports on North American Gaming's ICFR and financial statements.[34/] Both of the reports incorrectly stated that BSP had conducted its audit in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards.

35. Finally, Waggoner failed to comply with AS3 in connection with the Integrated Audit. Waggoner failed to obtain, review, and retain an engagement completion document from the China Firm prior to authorizing BSP to issue the North American Gaming audit reports.[35/]

D. Waggoner Violated PCAOB Rule 4006 and AS3.

37. BSP released its audit opinions on Kid Castle's and China Junlian's 2007 financial statements on March 28, 2008, and April 15, 2008, respectively. The documentation completion dates for these audits, therefore, were May 12, 2008, and May 30, 2008, respectively: 45 days after the report release dates.[40/]

38. On or before October 29, 2008, Waggoner learned that the Board would inspect the 2007 Kid Castle and China Junlian audits. On October 29, 2008, Waggoner e-mailed the audit partner at the Taiwan Firm and requested that the Taiwan Firm translate and provide to BSP the 2007 Kid Castle audit working papers from the "critical" and "most important" areas of the audit. On or about January 9, 2009, the Taiwan Firm provided Waggoner with the requested audit documentation, none of which had been in BSP's possession, translated or untranslated, prior to receiving notice of the upcoming Board inspection.

39. On or about January 16, 2009, Waggoner added the newly received audit documentation to the 2007 Kid Castle audit working papers. The newly added documentation did not indicate the date(s) the documents were translated, the name of the person(s) who prepared the translated documents, or the reason(s) for translating and adding the documents to the working papers after the documentation completion date. 40. On or about January 16, 2009, Waggoner created and modified several other documents which he added to the 2007 Kid Castle and China Junlian working papers. Waggoner: (1) added handwritten notations to audit working papers, backdated to "3/08" and "4/08;" and (2) created an undated memo purporting to memorialize the planning process for both of the audits. Waggoner did not indicate the dates that the modifications and additions were made to the working papers, the name of the person making the modifications and additions, and the reason for making these modifications and additions to the working papers after the documentation completion date. This conduct, as well, failed to comply with AS3.

41. Field work for the Board's inspection began on January 20, 2009, and was completed on January 30, 2009. During that time, Waggoner made the foregoing documents available to the Board's inspectors. At no time did Waggoner inform the Board's inspectors that these modifications to the working papers were made shortly before, and in anticipation of, the Board's inspection. This conduct violated Rule 4006.

E. Waggoner Violated PCAOB Rule 3502.

42. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm comply with certain quality control standards.[41/] PCAOB quality control standards require that a registered public accounting firm "shall have a system of quality control for its accounting and auditing practice."[42/] One element of quality control is monitoring, to provide a firm with reasonable assurance "that its system of quality control is effective."[43/] Monitoring procedures may include preissuance or postissuance reviews of selected audit engagements.[44/] In addition, PCAOB rules prohibit an associated person of a registered public accounting firm from omitting to take an action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that the omission would directly and substantially contribute to a violation of Board standards by that firm.[45/] As described below, BSP failed to comply with the Board's quality control standards, and Waggoner directly and substantially

43. As part of its quality control system, BSP participated in a peer review program every three years, and it also conducted its own internal postissuance reviews of selected audit engagements in years that were not subject to peer review. Despite the fact that the Kid Castle, China Junlian and North American Gaming audits were BSP's first audit engagements subject to PCAOB auditing standards, and despite the fact that these audits were BSP's first audit engagements for companies with operations in China and Taiwan, none of these Audits were selected for review either in BSP's internal review program or during peer reviews. BSP's monitoring procedures did not enable the firm to obtain reasonable assurance that its system of quality control was effective.[46/]

44. In his capacity as the Director of Accounting and Auditing, Waggoner was responsible for, among other things, administering the monitoring element of BSP's quality control system, including the internal review program. BSP's Accounting and Auditing committee, under Waggoner's leadership, was also responsible for providing information to the audit firm that performed BSP's peer reviews. Waggoner also was the auditor with final responsibility for each of the firm's public company audits. Waggoner knew that BSP's monitoring process was not selecting any of the public company audits for review. Waggoner omitted to take any steps to ensure that any of the Audits were selected for postissuance review. Waggoner knew, or was reckless in not knowing, that this omission would directly and substantially contribute to BSP's failure to comply with PCAOB quality control standards relating to the monitoring element of the Firm's quality control system.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), James R. Waggoner, CPA is hereby censured;

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter Uma D. Basso, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2012-006 September 7, 2012

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (the "Board" or "PCAOB") is (a) censuring Uma D. Basso, CPA ("Basso" or "Respondent"); (b) for a period of two years, limiting her activities in connection with audits, as that term is defined in Section 110(1) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), by prohibiting her from serving in the role of engagement partner or engagement quality reviewer; and (c) requiring that she complete forty (40) additional hours of continuing professional education in subjects that are directly related to the audits of issuer financial statements under PCAOB standards. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that Basso violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the audits of two issuer clients.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Act, and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Basso.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement (the "Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Uma D. Basso ("Basso"), 42, of Coral Springs, Florida, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of Florida (License No. AC0038893). At all relevant times, Basso was a partner at the registered public accounting firm Jewett, Schwartz, Wolfe & Associates, P.L. ("JSW").[3/] Basso was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). For the two issuer audits discussed below, Basso served in the role of audit manager, under the supervision of Lawrence H. Wolfe, the engagement partner for those audits.[4/] Basso was responsible for supervising the junior professional staff performing those audits.

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondent in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

ORDER

B. Summary

2. As detailed below, Basso violated PCAOB rules and PCAOB auditing standards in connection with the audits of two issuers' financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008. In both of those audits, Basso failed to perform or ensure the performance of adequate audit procedures on material accounts; and failed to properly supervise the engagement team personnel who, together with Basso, performed most of the work on the audits.

C. Respondent's Violations of PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

3. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[5/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[6/] Among other things, PCAOB standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[7/] PCAOB standards also prohibit an auditor from relying on management representations as a substitute for performing audit procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion on an issuer's financial statements and require an auditor to investigate when management representations are contradicted by other audit evidence.[8/]

4. PCAOB auditing standards also require that audits be adequately planned and assistants be properly supervised.[9/] Supervision includes "directing the

Audit of DRG's 2008 Financial Statements

5. At all relevant times, Dynamic Response Group, Inc. ("DRG") was a Florida corporation with its headquarters in Miami, Florida. The company's public filings disclosed that it marketed, developed and distributed personal development, wellness and entertainment consumer goods and services. DRG's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, DRG was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

6. JSW issued an audit report dated March 10, 2009, in which it expressed an unqualified opinion on DRG's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008. The report was included in a Form 10-K that DRG filed with the Commission on April 15, 2009. The audit report, which included a going concern explanatory paragraph, stated that, in JSW's opinion, DRG's 2008 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with US GAAP, and that JSW's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

7. Basso served in the role of manager for the DRG audit, and she was responsible for planning substantial portions of the audit and for supervising the two junior JSW staff members who, together with Basso, performed most of the work on the audit. Basso failed to comply with applicable PCAOB standards in connection with JSW's audit of DRG's 2008 financial statements.

8. DRG reported in the notes to its 2008 financial statements that it had incurred advertising expenses during 2008 and that it had capitalized approximately $840,000 of those expenses as "direct response advertising" pursuant to AICPA Statement of Position ("SOP") 93-7, Reporting on Advertising Costs (December 29, 1993). DRG's capitalized direct response advertising balance for 2008 represented an increase of over 350% from the prior year and constituted 21% of DRG's total reported assets.

9. SOP 93-7 provides that a company may only capitalize advertising expenses as direct response advertising if (1) the primary purpose of the advertising "is to elicit sales to customers who could be shown to have responded specifically to the advertising;" and (2) the advertising "results in probable future benefits."[12/] In addition, SOP 93-7 states that direct response advertising costs reported as assets are to be "amortized on a cost-pool-by-cost-pool basis over the period during which the future benefits are expected to be received."[13/]

10. During the 2008 audit, Basso failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient audit evidence to conclude that DRG was appropriately capitalizing, as opposed to expensing, the costs it reported as direct response advertising.[14/] Specifically, Basso failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, audit evidence indicating that sales were to customers responding specifically to the advertising. Nor did Basso obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient competent audit evidence indicating that the advertising would result in probable future benefits to DRG. In addition, Basso failed to perform, or ensure the performance of, any procedures to evaluate whether DRG was appropriately amortizing the amounts it capitalized as direct response advertising. Indeed, JSW's work papers include a schedule, provided by DRG and reviewed by Basso, indicating that the company was not amortizing those amounts.

11. During the 2008 audit, Basso also failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient competent evidential matter concerning promissory note obligations that represented approximately 21% of DRG's total reported liabilities. In the notes to the financial statements, DRG reported that the maturity dates on its promissory notes had been extended until late 2010 and early 2011. Confirmations included in JSW's work papers, however, indicated that DRG's promissory notes matured in 2009. Basso reviewed those confirmations and failed to take any steps, or ensure that the engagement team took any steps, to reconcile the disclosures in the financial statements with the contradictory information contained in the work papers.[15/] Basso also failed to perform, or ensure the performance of, audit procedures to evaluate whether the outstanding note balance was complete, and whether the notes were properly classified, described, and disclosed as current liabilities.

Audit of ADS's 2008 Financial Statements

12. American Defense Systems, Inc. ("ADS") is a Delaware corporation with its headquarters in Hicksville, New York. The company's public filings disclose that it develops defense and security products. ADS's common stock is registered under Section 12(b) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the American Stock Exchange. At all relevant times, ADS was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

13. In April 2009, JSW issued an audit report in which it expressed an unqualified audit opinion on ADS's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008. The report was included in a Form 10-K that ADS filed with the Commission on April 15, 2009. The audit report stated that, in JSW's opinion, ADS's 2008 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with US GAAP, and that JSW's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

14. Basso also served in the role of manager for the ADS audit, and she was again responsible for planning substantial portions of the audit and for supervising the junior JSW staff member who, together with Basso, performed most of the work on the audit. Basso failed to comply with applicable PCAOB standards in connection with JSW's audit of ADS's 2008 financial statements.

15. Basso failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient competent evidential matter as to the existence and valuation of ADS's accounts receivable.[16/] As of year-end 2008, those receivables represented approximately 30% of ADS's current assets and 20% of its total assets, and ADS maintained no allowance for doubtful accounts.

16. During the audit, Basso concluded that sending confirmations to ADS's customers would be ineffective and, accordingly, planned to review subsequent cash receipts to test ADS's accounts receivable balance.[17/] However, the subsequent cash receipts testing was inadequate. First, the testing was not completed until several months after JSW issued its audit report. Second, although JSW's work papers indicate that ADS had collected certain receivables after year-end 2008, in fact, Basso was aware that some of those receivables were still outstanding as of June 30, 2009.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Uma D. Basso, CPA is hereby censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(C) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(3), for a period of two (2) years from the date of the issuance of this Order, Uma D. Basso, CPA's role in any "audit," as that term is defined in Section 110(1) of the Act, shall be restricted as follows: Basso shall not (1) serve as the "engagement partner," as that term is used in the Board's Auditing Standard No. 10, Supervision of the Audit Engagement; (2) serve as the "engagement quality reviewer," as that term is used in the Board's Auditing Standard No. 7, Engagement Quality Review; (3) serve in any role that is equivalent to engagement partner or engagement quality review partner, but differently denominated (such as "lead partner," "practitioner-in-charge," or "concurring partner"); or (4) exercise authority either to sign a registered public accounting firm's name to an audit report, or to consent to the use of a previously issued audit report, for any issuer, broker or dealer; and

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(F) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(6), Uma D. Basso, CPA is required to complete, within two (2) years from the date of the issuance of this Order, forty (40) hours of continuing

C. Summary

3. This matter concerns JSW's violations of PCAOB rules, quality control standards, and auditing standards. At all times relevant to this Order, JSW failed to establish, implement, and communicate quality control policies and procedures sufficient to provide it with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel met applicable professional standards. JSW's quality control violations resulted in or contributed to numerous and repeated violations of PCAOB auditing standards in connection with the audits of four issuers' financial statements over a multiple year period (collectively, the "Audits").[6/] As detailed below, during the Audits, JSW failed to: (1) adequately supervise engagement team personnel; (2) perform adequate, or sometimes any, audit procedures on material accounts; and (3) appropriately document the limited procedures it did perform. JSW also violated PCAOB rules by failing to pay its annual fee to the Board in 2011.

D. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Quality Control Standards

4. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm comply with the Board's quality control standards.[7/] PCAOB quality control standards require that a registered public accounting firm "shall have a system of quality control for its accounting and auditing practice."[8/]

[5/] See Uma D. Basso, CPA, PCAOB Release No. 105-2012-006 (September 7, 2012).

[6/] Specifically, the Audits consist of JSW's audits of: (a) the 2006 through 2008 financial statements of MedCom USA, Incorporated; (b) the 2008 financial statements of Dynamic Response Group, Inc.; (c) the 2008 financial statements of American Defense Systems, Inc.; and (d) the 2008 financial statements of Dolphin Digital Media, Inc.

5. PCAOB quality control standards state that policies and procedures "should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality."[9/] Policies and procedures, as well, should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that work "is assigned to personnel having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances."[10/] PCAOB quality control standards further provide that the more able and experienced the personnel assigned to an engagement are, the less direct supervision is needed.[11/] Additionally, PCAOB quality control standards provide that policies and procedures "should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that the policies and procedures established by the firm for each of the other elements of quality control . . . are suitably designed and are being effectively applied," and that "its system of quality control is effective."[12/] Finally, quality control policies and procedures should be communicated to a firm's personnel in a manner that provides reasonable assurance that they are understood and complied with.[13/] As detailed below, JSW failed to comply with these PCAOB quality control standards in connection with the Audits.

6. When it filed its Application for Registration with the PCAOB in 2003, JSW submitted a list of its quality control policies covering, among other things, personnel management, engagement performance, and monitoring. Subsequently, JSW generated other quality control documents based on commercial publications. At all relevant times, however, JSW failed to implement or communicate to its personnel those quality control policies and procedures.[14/] Indeed, prior to 2009, even partner level personnel at JSW did not have an understanding of the Firm's quality control policies concerning personnel management, engagement performance, and monitoring.

7. With respect to personnel management, in several of the Audits, one or more staff members with limited audit experience conducted virtually all of the Firm's audit procedures, and much of that work was never reviewed by Wolfe or anyone else.[15/] JSW's failure to implement and communicate appropriate quality control standards regarding personnel management, in turn, contributed to its failure to comply with quality control standards concerning engagement performance. Throughout the relevant time period, JSW failed to put policies and procedures in place to ensure that engagement personnel performed audit procedures necessary to comply with PCAOB standards.[16/] As a result, in multiple instances, JSW personnel failed to complete necessary audit work before the Firm released its audit opinions for the Audits, and, in other instances, failed to perform any significant work in critical audit areas.

8. Finally, with respect to monitoring, although JSW's written quality control documents stated that the Firm would "evaluate on an ongoing basis whether the other elements of quality control established by the firm are suitably designed and are being effectively applied," no such monitoring actually occurred during the period in question.[17/]

E. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards in Connection with the Audits

9. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[18/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[19/] Among other things, PCAOB standards require that an auditor

exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[20/] PCAOB standards also prohibit an auditor from relying on management representations as a substitute for performing audit procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion on an issuer's financial statements and require an auditor to investigate when management representations are contradicted by other audit evidence.[21/]

10. PCAOB auditing standards also require that audits be adequately planned and assistants be properly supervised.[22/] Supervision includes "directing the efforts of assistants who are involved in accomplishing the objectives of the audit," reviewing their work, and "determining whether th[e] objectives [of the audit] were accomplished."[23/] In reviewing the work of assistants, care should be taken to both "determine whether it was adequately performed and to evaluate whether the results are consistent with the conclusions to be presented in the auditor's report."[24/] As detailed below, JSW failed to comply with these and other auditing standards in connection with the Audits.

Audits of MedCom's 2006-2008 Financial Statements

11. At all relevant times, MedCom USA, Incorporated ("MedCom") was a Delaware corporation with its headquarters in Scottsdale, Arizona. The company's public filings disclosed that it processed medical information, including insurance eligibility verification. MedCom's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. 12. MedCom appointed JSW as its independent auditor on or about February 7, 2007. In audit reports dated September 14, 2007 and September 28, 200[8],[25/] JSW expressed unqualified opinions on MedCom's financial statements. Wolfe authorized the issuance of both audit reports. The September 14, 2007 audit report concerned MedCom's financial statements for the year ended June 30, 2007 and its restated financial statements for the year ended June 30, 2006, and was included in a Form 10-KSB that MedCom filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission") on September 28, 2007. The September 28, 2008 audit report concerned MedCom's financial statements for the years ended June 30, 2008 and June 30, 2007 and was included in a Form 10-K that MedCom filed with the Commission on September 29, 2008. Both reports, which included going concern explanatory paragraphs, stated that, in JSW's opinion, MedCom's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States ("US GAAP"), and that JSW's audits were conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

MedCom's Restated 2006 Financial Statements

13. Another registered public accounting firm initially audited MedCom's financial statements for the year ended June 30, 2006. After JSW accepted the MedCom engagement, MedCom restated its 2006 financial statements and included those restated financial statements in the Form 10-KSB it filed with the Commission on September 28, 2007. JSW did not conduct an audit of MedCom's restated 2006 financial statements. Nonetheless, with Wolfe's authorization, JSW issued an audit report on those restated financial statements, in violation of PCAOB auditing standards.[26/]

[25/] The audit report issued in 2008 was erroneously dated September 28, 2007.

ORDER

Audits of MedCom's 2007 and 2008 Financial Statements

14. The JSW engagement team for the audits of MedCom's 2007 and 2008 financial statements consisted of Wolfe, as the auditor with final responsibility, and one staff member who was not licensed as a certified public accountant in the United States and had limited experience auditing public companies. The staff member performed almost all of the audit work during the 2007 and 2008 MedCom audits, and Wolfe failed to review much of that work. JSW's failure to ensure that the 2007 and 2008 MedCom audits were appropriately supervised violated PCAOB standards.[27/]

15. During those audits, JSW failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support its opinions on MedCom's 2007 and 2008 financial statements.[28/] Specifically, JSW failed to perform any audit procedures during the 2007 audit with respect to MedCom's reported revenue of $4 million. JSW also failed to obtain any competent evidence during the 2007 audit as to the existence, completeness and valuation of MedCom's reported notes payable. JSW's failures with respect to MedCom's notes payable were particularly significant because those notes were MedCom's primary means of funding its business, were its largest liability, representing 69% of MedCom's total reported liabilities in 2007, and, according to MedCom's 2007 Form 10-KSB, had been substantially renegotiated during 2007.

16. Additionally, in both the 2007 and 2008 MedCom audits, JSW failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter with respect to MedCom's largest reported asset, contract receivables, which represented 63% and 47% of MedCom's total reported assets in 2007 and 2008, respectively. In 2007, the JSW engagement team prepared a memorandum with respect to contract receivables in which the team described work it had purportedly performed and documented in other work papers. No one on the engagement team, however, was able to identify those other work papers, and no one on the engagement team recalled performing any such procedures. In 2008, JSW obtained copies of certain contracts and a management schedule listing contract receivable balances as of year-end. JSW, however, failed to obtain any evidence to substantiate or test those year-end balances provided by management.

17. Finally, JSW failed to comply with PCAOB documentation standards in the 2007 MedCom audit.[29/] PCAOB documentation standards require that an auditor make certain written disclosures if the auditor adds documentation to the audit work papers after the documentation completion date.[30/] Specifically, information added to the work papers after the documentation completion date must indicate the date the information was added, the person preparing the additional information, and the reason for adding the information to the work papers after the documentation completion date.[31/] JSW violated these requirements in the 2007 MedCom audit. Specifically, well after the documentation completion date for the 2007 audit, the JSW staff member assigned to the 2007 MedCom engagement prepared a "Supervision, Review, and Approval" form that he and Wolfe signed and dated as if it had been prepared prior to the documentation completion date. The staff member also prepared a "Disclosure Requirements" checklist well after the documentation completion date and similarly dated it to make it appear that it had been prepared prior to the documentation completion date. Those documents were then included in the work papers without any explanation as to why they had been added after the documentation completion date and without any indication that the work papers had actually been prepared after the sign-off dates.

Audit of DRG's 2008 Financial Statements

18. At all relevant times, Dynamic Response Group, Inc. ("DRG") was a Florida corporation with its headquarters in Miami, Florida. The company's public filings disclosed that it marketed, developed and distributed personal development, wellness and entertainment consumer goods and services. DRG's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, DRG was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

19. In an audit report dated March 10, 2009, JSW expressed an unqualified opinion on DRG's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008. The report was included in a Form 10-K that DRG filed with the Commission on April 15, 2009. The audit report, which included a going concern explanatory paragraph, stated that, in JSW's opinion, DRG's 2008 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with US GAAP, and that JSW's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. JSW failed to comply with applicable PCAOB standards in connection with the 2008 DRG Audit.

20. DRG reported in the notes to its 2008 financial statements that it had incurred advertising expenses during 2008 and that it had capitalized approximately $840,000 of those expenses as "direct response advertising" pursuant to AICPA Statement of Position ("SOP") 93-7, Reporting on Advertising Costs (December 29, 1993). DRG's capitalized direct response advertising balance for 2008 represented an increase of over 350% from the prior year and constituted 21% of DRG's total reported assets.

21. SOP 93-7 provides that a company may only capitalize advertising expenses as direct response advertising if (1) the primary purpose of the advertising "is to elicit sales to customers who could be shown to have responded specifically to the advertising;" and (2) the advertising "results in probable future benefits."[32/] In addition, SOP 93-7 states that direct response advertising costs reported as assets are to be "amortized on a cost-pool-by-cost-pool basis over the period during which the future benefits are expected to be received."[33/]

22. During the 2008 audit, JSW failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient audit evidence to conclude that DRG was appropriately capitalizing, as opposed to expensing, the costs it reported as direct response advertising.[34/] Specifically, JSW failed to obtain audit evidence indicating that sales were to customers responding specifically to the advertising. Nor did JSW obtain sufficient competent audit evidence indicating that the advertising would result in probable future benefits to DRG. In addition, JSW failed to perform any procedures to evaluate whether DRG was appropriately amortizing the amounts it capitalized as direct response advertising. Indeed, JSW's work papers include a schedule, provided by DRG, indicating that the company was not amortizing those amounts.

23. During the 2008 audit, JSW also failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning promissory note obligations that represented approximately 21% of DRG's total reported liabilities. In the notes to the financial statements, DRG reported that the maturity dates on its promissory notes had been extended until late 2010 and early 2011. Confirmations included in JSW's work papers, however, indicated that DRG's promissory notes matured in 2009. JSW failed to take any steps to reconcile the disclosures in the

24. American Defense Systems, Inc. ("ADS") is a Delaware corporation with its headquarters in Hicksville, New York. The company's public filings disclose that it develops defense and security products. ADS's common stock is registered under Section 12(b) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the American Stock Exchange. At all relevant times, ADS was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

25. In April 2009, JSW issued an audit report expressing an unqualified opinion on ADS's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008. The report was included in a Form 10-K that ADS filed with the Commission on April 15, 2009. The audit report stated that, in JSW's opinion, ADS's 2008 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with US GAAP, and that JSW's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

26. JSW failed to comply with applicable PCAOB standards in connection with the audit of ADS's 2008 financial statements. Specifically, JSW failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter as to the existence and valuation of ADS's accounts receivable.[36/] As of year-end 2008, those receivables represented approximately 30% of ADS's current assets and 20% of its total assets, and ADS maintained no allowance for doubtful accounts.

27. During the audit, the JSW engagement team concluded that sending confirmations to ADS's customers would be ineffective and, accordingly, planned to review subsequent cash receipts to test ADS's accounts receivable balance.[37/]

Audit of DDM's 2008 Financial Statements

28. Dolphin Digital Media, Inc. ("DDM") is a Nevada corporation with its principal offices located in Miami, Florida. The company's public filings disclose that it creates and manages social networking websites for children. DDM's common stock is registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and trades on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, DDM was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

29. In an audit report dated April 13, 2009, JSW expressed an unqualified audit opinion on DDM's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008. The report was included in a Form 10-K that DDM filed with the Commission on April 14, 2009. The audit report, which included a going concern explanatory paragraph, stated that, in JSW's opinion, DDM's 2008 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with US GAAP, and that JSW's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

30. JSW failed to comply with applicable PCAOB standards in connection with the audit of DDM's 2008 financial statements. The audit team consisted of Wolfe and two JSW staff members with limited experience auditing public companies. The staff members performed almost all of the audit work, and Wolfe failed to review much of that work. JSW's failure to ensure that the 2008 DDM audit was appropriately supervised violated PCAOB standards.[38/]

31. As of year-end 2008, more than 75% of DDM's total reported assets were classified as intangible assets and consisted mostly of website and platform development costs for an unlaunched product. During the 2008 audit, JSW failed to ensure that the engagement team appropriately tested DDM's intangible asset balance for impairment. The work papers reflect that management's basis for not recognizing an impairment on its intangible assets in 2008 was a cash flow projection. JSW, however, performed no procedures to assess the reasonableness of the cash flow projection, including the relevance, sufficiency, and reliability of the data supporting the projection and the assumptions management made in formulating the projection.[39/] In addition, the untested cash flow projection was inconsistent with JSW's conclusion that there was substantial doubt as to DDM's ability to continue operating as a going concern.[40/]

32. JSW also failed to comply with AS3 in connection with the audit of DDM's 2008 financial statements. AS3 provides that the documentation for an audit "must contain sufficient information to enable an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with the engagement: [a.] [t]o understand the nature, timing, extent, and results of the procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached, and [b.] [t]o determine who performed the work and the date such work was completed as well as the person who reviewed the work and the date of such review."[41/] Significant portions of the audit documentation did not contain sufficient information to demonstrate the nature, timing, extent, and results of the procedures performed, evidence obtained, conclusions reached, and the dates such work was completed and reviewed.

F. JSW Violated PCAOB Rule 2202

33. Pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31…." In violation of Rule 2202, JSW failed to pay its annual fee for 2011.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Michael T. Studer, CPA, P.C. and Michael T. Studer, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2012-007 September 7, 2012

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is: (1) censuring the registered public accounting firm Michael T. Studer, CPA, P.C., (the "Firm") and Michael T. Studer, CPA ("Studer") (collectively, "Respondents"); (2) requiring the Firm to retain an independent monitor; (3) temporarily limiting the activities, functions, and operations of the Firm, including by prohibiting the Firm from issuing an audit report for an issuer subject to the attestation and reporting requirements of Section 404(b) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act") for a period of three years, further conditioned, without any time limitation, on issuance of a certificate of compliance by the independent monitor and Studer obtaining 60 hours of continuing professional education; and restricting the Firm, unless and until the independent monitor issues a certificate of compliance, from certain activities, functions, and operations relating to client acceptance, issuance of issuer audit reports, broker-dealer financial statement certification, and substantial role participation. In addition, the Firm is required to provide a copy of this Order to its issuer audit clients, and Studer is prohibited, unless and until the independent monitor issues a certificate of compliance, from serving as an assistant, engagement partner or engagement quality reviewer for an audit performed by another PCAOB-registered public accounting firm.

The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards and PCAOB quality control standards in connection with the Firm's integrated audit of internal control over financial reporting and financial statements of one issuer client as of and for the year ended December 31, 2008, and the Firm's audits of the financial statements of two issuer clients for the years ended December 31, 2006 and 2007, respectively.

PCAOB

ORDER

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Michael T. Studer, CPA, P.C., and Michael T. Studer, CPA.

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[1/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Michael T. Studer, CPA, P.C., is a public accounting firm located in Freeport, New York. At all relevant times, the Firm has been registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. ORDER

2. Michael T. Studer, 62, of Amityville, New York, is a certified public accountant licensed in the State of New York (License No. 033662). He is the sole stockholder of the Firm and, at all relevant times, was President of the Firm and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' failure to comply with PCAOB auditing standards in auditing management's assessment of the effectiveness of internal control over financial reporting and the financial statements of Biocoral, Inc. ("Biocoral") as of and for the year ended December 31, 2008; the financial statements of China Clean Energy, Inc. ("China Clean") and China Kangtai Cactus Bio-Tech, Inc. ("China Kangtai") as of and for the years ended December 31, 2006 and 2007;[3/] and the Firm's failure during the relevant audits to comply with certain PCAOB quality control standards.[4/]

4. In March 2009, the Firm, at Studer's direction, issued an unqualified audit report on Biocoral's internal control over financial reporting ("ICFR") as of December 31, 2008, without sufficient basis for the opinion expressed in the report. The Firm issued the ICFR report despite Respondents' failure to perform required audit procedures including, among others, identification and testing of Biocoral's internal controls.[5/] The Firm concurrently issued an unqualified audit report (with a going concern explanatory paragraph) on Biocoral's financial statements as of and for the year ended December 31, 2008. Respondents violated PCAOB standards in connection with the Firm's audit of Biocoral's financial statements by failing to perform procedures to adequately test the existence and valuation of Biocoral's intangible assets.[6/] In addition, Respondents failed to prepare the Firm's audit documentation for the integrated audit in accordance with PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS No. 3").

5. The Firm, at Studer's direction, issued unqualified audit reports on the financial statements of two China-based issuers, China Clean and China Kangtai, as of and for the years ended December 31, 2006 and 2007 (dated March 8, 2007 and March 7, 2008 for China Clean and March 30, 2007 and April 11, 2008 for China Kangtai, respectively). In conducting these audits, Respondents used assistants based in Canada to perform field work in China and a significant portion of the Firm's audit procedures. Respondents failed, however, to direct the efforts of these assistants or review the work performed in order to ensure that the Firm's audit documentation would be prepared in accordance with PCAOB standards.[7/] A substantial amount of the Firm's audit documentation for each of these four audits was not prepared in accordance with AS No. 3 and failed to indicate who performed the work, the date such work was completed, who reviewed the work, and the date of such review.

6. PCAOB rules also require that a registered public accounting firm comply with certain quality control standards.[8/] During the relevant audits, Studer had sole responsibility for developing and maintaining the Firm's quality control policies and procedures. Under PCAOB standards, a firm should establish policies and procedures to encompass, among other things, (a) personnel management, (b) engagement performance, and (c) monitoring.[9/] Under Studer's direction, the Firm failed to establish policies and procedures that provided reasonable assurance that the Firm's audits would comply with applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the Firm's standards of quality.[10/] The Firm failed to communicate the substance of its quality control policies and procedures to its personnel in a manner that provided reasonable assurance that those policies and procedures were understood and complied with, and failed to establish policies and procedures to provide reasonable assurance that work was assigned to personnel having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances.[11/] The Firm also failed to implement monitoring procedures to provide reasonable assurance that the Firm's system of quality control policies and procedures were suitably designed and were being

7. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards and related professional practice standards.[13/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[14/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements, and properly supervise the efforts of assistants and review their work.[15/] As detailed below, Respondents failed to meet these standards in connection with the integrated audit of the internal control over financial reporting and financial statements of Biocoral as of and for the year ended December 31, 2008. Respondents also failed to comply with PCAOB audit documentation standards in connection with the Firm's integrated audit of Biocoral as of and for the year ended December 31, 2008, and the Firm's audits of the financial statements of China Clean and China Kangtai as of and for the years ended December 31, 2006 and 2007.[16/]

Integrated Audit of Biocoral's Internal Control Over Financial Reporting and Financial Statements as of and for the year ended December 31, 2008

8. Biocoral is a Delaware corporation based in La Garenne Colombes, France. Biocoral's public filings disclose that it is a biomaterials company specializing in the research, development, and commercialization of patented biotechnologies and biomaterials in the health care area. At all relevant times, Biocoral was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

9. The Firm, at Studer's direction, was engaged as Biocoral's independent auditor in February 2009, and issued an audit report dated March 27, 2009, expressing an unqualified opinion on Biocoral's ICFR as of December 31, 2008. The Firm also issued an audit report dated March 27, 2009, expressing an unqualified opinion (with a going concern explanatory paragraph) on Biocoral's financial statements as of and for the year ended December 31, 2008. These reports accompanied Biocoral's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 31, 2009. Studer authorized the issuance of the Firm's audit reports and understood that he had final responsibility, as that phrase is used in AU § 311, Planning and Supervision, for the integrated audit.

10. Prior to the Firm's ICFR audit report, Respondents had never performed an ICFR audit. Respondents were aware, however, that a PCAOB-registered French audit firm had issued audit reports dated February 20 and 27, 2009, respectively, for two of Biocoral's subsidiaries, Inoteb, Inc. and Biocoral France, on those entities' ICFR and financial statements as of and for the year ended December 31, 2008. Biocoral's consolidated financial statements as of and for the year ended December 31, 2008, included these two subsidiaries. Respondents did not participate in these audits.

11. Respondents determined to serve as principal auditor for the integrated audit of Biocoral's ICFR and financial statements. As such, neither the Firm's ICFR nor financial statement audit reports made reference to the French audit firm or reliance on the work of other auditors.[17/]

ICFR Audit Failure

12. Respondents issued an unqualified ICFR audit report on March 27, 2009 accompanying Biocoral's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 31, 2009, but failed to perform an audit of Biocoral's ICFR in accordance with PCAOB standards, including the general standards requiring, among other things, technical training and proficiency as an auditor and the exercise of due professional care, including professional skepticism.[18/] Respondents did not perform procedures adequate to afford a reasonable basis for the Firm's ICFR report, and did not obtain competent evidence that was sufficient to obtain reasonable assurance about whether material weaknesses existed as of December 31, 2008—the date specified in management's assessment.[19/]

13. Studer personally performed the Firm's integrated Biocoral ICFR and financial statement audit. Studer visited Biocoral management in France during field work in early March 2009.

14. At the time he conducted field work, Studer did not have a written audit plan concerning ICFR and did not utilize any audit programs in connection with the audit of Biocoral's ICFR. As such, the Firm's audit documentation relating to ICFR resulting from Studer's field work was minimal. Indeed, the Firm's work papers do not evidence that Studer based the Firm's opinion at the time of the issuance of the Firm's ICFR report on any ICFR procedures performed by the Firm.

15. In fact, Respondents failed to adequately identify or test controls at Biocoral, and failed to perform other procedures required by AS No. 5. For example, Respondents failed to: use a top-down approach to select the controls to test, adequately test entity-level controls, identify significant accounts and disclosures and their relevant assertions, evaluate qualitative and quantitative risk factors related to the financial statement line items and disclosures, determine the likely sources of potential misstatements that would cause the financial statements to be materially misstated, understand how information technology affected the flow of transactions, select controls to test that were important to the conclusion about whether Biocoral's controls sufficiently addressed the risk of misstatement to each relevant assertion, and test the design effectiveness and operating effectiveness of controls.[20/]

16. Respondents also failed to gain an adequate understanding of the procedures performed by the French audit firm that supported its ICFR opinions of Biocoral subsidiaries Inoteb, Inc. and Biocoral France, and failed to evaluate the extent to which the work relating to the subsidiaries' ICFR could be used to reduce the work Respondents would otherwise have performed.[21/] Studer was unable to read the audit documentation prepared by the French firm, which was predominantly in French, and never had it translated. Under these circumstances, Respondents failed to participate sufficiently in the French firm's subsidiary's internal control audits to provide a basis for serving as the principal auditor of Biocoral's ICFR.[22/]

ORDER

17. In addition, to the extent the Firm, as the principal auditor, wholly relied on the French audit firm's subsidiary ICFR audits to audit Biocoral's ICFR, such reliance was unreasonable under the circumstances, given the Firm's failure to perform ICFR audit procedures on the other Biocoral subsidiaries unaddressed by the French firm's audits. The French firm's ICFR reports did not address the ICFR of the issuer, Biocoral, Inc., nor did they address six of Biocoral's other subsidiaries, which comprised approximately $4.6 million, or 92%, of Biocoral's total consolidated liabilities of $5.0 million, approximately $800,000, or 57%, of Biocoral's total consolidated assets of $1.4 million, approximately $342,000, or 51% of Biocoral's total consolidated operating expenses of $676,000, and approximately $216,000, or 100%, of total consolidated interest expense, net.

18. Respondents also failed to obtain required written representations from management relating to Biocoral's ICFR.[23/] The Firm's failure to obtain written representations from management, including management's refusal to furnish them, constitutes a limitation on the scope of the audit.[24/] Under these circumstances, Respondents failed to either withdraw from the engagement or disclaim the Firm's opinion in accordance with PCAOB standards.[25/]

ICFR Audit Documentation Failure

19. Given the lack of sufficient ICFR procedures by Respondents, the Firm's audit documentation relating to ICFR did not clearly demonstrate that the work was in fact performed, and did not demonstrate that the engagement complied with PCAOB standards or contain sufficient information to enable an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with the engagement, to understand the nature, timing, extent, and results of the procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached, and to determine who performed the work, the date such work was completed, the person who reviewed the work, and the date of such review.[26/] Prior to the report release date of March 27, 2009, Respondents had not, in violation of PCAOB standards, obtained sufficient evidence to support the Firm's ICFR opinion as of December 31, 2008.[27/]

Financial Statement Audit Failure - Intangible Assets

20. PCAOB standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[28/] Respondents failed to adhere to these standards with respect to the Firm's audit of Biocoral's reported net intangible assets at December 31, 2008.

21. Biocoral's financial statements as of and for the year ended December 31, 2008, reported net intangible assets of $774,000, which comprised approximately 55% of Biocoral's total consolidated assets as of December 31, 2008. During the audit, Respondents determined that Biocoral's intangible assets, comprised primarily of patents, posed a significant audit risk.

22. Notwithstanding the identified significant audit risk, Respondents failed to sufficiently audit Biocoral's patents by failing to: (1) perform procedures sufficient to assess whether the amounts recorded as patents as of December 31, 2008 existed; and (2) sufficiently determine whether Biocoral's patents were impaired (i.e., whether the carrying value of the patents exceeded their fair value). For example, Respondents failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter related to additions to the patent account balances during fiscal 2008.[29/]

23. During 2008, Biocoral capitalized intangible assets totaling approximately $134,000—an amount equal to approximately 17% of the December 31, 2008 net intangible asset balance. Respondents obtained listings of legal invoices in French detailing the costs capitalized, but failed to adequately test whether the nature of the costs capitalized was related to the patents and had a future benefit. Accordingly, Respondents failed, in violation of PCAOB standards, to design procedures relating to Biocoral's intangible asset account balance to obtain reasonable assurance of detecting misstatements that they believed, based on the preliminary judgment about materiality, could be material, when aggregated with misstatements in other balances or classes, to the financial statements taken as a whole.[30/]

24. Additionally, to test the existence of the patents, Respondents obtained and reviewed a listing of patents prepared by management. Studer knew the listing was outdated, but did not obtain an updated listing or take steps to check whether the patents listed had a future benefit. Respondents also failed to adhere to PCAOB standards by failing to determine the reasonableness of the useful lives of the patents and whether the patents' useful lives related to the periods over which the patents were expected to contribute to Biocoral's future cash flows.[31/]

25. Studer also knew, or should have known, that under generally accepted accounting principles in the United States ("GAAP"), specifically, Statement of Financial Accounting Standards ("SFAS") 142, it was necessary for Biocoral to review its patents for impairment in accordance with SFAS 144, Accounting for the Impairment or Disposal of Long-Lived Assets. To support the recoverability of its patents, Biocoral's management provided Respondents with a schedule of revenues that management projected would be generated by sales of product related to the patents during the next four years, with revenues increasing from $1.4 million in 2009 to $36.9 million in 2012.

26. Respondents knew that the projections on the schedule were overly optimistic, but accepted the schedule, without testing it or obtaining additional audit evidence, even though the schedule did not include all the information necessary to assess the valuation of the patents, such as the cash flows associated with: developing the products relating to the patents, generating revenues, or maintaining the patents.[32/] Moreover, Respondents knew that Biocoral had revenues of approximately $464,000 and $499,500 during the fiscal years ended December 31, 2007, and 2008, respectively, which were much lower than the projected revenues. Respondents were also aware that Biocoral had net losses from operations of approximately $438,000 and $388,000 and negative cash flows provided by operating activities of approximately $195,000 and $252,000 during the fiscal years ended December 31, 2007, and 2008, respectively—evidence suggesting continuing losses and significant cash outflows associated with the use of the patents. Respondents thus failed, in accordance with PCAOB standards, to be thorough and unbiased in the evaluation of the evidence obtained;[33/] to adequately review and test management's process for developing its estimate of the future cash flows associated with the patent costs recorded as intangible assets; and to adequately assess the reasonableness of management's estimate with professional skepticism in light of Biocoral's continuing losses and significant cash outflows.[34/]

Financial Statement Audit Documentation Failure

27. Studer, as the auditor with final responsibility for the audit, was responsible for ensuring that the Firm's audit of Biocoral's financial statements as of and for the year ended December 31, 2008 was properly documented under PCAOB standards. In violation of PCAOB standards, Respondents failed, in certain instances, to prepare and maintain audit documentation containing sufficient information to enable an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with the engagement, to determine who performed the work and the date such work was completed.[35/] For example, the Firm's audit documentation purporting to list Biocoral's patents, a listing of finished goods inventory, and a handwritten summary referencing the valuation of Biocoral's inventory, failed to contain this information.

Audits of the 2006 and 2007 Financial Statements of China Clean and China Kangtai

28. China Clean is a Delaware corporation with principal operations in Fujian, China. China Clean's filings disclose that its primary activity is the manufacture and distribution of biodiesel and specialty chemical products. At all relevant times, China Clean was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

29. China Kangtai is a Nevada corporation headquartered in Harbin, China, with principal operations in China. China Kangtai's public filings disclose that it produces and markets products derived from cacti, including cactus drinks and nutritional supplements. At all relevant times, China Kangtai was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

30. The Firm issued unqualified audit reports on China Clean's and China Kangtai's financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2006 and December 31, 2007, (dated March 8, 2007 and March 7, 2008 (China Clean) and March 30, 2007 and April 11, 2008 (China Kangtai), respectively).[36/] Those reports accompanied the issuers' Form 10-KSB filings with the Commission on March 13, 2007, March 12, 2008, April 2, 2007, and April 15, 2008, respectively. Studer understood he had final responsibility, as that phrase is used in AU § 311, for these audits.

31. In August 2006, Studer, on behalf of the Firm, entered into an agreement with a Canadian consulting firm, which was not registered with the PCAOB, to serve as assistants on audits of the Firm's issuer clients, including China Clean and China Kangtai. Studer had not previously worked with the Canadian firm or any of the provided assistants.

32. Studer primarily communicated with the assistants in Canada via e-mail and telephone. He did not visit the assistants except for once in August 2006, when he met some, but not all, of the assistants his Firm relied upon for the Firm's China Clean and China Kangtai audits. Studer never traveled to China to observe or supervise field work for the Firm's audits of China Clean and China Kangtai's 2006 and 2007 financial statements.

Audit Documentation Failure and Failure to Supervise

33. Studer understood that the Firm's audits of China Clean and China Kangtai's 2006 and 2007 financial statements were required to be documented in accordance with AS No. 3 and that he was responsible for ensuring that the audit engagement's documentation complied with PCAOB standards. Studer understood that as the auditor with final responsibility for the Firm's audits, he was responsible for supervising the work of his assistants, including those assistants provided by the Canadian firm.

34. Certain documentation prepared by the Firm's assistants based in Canada for the Firm's audits of China Clean and China Kangtai's 2006 and 2007 financial statements was not prepared in accordance with AS No. 3.[37/]

35. The deficient audit documentation appears in multiple audit areas in both the China Clean and China Kangtai audits. For example, for the 2006 audit of China

[36/] Of 42 issuer audit reports issued by the Firm for the periods ended March 31, 2011 and 2012, 16 were for issuers with substantially all of their operations in the People's Republic of China, the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, or Taiwan.

Clean, the Firm's fixed assets and cash lead sheets for Fujian Zhongde Technology Co., Ltd., the operating subsidiary for China Clean, do not contain any preparer or reviewer sign-offs and do not indicate the date of completion or review, as required by PCAOB standards.[38/] Inventory and receivables lead sheets from the audit work papers lack dates or any indication that they were reviewed during the audit. Similarly, the audit programs for the Firm's 2006 audit of China Clean show preparer initials in the "prepared by and date" column, but lack dates of completion or any evidence of review.

36. As these examples indicate, certain of Respondents' audit documentation for the Firm's audits of China Clean and China Kangtai's 2006 and 2007 financial statements does not, in violation of PCAOB standards, contain sufficient information to enable an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with the engagement, to determine who performed the work and the date such work was completed, and the person who reviewed the work and the date of such review.[39/] As such, it is difficult to determine if certain work was in fact performed.[40/] For example, the Firm's fraud risk procedures with respect to the 2006 and 2007 China Clean and China Kangtai audits, to the extent performed, were not documented.

37. In addition, certain of the audit programs in English included in the China Clean and China Kangtai audit work papers for the fiscal year ended December 31, 2007 were prepared by Firm assistants in late 2008, several months after the documentation completion dates for these audits. These audit programs include programs for the operating subsidiaries of China Clean and China Kangtai addressing planning; general auditing and completion; cash; accounts receivable and sales; inventory and cost of sales; inventory observation; property; other assets; accounts payable and other liabilities; notes payable and long-term debt; income taxes, capital stock and other equity accounts; income and expenses; and internal control procedures. This audit documentation failed to indicate the date the documentation was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding the programs to the audit work papers after the documentation completion date.[41/]

39. PCAOB standards provide that a firm should establish policies and procedures to provide it with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality.[43/] A firm should establish policies and procedures to encompass, among other things, engagement performance, including the establishment of policies and procedures to provide reasonable assurance that, among other things, personnel consult on a timely basis with individuals within or outside the firm when appropriate, for example, when dealing with unfamiliar issues.[44/]

40. A firm should also establish quality control policies and procedures relating to monitoring to provide reasonable assurance that the firm's policies and procedures regarding, among other things, engagement performance, are suitably designed and are being effectively applied.[45/] A firm should also communicate its quality control policies and procedures to its personnel in a manner that provides reasonable assurance that those policies and procedures are understood and complied with, and establish policies and procedures to provide reasonable assurance that work is assigned to personnel having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances.[46/] As described below, the Firm violated these quality control standards, and Studer directly and substantially contributed to those violations.

41. The Firm maintained and updated its quality control policies and procedures during the relevant audits. Those policies dictated, among other things, that work assigned to the Firm's assistants would, in accordance with PCAOB standards, be assigned to personnel having a requisite level of technical training and proficiency;[47/] that the work of assistants would be supervised and reviewed;[48/] and the Firm, when necessary, would consult with individuals with appropriate expertise within or outside the Firm to ensure the work performed meets appropriate standards of quality.[49/] The Firm also established monitoring procedures to effectuate the evaluation of, and compliance with, the Firm's quality control policies and procedures.[50/] The Firm, however, under Studer's direction, failed to adhere to these policies and procedures during the relevant audits.

42. During the Biocoral engagement, Studer, who had never performed an ICFR audit, failed to consult with individuals with appropriate expertise in order to ensure that the Firm's integrated audit met PCAOB standards, even though the Firm's quality control policies and procedures mandated that he do so.

43. During the China Clean and China Kangtai audits, the Firm heavily relied on audit assistants located in Canada who were unfamiliar with PCAOB audit documentation requirements. The Firm did not ensure that the work was assigned to assistants having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances to comply with PCAOB audit documentation standards and did not provide adequate supervision to evaluate compliance with PCAOB standards. Studer failed to ensure that the Firm's quality control policies and procedures were followed, or ensure that the work of the Firm's Canada-based assistants was appropriately reviewed, supervised and evaluated to determine whether it complied with PCAOB standards.

Despite creating quality control monitoring policies and procedures during the relevant audits, Studer never performed, in accordance with those policies and procedures, an evaluation of their efficiency and effectiveness, an assessment of the Firm's compliance with its quality control policies and procedures, an evaluation of the 45. Studer was the President of the Firm during the relevant time period. At all relevant times, Studer was responsible for designing, implementing, and monitoring the Firm's system of quality control. All of the Firm's conduct described above was either conduct of Studer's, or omissions to act for which Studer was responsible. With respect to all such acts and omissions, Studer knew, or was reckless in not knowing, that the act or omission would directly and substantially contribute to the quality control failings described above, which constituted violations of the Board's quality control standards. Studer thereby violated PCAOB Rule 3502.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Michael T. Studer, CPA, P.C. and Michael T. Studer, CPA, are hereby censured;

B. Pursuant to Sections 105(c)(4)(C), (F), and (G) of the Act and PCAOB Rules 5300(a)(3), (6), (7) and (9); the Board ORDERS that:

1. Acceptance of New SEC Issuer Audit Clients. From the date of this Order, the Firm shall not accept any new SEC Issuer Audit clients prior to the issuance of the Certificate of Compliance (defined at paragraph B(7)(i) below). The term "SEC Issuer Audit" is defined to mean an engagement to audit the consolidated financial statements filed with the Commission of an "Issuer" as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act.

2. Issuance of Audit Reports for SEC Issuers Subject to Section 404(b) of the Act. For a period of three years from the date of this Order, the Firm shall not issue an audit report for an SEC Issuer subject to the attestation and reporting requirements of Section 404(b) of the Act. Further, the Firm shall not issue such a report prior to the issuance of the Certificate of Compliance, and unless and until Michael T. Studer, CPA obtains 60 hours of continuing professional education relating to PCAOB audit standards, including 20 hours relating to PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 5, An Audit of Internal Control Over Financial Reporting That Is Integrated with An Audit of Financial Statements. The term "audit report" is defined in Section 2(a)(4) of the Act.

3. Issuance of Audit Reports for SEC Issuers in the China Region. From the date of this Order, the Firm shall not issue an audit report for an SEC Issuer client with substantially all of its operations in the People's Republic of China, the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, or Taiwan prior to the issuance of the Certificate of Compliance.

4. Certification of Broker-Dealer Financial Statements. From the date of this Order, the Firm shall not certify the financial statements, including the balance sheet and income statement, of a broker or dealer to be filed with the Commission pursuant to Section 17(e)(1)(A) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") prior to the issuance of the Certificate of Compliance. The term "broker" means, as set forth in PCAOB Rule 1001(b)(iii), a broker (as defined in Section 3(a)(4) of the Exchange Act), that is required to file a balance sheet, income statement, or other financial statement under Section 17(e)(1)(A) of that Act, where such balance sheet, income statement, or financial statement is required to be certified by a registered public accounting firm. The term "dealer" means, as set forth in PCAOB Rule 1001 (d)(iii), a dealer (as defined in Section 3(a)(5) of the Exchange Act), that is required to file a balance sheet, income statement, or other financial statement under Section 17(e)(1)(A) of that Act, where such balance sheet, income statement, or financial statement is required to be certified by a registered public accounting firm.

5. Playing a Substantial Role in the Preparation or Furnishing of an Audit Report. From the date of this Order, the Firm shall not "play a substantial role in the preparation or furnishing of an audit report" of another PCAOB-registered public accounting firm, as that phrase is defined by PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(ii), prior to the issuance of the Certificate of Compliance.

6. Service as Assistant, Engagement Partner or Engagement Quality Reviewer. From the date of this Order, Studer shall not serve as an assistant, the auditor with primary responsibility, or as engagement quality reviewer for an audit (as defined in Section 2(a)(2) of the Act) performed by another PCAOB-registered public accounting firm prior to the issuance of the Certificate of Compliance.

7. Undertakings Related to the Role of the Independent Monitor.

a. Independent Monitor Selection and Retention. Michael T. Studer, CPA, P.C., will retain and pay for an independent third-party monitor not unacceptable to the PCAOB staff ("Independent Monitor") to review Respondents' compliance with the undertakings set forth in this Order.

Within 60 days after the entry of this Order, Respondents shall submit to the PCAOB staff a proposal setting forth the identity, qualifications, and proposed terms of retention of the Independent Monitor. Respondents may not retain as the Independent Monitor any individual or entity that has provided legal, auditing, or other services to, or has had any affiliation with either of the Respondents or any of the Firm's SEC Issuer, broker or dealer audit clients during the prior two years.

Respondents agree that their engagement agreement with the Independent Monitor shall require the Independent Monitor to agree that, for the period of engagement and for a period of two years from completion of the engagement, the Independent Monitor shall not enter into any employment, consultant, attorney-client, auditing, or other professional relationship with Respondents, or any of their present or former affiliates, directors, officers, employees, or agents acting in their capacity as such, and shall require that any firm with which the Independent Monitor is affiliated or of which the Independent Monitor is a member, or any person engaged to assist the Independent Monitor in performance of the Independent Monitor's duties under the Order shall not, without prior written consent of the PCAOB staff, enter into any employment, consultant, attorney-client, auditing, or other professional relationship with Respondents, or any of their present or former affiliates, directors, officers, employees, or agents acting in their capacity as such for the period of the engagement and for a period of two years after the engagement. Respondents will provide to the PCAOB staff a copy of the engagement letter detailing the scope of the Independent Monitor's responsibilities. The date Respondents sign the engagement letter is the "Retention Date."

The term of the Independent Monitor shall expire upon the Certificate of Compliance Date. Respondents shall not have the authority to terminate the Independent Monitor before the Certificate of Compliance Date without the prior written approval of the PCAOB staff.

b. Role and Responsibilities Overview. The Independent Monitor will review and evaluate the quality control policies and procedures of Michael T. Studer, CPA, P. C., in areas including, but not limited to:

i. the requirements of PCAOB Rule 3400T, Interim Quality Control Standards, and related training;

ii. the requirements of QC § 20, System of Quality Control for a CPA Firm's Accounting and Auditing Practice, and related training;

ORDER

iii. the requirements of QC § 30, Monitoring a CPA Firm's Accounting and Auditing Practice, and related training;

iv. the requirements of PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation, and related training;

v. the requirements of PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 5, An Audit of Internal Control Over Financial Reporting That Is Integrated with An Audit of Financial Statements, and related training;

vi. the requirements of PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 9, Audit Planning, and related training; and

vii. the requirements of PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 10, Supervision of the Audit Engagement, and related training.

c. Review and Evaluation. The Independent Monitor's review and evaluation will assess the foregoing areas to determine whether the Firm has complied with this Order and whether the Firm's quality control policies and procedures provide reasonable assurance of compliance of the Firm's interim reviews and audits of SEC Issuer clients with PCAOB standards. Respondents will cooperate fully with the Independent Monitor and will provide reasonable access to firm personnel, information, and records as the Independent Monitor may reasonably request for the Independent Monitor's reviews and evaluations.

d. PCAOB Inspections. Respondents shall provide the Independent Monitor with PCAOB inspection comment forms and responses, and draft and final inspection reports in Respondents' possession pertaining to all prior PCAOB inspections of the Firm. The goal of this undertaking is to provide the Independent Monitor with additional information concerning criticisms or potential defects in the Firm's quality control system.

e. Report. Within 60 days of the Retention Date, the Independent Monitor will issue a written report ("Report") to the Firm: (a) summarizing the Independent Monitor's review and evaluation; and (b) making recommendations, where appropriate, reasonably designed to provide reasonable assurance of compliance of the Firm's interim reviews and audits of SEC Issuer clients with PCAOB standards. The Independent Monitor will provide a copy of the Report to the PCAOB staff when the Report is issued.

f. Firm Certification. Michael T. Studer, CPA, P.C, will adopt, as soon as practicable, all recommendations of the Independent Monitor in the Report. Within 30 days of the date of the issuance of the Report, Michael T. Studer, CPA, P. C., will certify in writing to the PCAOB staff that it has adopted and has implemented, or will implement without unnecessary delay, all recommendations of the Independent Monitor ("Firm Certification"). The Firm Certification shall identify recommendations the Firm has implemented and a timeline for any recommendations to be implemented; provide written evidence of implementation in the form of a narrative; and set forth evidence sufficient to demonstrate that the recommendations have been, or will be, implemented in a timely manner. PCAOB staff may make reasonable requests for further evidence of implementation and Respondents agree to provide such evidence.

g. Second Review and Evaluation. Within 90 days of the date of issuance of the Firm Certification, the Independent Monitor will conduct a "Second Review and Evaluation," to assess whether the Firm has effectively adopted and implemented all recommendations of the Independent Monitor, and whether the Firm's quality control policies and procedures provide reasonable assurance of compliance of the Firm's interim reviews and audits of SEC Issuer clients with PCAOB standards. Respondents will cooperate fully with the Independent Monitor and will provide reasonable access to firm personnel, information, and records as the Independent Monitor may reasonably request for the Second Review and Evaluation.

h. Subsequent Evaluations. If the Independent Monitor does not issue the Certificate of Compliance within 30 days of the Second Review and Evaluation, the Independent Monitor shall make, on a quarterly basis, additional recommendations to, and subsequent periodic evaluations of, Respondents, until such time as the Independent Monitor issues the Certificate of Compliance. Respondents will adopt and implement, or implement without unnecessary delay, all recommendations of the Independent Monitor. The Independent Monitor shall notify the PCAOB staff of all such recommendations and evaluations. Respondents will cooperate fully with the Independent Monitor and will provide reasonable access to firm personnel, information, and records as the Independent Monitor may reasonably request for any such further review and evaluation.

i. Certificate of Compliance. Upon findings by the Independent Monitor that: (i) the Firm has complied with the undertakings set forth in this Order; and that (ii) the Firm has evidenced that its quality control policies and procedures provide reasonable assurance of compliance of the Firm's interim reviews and audits of SEC Issuer clients with PCAOB standards, the Independent Monitor will certify in writing that the Firm has satisfied each of the above specified conditions (the "Certificate of Compliance"). The Certificate of Compliance shall include a narrative supported by exhibits sufficient to demonstrate compliance. The Independent Monitor will provide a copy of the Certificate of Compliance to the PCAOB staff when issued.

ORDER

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(G) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(9), the Firm shall provide a copy of this Order to its SEC Issuer audit clients by no later than 30 days after the date of this Order;

In determining whether to accept the Offers, the Board has considered these undertakings. Respondents agree that if the PCAOB staff believes that Respondents have not satisfied these undertakings within a reasonable time, said staff may petition the Board to reopen the matter to determine whether additional findings and sanctions are appropriate.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Lawrence H. Wolfe, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2012-005 September 7, 2012

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (the "Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Lawrence H. Wolfe, CPA ("Wolfe" or "Respondent") and permanently barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that Wolfe (a) violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the audits of four issuer clients; (b) violated Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the "Exchange Act") and Rule 10b-5 thereunder in connection with one of those issuer audits; and (c) directly and substantially contributed to a registered public accounting firm's violation of PCAOB quality control standards.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Wolfe.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement (the "Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary

Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions (the "Order") as set forth below.[1/]

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Lawrence H. Wolfe, 49, of Weston, Florida, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the State of Arizona (License No. 14587), the State of Florida (License No. AC0027223) and the State of New York (License No. 096865). At all relevant times, Wolfe was a partner at the public accounting firm, Jewett, Schwartz, Wolfe & Associates, P.L. ("JSW" or the "Firm"), which was the independent auditor for each of the issuers identified in footnote 5, below.[3/] Wolfe was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Wolfe had final responsibility for each audit at issue within the meaning of AU § 311, Planning and Supervision, was responsible for the supervision of the JSW engagement teams, and authorized the issuance of JSW's reports for each of the audits at issue. Wolfe was one of only two JSW partners

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondent in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

performing audits of public companies and was the leader of JSW's public company audit practice.[4/]

B. Summary

2. As detailed below, Wolfe violated PCAOB rules and PCAOB auditing standards in connection with the audits of four issuers' financial statements over a multiple year period (collectively, the "Audits").[5/] For each of the Audits, Wolfe failed to perform or ensure the performance of adequate, or sometimes any, audit procedures on material accounts; failed to properly supervise the engagement team personnel who performed most of the work on the Audits; and failed to ensure that the limited procedures that were performed during the Audits were properly documented.

3. Moreover, in one of the Audits, Wolfe and the JSW engagement team under his supervision failed to perform any procedures at all. Nevertheless, Wolfe authorized the issuance of an unqualified audit opinion on that issuer's financial statements, in violation of Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder.

4. Finally, prior to August 2009, Wolfe also was responsible for the development, implementation and monitoring of JSW's quality control policies and procedures. Despite those responsibilities, during the Audits, Wolfe took or omitted to take action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that his acts and/or omissions would directly and substantially contribute to JSW's violation of PCAOB quality control standards, in contravention of PCAOB Rule 3502, Responsibility Not to Knowingly or Recklessly Contribute to Violations.

[4/] See Uma D. Basso, CPA, PCAOB Release No. 105-2012-006 (September 7, 2012).

[5/] Specifically, the Audits consist of JSW's audits of: (a) the 2006 through 2008 financial statements of MedCom USA, Incorporated; (b) the 2008 financial statements of Dynamic Response Group, Inc.; (c) the 2008 financial statements of American Defense Systems, Inc.; and (d) the 2008 financial statements of Dolphin Digital Media, Inc.

ORDER

C. Respondent's Violations of the Securities Laws, PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

Audits of MedCom's 2006-2008 Financial Statements

5. At all relevant times, MedCom USA, Incorporated ("MedCom") was a Delaware corporation with its headquarters in Scottsdale, Arizona. The company's public filings disclosed that it processed medical information, including insurance eligibility verification. MedCom's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, MedCom was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

6. MedCom appointed JSW as its independent auditor on or about February 7, 2007. In audit reports dated September 14, 2007 and September 28, 200[8],[6/] JSW expressed unqualified opinions on MedCom's financial statements. Wolfe authorized the issuance of both audit reports. The September 14, 2007 audit report concerned MedCom's financial statements for the year ended June 30, 2007 and its restated financial statements for the year ended June 30, 2006, and was included in a Form 10-KSB that MedCom filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission") on September 28, 2007. The September 28, 2008 audit report concerned MedCom's financial statements for the years ended June 30, 2008 and June 30, 2007, and was included in a Form 10-K that MedCom filed with the Commission on September 29, 2008. Both reports, which included going concern explanatory paragraphs, stated that, in JSW's opinion, MedCom's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States ("US GAAP"), and that JSW's audits were conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

MedCom's Restated 2006 Financial Statements

7. Another registered public accounting firm initially audited MedCom's financial statements for the year ended June 30, 2006. After JSW accepted the MedCom engagement, MedCom restated its 2006 financial statements and included those restated financial statements in the Form 10-KSB it filed with the Commission on September 28, 2007.

[6/] The audit report issued in 2008 was erroneously dated September 28, 2007.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

8. JSW did not conduct an audit of MedCom's restated 2006 financial statements. Wolfe nonetheless authorized the issuance of an audit opinion that stated that JSW had conducted an audit of MedCom's restated 2006 financial statements, and had done so in accordance with PCAOB standards.

9. Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Commission Rule 10b-5 thereunder prohibit a person, in connection with the purchase or sale of a security, from making an untrue statement of a material fact or from omitting to state a material fact necessary to make statements made, in light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading. To violate Section 10(b) or Rule 10b-5, a defendant must act with scienter,[7/] which the Supreme Court has defined as "a mental state embracing intent to deceive, manipulate, or defraud."[8/] Scienter encompasses knowing or intentional conduct, or recklessness.[9/]

10. An auditor violates Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder by issuing an audit report stating that the audit has been performed in accordance with PCAOB standards when he knows, or is reckless in not knowing, that the statement is false.[10/] These statements are clearly material, as "[f]ew matters could be more important to investors than that of whether an issuer's financial statements, contained in its filings with the Commission, had, in fact, been subjected to an annual audit conducted in accordance with [PCAOB standards] in all material respects."[11/]

11. Wolfe knew, or was reckless in not knowing, that JSW personnel had not performed any audit procedures with respect to MedCom's restated 2006 financial statements. By nevertheless authorizing issuance of an audit report on those financial statements, Wolfe violated Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5.

Audits of MedCom's 2007 and 2008 Financial Statements

12. Wolfe also failed to comply with applicable professional standards in connection with the audits of MedCom's 2007 and 2008 financial statements. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[12/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[13/] Among other things, PCAOB standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[14/] PCAOB standards also prohibit an auditor from relying on management representations as a substitute for performing audit procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion on an issuer's financial statements and require an auditor to investigate when management representations are contradicted by other audit evidence.[15/]

13. PCAOB auditing standards also require that audits be adequately planned and assistants be properly supervised.[16/] Supervision includes "directing the efforts of assistants who are involved in accomplishing the objectives of the audit," reviewing their work, and "determining whether th[e] objectives [of the audit] were accomplished."[17/] In reviewing the work of assistants, an auditor should take care to both "determine whether it was adequately performed and to evaluate whether the results are consistent with the conclusions to be presented in the auditor's report."[18/] In supervising assistants, "[t]he auditor with final responsibility for the audit should direct assistants to bring to his attention significant accounting and auditing questions raised during the audit so that he may assess their significance."[19/]

14. Wolfe failed to comply with these and other auditing standards in connection with the 2007 and 2008 MedCom audits. First, Wolfe failed to appropriately supervise both of those audits.[20/] The engagement team for both audits consisted of Wolfe, as the auditor with final responsibility, and one JSW staff member who was not licensed as a certified public accountant in the United States and had limited experience auditing public companies. The staff member performed almost all of the audit work during the 2007 and 2008 MedCom audits, and Wolfe failed to review much of that work.

15. Second, during the 2007 and 2008 MedCom audits, Wolfe failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient competent evidential matter to support JSW's audit opinions.[21/] Specifically, Wolfe failed to perform, or ensure the performance of, any audit procedures during the 2007 audit with respect to MedCom's reported revenue of $4 million. Wolfe also failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, any competent evidence during the 2007 audit as to the existence, completeness and valuation of MedCom's reported notes payable. Wolfe's failures with respect to MedCom's notes payable were particularly significant because those notes were Medcom's primary means of funding its business, were its largest liability, representing 69% of MedCom's total reported liabilities in 2007, and, according to MedCom's 2007 Form 10-KSB, had been substantially renegotiated during 2007.

16. Additionally, in both the 2007 and 2008 MedCom audits, Wolfe failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient competent evidential matter with respect to MedCom's largest reported asset, contract receivables, which represented 63% and 47% of MedCom's total reported assets in 2007 and 2008, respectively. In 2007, the JSW engagement team prepared a memorandum with respect to contract receivables in which the team described work it had purportedly performed and documented in other work papers. JSW and Wolfe, however, were unable to identify those other work papers, and neither Wolfe nor the other engagement team member recalled performing any such procedures. In 2008, the engagement team obtained copies of certain contracts and a management schedule listing contract receivable balances as of year-end. However, Wolfe failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, any evidence to substantiate or test those year-end balances provided by management.

17. Finally, Wolfe failed to comply with PCAOB documentation standards in the 2007 MedCom audit.[22/] PCAOB documentation standards require that an auditor make certain written disclosures if the auditor adds documentation to the audit work papers after the documentation completion date.[23/] Specifically, information added to the work papers after the documentation completion date must indicate the date the information was added, the person preparing the additional information, and the reason for adding the information to the work papers after the documentation completion date.[24/] Wolfe and the other member of the engagement team under his supervision violated these requirements in the 2007 MedCom audit. Specifically, well after the documentation completion date for the 2007 audit, the staff member under Wolfe's supervision prepared a "Supervision, Review, and Approval" form that Wolfe signed and dated as if it had been prepared prior to the documentation completion date. The staff member under Wolfe's supervision also prepared a "Disclosure Requirements" checklist well after the documentation completion date and similarly dated it to make it appear that it had been prepared prior to the documentation completion date. Those documents were then included in the work papers, without any explanation as to why they had been added after the documentation completion date and without any indication that they had actually been prepared after the sign-off dates.

Audit of DRG's 2008 Financial Statements

18. At all relevant times, Dynamic Response Group, Inc. ("DRG") was a Florida corporation with its headquarters in Miami, Florida. The company's public filings disclosed that it marketed, developed and distributed personal development, wellness and entertainment consumer goods and services. DRG's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, DRG was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

19. Wolfe authorized the issuance of an audit report dated March 10, 2009, in which JSW expressed an unqualified opinion on DRG's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008. The report was included in a Form 10-K that DRG filed with the Commission on April 15, 2009. The audit report, which included a going concern explanatory paragraph, stated that, in JSW's opinion, DRG's 2008 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with US GAAP, and that JSW's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. Wolfe failed to comply with applicable PCAOB standards in connection with the audit of DRG's 2008 financial statements.

20. DRG reported in the notes to its 2008 financial statements that it had incurred advertising expenses during 2008 and that it had capitalized approximately $840,000 of those expenses as "direct response advertising" pursuant to AICPA Statement of Position ("SOP") 93-7, Reporting on Advertising Costs (December 29, 1993). DRG's capitalized direct response advertising balance for 2008 represented an increase of over 350% from the prior year and constituted 21% of DRG's total reported assets.

21. SOP 93-7 provides that a company may only capitalize advertising expenses as direct response advertising if (1) the primary purpose of the advertising "is to elicit sales to customers who could be shown to have responded specifically to the advertising;" and (2) the advertising "results in probable future benefits."[25/] In addition, SOP 93-7 states that direct response advertising costs reported as assets are to be "amortized on a cost-pool-by-cost-pool basis over the period during which the future benefits are expected to be received."[26/]

22. During the 2008 audit, Wolfe failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient audit evidence to conclude that DRG was appropriately capitalizing, as opposed to expensing, the costs it reported as direct response advertising.[27/] Specifically, Wolfe failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, audit evidence indicating that sales were to customers responding specifically to the advertising. Nor did Wolfe obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient competent audit evidence indicating that the advertising would result in probable future benefits to DRG. In addition, Wolfe failed to perform, or ensure the performance of, any procedures to evaluate whether DRG was appropriately amortizing the amounts it capitalized as direct response advertising. Indeed, JSW's work papers include a schedule, provided by DRG, indicating that the company was not amortizing those amounts.

23. During the 2008 audit, Wolfe also failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient competent evidential matter concerning promissory note obligations that represented approximately 21% of DRG's total reported liabilities. In the notes to the financial statements, DRG reported that the maturity dates on its promissory notes had been extended until late 2010 and early 2011. Confirmations included in JSW's work papers, however, indicated that DRG's promissory notes matured in 2009. Wolfe failed to take any steps, or ensure that the engagement team took any steps, to reconcile the disclosures in the financial statements with the contradictory information contained in the work papers.[28/] Wolfe also failed to perform, or ensure the performance of, audit procedures to evaluate whether the outstanding note balance was complete, and whether the notes were properly classified, described, and disclosed as current liabilities.

Audit of ADS's 2008 Financial Statements

24. American Defense Systems, Inc. ("ADS") is a Delaware corporation with its headquarters in Hicksville, New York. The company's public filings disclose that it develops defense and security products. ADS's common stock is registered under Section 12(b) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the American Stock Exchange. At all relevant times, ADS was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

25. In April 2009, Wolfe authorized the issuance of an audit report in which JSW expressed an unqualified audit opinion on ADS's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008. The report was included in a Form 10-K that ADS filed with the Commission on April 15, 2009. The audit report stated that, in JSW's opinion, ADS's 2008 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with US GAAP, and that JSW's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

26. Wolfe failed to comply with applicable PCAOB standards in connection with the audit of ADS's 2008 financial statements. Specifically, Wolfe failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient competent evidential matter as to the existence and valuation of ADS's accounts receivable.[29/] As of year-end 2008, those receivables represented approximately 30% of ADS's current assets and 20% of its total assets, and ADS maintained no allowance for doubtful accounts.

27. During the audit, the engagement team, under Wolfe's supervision, concluded that sending confirmations to ADS's customers would be ineffective and, accordingly, planned to review subsequent cash receipts to test ADS's accounts receivable balance.[30/] However, that subsequent cash receipts testing was inadequate. First, the testing was not completed until several months after the audit. Second, although JSW's work papers indicate that ADS had collected certain receivables after year-end 2008, in fact, the engagement team was aware that some of those receivables were still outstanding as of June 30, 2009.

Audit of DDM's 2008 Financial Statements

28. Dolphin Digital Media, Inc. ("DDM") is a Nevada corporation with its principal offices located in Miami, Florida. The company's public filings disclose that it creates and manages social networking websites for children. DDM's common stock is registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and trades on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, DDM was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

29. Wolfe authorized the issuance of an audit report dated April 13, 2009, in which JSW expressed an unqualified audit opinion on DDM's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008. The report was included in a Form 10-K that DDM filed with the Commission on April 14, 2009. The audit report, which included a going concern explanatory paragraph, stated that, in JSW's opinion, DDM's 2008 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position in conformity with US GAAP, and that JSW's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

30. Wolfe failed to comply with applicable PCAOB standards in connection with the audit of DDM's 2008 financial statements. The audit team consisted of Wolfe, as auditor with final responsibility, and two JSW staff members with limited experience auditing public companies. The staff members performed almost all of the audit work, and Wolfe again failed to review much of that work. Wolfe's failure to appropriately supervise the 2008 DDM audit violated PCAOB standards.[31/]

31. Wolfe also failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient audit evidence with respect to DDM's largest assets. As of year-end 2008, more than 75% of DDM's total reported assets were classified as intangible assets and consisted mostly of website and platform development costs for an unlaunched product. During the audit of DDM's 2008 financial statements, Wolfe failed to appropriately test, or ensure that the engagement team appropriately tested, DDM's intangible asset balance for impairment. The work papers reflect that management's basis for not recognizing an impairment on its intangible assets in 2008 was a cash flow projection. Wolfe and the engagement team, however, performed no procedures to assess the reasonableness of the cash flow projection, including the relevance, sufficiency, and reliability of the data supporting the projection and the assumptions management made in formulating the projection.[32/] In addition, the untested cash flow projection was inconsistent with Wolfe's conclusion that there was substantial doubt as to DDM's ability to continue operating as a going concern.[33/]

32. Wolfe also failed to comply with AS3 in connection with the audit of DDM's 2008 financial statements. AS3 provides that the documentation for an audit "must contain sufficient information to enable an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with the engagement: [a.] [t]o understand the nature, timing, extent, and results of the procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached, and [b.] [t]o determine who performed the work and the date such work was completed as

D. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rule 3502

33. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm comply with the Board's quality control standards.[35/] PCAOB quality control standards require that a registered public accounting firm "shall have a system of quality control for its accounting and auditing practice."[36/] PCAOB quality control standards state that policies and procedures "should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality."[37/] Additionally, PCAOB quality control standards provide that policies and procedures "should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that the policies and procedures established by the firm for each of the other elements of quality control . . . are suitably designed and are being effectively applied," and that "its system of quality control is effective."[38/] Finally, quality control policies and procedures should be communicated to a firm's personnel in a manner that provides reasonable assurance that they are understood and complied with.[39/]

knowing, that the act or omission would directly and substantially contribute to a violation of Board standards by that firm.[40/] As detailed below, JSW failed to comply with PCAOB quality control standards in connection with the Audits, and Wolfe took, or omitted to take, actions that he knew, or was reckless in not knowing, would directly and substantially contribute to JSW's violations.

35. In connection with filing its Application for Registration with the PCAOB in 2003, JSW submitted a list of quality control policies covering, among other things, engagement performance and monitoring. Subsequently, JSW generated other quality control documents based on commercial publications.

36. At all relevant times, Wolfe was responsible for designing, implementing, communicating, and monitoring JSW's quality control policies and procedures. Wolfe, however, failed to adequately implement or communicate to JSW personnel any such policies and procedures.[41/] In particular, Wolfe failed to implement and communicate policies and procedures to ensure that engagement personnel performed audit procedures necessary to comply with PCAOB standards.[42/] As a result, in multiple instances, JSW personnel failed to complete necessary audit work before the Firm released its audit opinions for the Audits, and, in other instances, failed to perform any significant work in critical audit areas.

37. Wolfe also failed to implement and communicate policies and procedures with respect to monitoring the application of the Firm's system of quality control.[43/] Indeed, although JSW's written quality control documents stated that the Firm would "evaluate on an ongoing basis whether the other elements of quality control established by the firm are suitably designed and are being effectively applied," no such monitoring actually occurred in the period during which Wolfe had responsibility for JSW's quality control policies and procedures.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Dale Arnold Hotz, CPA, Jyothi Nuthulaganti Manohar, CPA and Michael Jared Fadner, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2012-008 November 13, 2012

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is: (1) censuring Dale Arnold Hotz, CPA ("Hotz") and barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm;[1/] (2) censuring Jyothi Nuthulaganti Manohar, CPA ("Manohar") and suspending her from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm for a period of one year from the date of this Order; and (3) censuring Michael Jared Fadner, CPA ("Fadner"). The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that Hotz, Manohar and Fadner (collectively, "Respondents") violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the improper creation, addition, alteration and/or backdating of audit documentation prior to a Board inspection.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondents.

[1/] Hotz may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, each Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[2/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[3/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Dale Arnold Hotz, 54, of Harpers Ferry, West Virginia, is a certified public accountant who is licensed under the laws of the States of Maryland (license no. 35577), New Jersey (license no. 20CC03329100) and North Carolina (license no. N645), the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (license no. CA051121), and the District of Columbia (license no. CPA901337). At all relevant times, Hotz was a partner in the Frederick, Maryland office of the registered public accounting firm of McGladrey & Pullen, LLP (the "Firm" or "M&P"),[4/] and an associated person of a registered public

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[3/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents Hotz and Manohar in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents Hotz's and Manohar's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Based upon his conduct in connection with the Board inspection of the audit discussed below, M&P disciplined Hotz; among other things, M&P restricted Hotz from serving on engagements governed by PCAOB standards for audit and interim review periods ending on or before March 15, 2012.

2. Jyothi Nuthulaganti Manohar, 52, of Rose Valley, Pennsylvania, is a certified public accountant who is licensed under the laws of the State of New Jersey (license no 20CC03303900) and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (license no. CA025959L). At all relevant times, Manohar was a director in M&P's Blue Bell, Pennsylvania office, and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Based upon her conduct in connection with the Board inspection of the audit described below, M&P disciplined Manohar; among other things, M&P restricted Manohar from serving on engagements governed by PCAOB standards for audit and interim review periods ending on or before March 15, 2012.

3. Michael Jared Fadner, 31, of Souderton, Pennsylvania, is a certified public accountant who is licensed under the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (license no. CA051200) and the State of Texas (license no. 087301). At all relevant times, Fadner was an assurance manager in M&P's Blue Bell, Pennsylvania office, and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Based upon his conduct in connection with the Board inspection of the audit described below, M&P disciplined Fadner; among other things, M&P placed restrictions upon Fadner's role on engagements governed by PCAOB standards for audit and interim review periods ending on or before March 15, 2012. In July 2011, Fadner resigned from M&P and ceased participating in issuer audit engagements.

B. Summary

4. M&P has been the independent auditor for the "Company" (as defined below in ¶6) since March 2007. M&P issued an audit report expressing an unqualified opinion on the Company's December 31, 2009 financial statements. Hotz was the engagement partner for the Firm's audit of the Company's December 31, 2009 financial statements (the "Audit"). Hotz supervised the members of the Audit engagement team and had overall responsibility for ensuring their compliance with PCAOB rules and auditing standards related to the Audit. Manohar served as engagement manager on the Audit. Her work on the Audit was supervised by Hotz, she supervised junior members of the Audit team, and she had responsibility for ensuring their compliance with PCAOB rules and auditing standards related to the Audit. Fadner served as in-charge on the Audit. During the Audit, Hotz and Manohar supervised Fadner.

5. This matter concerns Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards. Respondents repeatedly violated both PCAOB Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, and Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS3"). In advance of field work for the Board's inspection of the Audit, Respondents Hotz, Manohar, and Fadner improperly created and/or added documents to the audit documentation, Hotz altered certain audit documentation by adding information to documents, and Fadner backdated a document added to the audit documentation, all in violation of Rule 4006. Further, Hotz provided false and misleading information to the PCAOB, in violation of Rule 4006. In violation of AS3, Respondents added documents to the audit documentation, and Hotz altered certain audit documentation, without indicating the date that information was added to the work papers, the name of the persons preparing the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it after the documentation completion date.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

6. The Company is an "issuer" as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). In December 2010, the Board inspected M&P's audit of the Company's December 31, 2009 financial statements.

7. PCAOB rules require that an associated person of a registered public accounting firm "shall cooperate with the Board in the performance of any Board inspection."[5/] This cooperation obligation "includes an obligation not to provide misleading documents or information in connection with the Board's inspection processes."[6/] PCAOB rules also require that associated persons of registered public accounting firms comply with the Board's auditing standards.[7/] Among other things, PCAOB auditing standards require that certain written disclosures be included if the auditor adds to the audit documentation after the documentation completion date.[8/] As detailed below, Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards when they: (1) improperly created, added to, altered, and/or backdated audit work papers; and (2) provided misleading audit documentation and information to the Board in connection with the Board's inspection of the Audit.

The Audit

8. M&P audited the Company's December 31, 2009 financial statements. M&P's audit report expressed an unqualified opinion and stated that the Audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. The audit report stated that the Company's December 31, 2009 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the Company's financial position, results of operations and cash flows in conformity with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles. The audit report was included in the Company's annual report, included within a Form 10-K filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission").

9. The report release date for the Audit is defined as "the date the auditor grants permission to use the auditor's report in connection with the issuance of the company's financial statements."[9/] The documentation completion date is defined as "a date not more than 45 days after the report release date."[10/] Audit documentation must not be deleted or discarded after the documentation completion date; however, information may be added.[11/] Any documentation added must indicate the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it.[12/]

Steps Taken in Advance of the Board's Inspection

10. On November 17, 2010, the Board notified M&P that the Board's Division of Registration and Inspections ("Board's Inspection Division") would inspect the Audit (the "Inspection"). The Act "requires the Board to conduct a 'continuing program of inspections to assess the degree of compliance of each registered public accounting firm and associated persons . . . with [the Act], the rules of the Board, the rules of the Commission, or professional standards.'"[13/]

11. On or about November 17, 2010, Respondents were notified that the Audit would be inspected by the Board's Inspection Division. Field work for the Inspection was scheduled to begin on Monday, December 6, 2010.

Respondents Reviewed the Work Papers on December 3, 2010

12. The audit documentation for the Audit included both electronic work papers and hard copy work papers (the "hard copy work papers").

13. On December 1, 2010, an M&P colleague recommended to Hotz that, before a PCAOB inspection, he should review the work papers to refresh his memory about the audit focus areas.

14. Also on December 1, 2010, Hotz and Manohar received an email from M&P, reminding them to have the hard copy work paper files for the Audit available for the PCAOB Inspections team to review. They were told that M&P would separately make the electronic work papers for the Audit available to the Board's Inspection Division. Manohar forwarded this message to Fadner, who then retrieved the hard copy work papers for the Audit from the file room in the Firm's Blue Bell office. On December 3, 2010, Fadner informed Manohar that he had the hard copy work paper files in his office. Later that morning, he brought those hard copy work papers to Manohar's office.

15. Respondents planned a teleconference for Friday, December 3, 2010, to prepare for the PCAOB's Inspection field work scheduled to begin on Monday, December 6, 2010.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

16. On the morning of Friday, December 3, 2010, prior to the planned teleconference, Manohar and Fadner met in Manohar's office to begin preparing for the Inspection field work. During this meeting, Manohar and Fadner reviewed the audit documentation and, as is discussed below, they identified two documents that were absent from the audit documentation – an engagement letter with an original client signature, and a cash flow worksheet – and decided to obtain and/or create those documents and add them to the hard copy work papers.

17. Later on December 3, 2010, Hotz, from his office in Frederick, Maryland, spoke with Manohar and Fadner via teleconference, to prepare for the Inspection. During this teleconference, Respondents reviewed the audit documentation and, as is discussed below, Hotz and Manohar identified a document absent from the audit documentation – a document relating to the fair value of financial instruments – and decided to create and add it to the hard copy work papers.

Fadner Altered and Backdated the Cash Flow Worksheet, and Upon Manohar's Instructions,
Fadner Improperly Added the Cash Flow Worksheet to the Hard Copy Work Papers

18. During the Audit, the Company had sent its auditors a package to support its financial statements, including a document (the "cash flow worksheet") the engagement team could use to review the statement of cash flows. The engagement team had a practice of using the cash flow worksheet in its audits of the Company (adding handwritten tick-marks and cross-references to the document during its use) and maintaining the cash flow worksheet in the audit documentation.

19. During the December 3, 2010 meeting between Manohar and Fadner, Manohar noticed that the electronic Audit work papers did not contain a cash flow worksheet. Fadner reviewed the hard copy work paper files, but could not find the cash flow worksheet there, either. On his laptop computer's hard drive, Fadner found an electronic copy of a cash flow worksheet that was prepared and provided by the Company and that was not in the electronic work papers. There were no tick-marks or other evidence that it was used during the Audit.

20. Manohar directed Fadner to print the cash flow work sheet from his computer and add it to the hard copy work papers. On December 3, 2010, Fadner printed the cash flow worksheet from his computer.

21. On the morning of December 6, 2010, the day Inspection field work began, Fadner handwrote tick-marks, cross-references, footings and recalculations to the cash flow worksheet he printed on December 3, 2010, to reflect work purportedly performed during the audit. On the cover page of the cash flow worksheet, Fadner wrote his initials and backdated the cash flow worksheet to March 6, 2010 (a date during the Audit). Fadner added the cash flow worksheet, with his new tick-marks, cross-references, footings and recalculations, to the hard copy work paper files. Manohar knew that Fadner added the cash flow worksheet to the hard copy work papers. The cash flow worksheet that Fadner added to the hard copy work papers, upon Manohar's instructions, did not indicate the date it was added to the audit documentation or the reason for adding it.

Manohar and Fadner Improperly Added the Engagement Letter with Original Client Signature to the Hard Copy Work Papers

22. During the December 3, 2010 meeting between Manohar and Fadner, Manohar noticed that the hard copy work papers for the Audit did not contain an engagement letter bearing an original client signature. Manohar understood that M&P policy required an audit team to maintain an engagement letter with an original signature. On December 3, 2010, Manohar contacted the Company to request the hard copy engagement letter with an original client signature so that it could be added to the hard copy work papers before Inspection field work commenced on December 6, 2010. Manohar asked Fadner to follow-up on her request.

23. On December 3, 2010, Fadner contacted the Company's corporate controller via email to obtain a hard copy engagement letter with an original client signature. Fadner asked that the letter be delivered early on the morning of December 6, 2010. After a series of emails, the Company's controller told Fadner that the Company would have the engagement letter with original client signature delivered to Manohar by 8:30 a.m. on December 6, 2010.

24. On the morning of December 6, 2010, the day Inspection field work began, the engagement letter with original client signature was delivered to the Firm's Blue Bell, Pennsylvania office. That morning, Manohar received the courier envelope containing the engagement letter, removed the engagement letter from the envelope, verified that the engagement letter bore an original client signature and brought the engagement letter to Fadner's office, where the hard copy work papers were. The engagement letter with original client signature was added to the hard copy work paper files on December 6, 2010, after the documentation completion date. The engagement letter with original client signature did not indicate the date it was added to the audit documentation, the names of the persons who prepared it, or the reason for adding it.

Hotz and Manohar Created the Fair Value Memorandum and Improperly Added it to the Hard Copy Work Papers

25. In advance of his December 3, 2010 teleconference with Manohar and Fadner, Hotz reviewed the Firm's electronic work papers for the Audit and noticed that they did not contain a "Fair Value Memorandum." Hotz and Manohar had a practice of summarizing the work performed by the engagement team to test their client's fair value measurements of financial instruments and related disclosures in such a memorandum. During the December 3, 2010 teleconference, Manohar also noticed that the electronic work papers did not contain the Fair Value Memorandum and asked Hotz whether she should prepare a Fair Value Memorandum for the Audit; Hotz responded that Manohar should do so.

26. On the evening of Sunday, December 5, 2010, Manohar drafted a Fair Value Memorandum for the Audit (using the format of a Fair Value Memorandum that was prepared in connection with another audit). Manohar emailed her first draft of the Fair Value Memorandum to Hotz. Hotz commented to and corrected Manohar on the first draft of the Fair Value Memorandum. The first draft of the Fair Value Memorandum stated that Company management had provided certain assumptions to one of the specialists retained by the Company to calculate its fair value calculations. Hotz commented, "Kind of begs the questions whether we reviewed those assumptions and if they were reasonable." In response, Manohar revised the draft Fair Value Memorandum to remove reference to management providing those specific assumptions. In an email, Manohar also stated that she added information to the next draft of the memo about the evaluation of a specialist because "[w]e indicated in the partner planning memo that we would."

27. Manohar sent a revised draft Fair Value Memorandum to Hotz, who approved it as the final memorandum. Hotz printed the final Fair Value Memorandum; initialed it; wrote "Footnote 20" at the top of the first page; and added the newly-created final Fair Value Memorandum to the hard copy work paper files for the Audit. The Fair Value Memorandum did not indicate the date it was added to the audit documentation or the reason for adding it.

Hotz Improperly Added the Specialist Memo to the Hard Copy Work Papers

28. For its December 31, 2009 financial statements, the Company utilized the work of a specialist (the "Specialist") in its calculation of certain fair value measurements for the Audit. During the Audit, M&P relied on the work of the Specialist. This Specialist provided specialist services both to the Firm (in other audits) and to the Firm's clients (as in this Audit).

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

29. After the Audit and the documentation completion date, Hotz obtained a memorandum (the "Specialist Memo") prepared by the Specialist that described its qualifications, and generally described the nature of the type of work it performed in its engagements, the assumptions and other sources of data it used in its engagements, and the way that an auditor could obtain an understanding of the nature of the work the Specialist performed. The Specialist Memo was not obtained, created, or considered in connection with the Audit, and it was not placed in the audit documentation before the documentation completion date. Hotz maintained a copy of the Specialist Memo on his computer's hard drive.

30. In advance of the Inspection field work, Hotz remembered that he had received the Specialist Memo from the Specialist, and between December 3, 2010 and December 5, 2010, Hotz located it on his computer's hard drive. Hotz printed a copy of the Specialist Memo from his computer, initialed its bottom right hand corner, and on December 5, 2010, he added the Specialist Memo to the hard copy work paper files for the Audit. The Specialist Memo that Hotz added to the hard copy work papers on December 5, 2010 did not indicate the date it was added to the audit documentation or the reason for adding it.

Hotz Improperly Signed Documents Within the Hard Copy Work Papers

31. During the December 3, 2010 teleconference, Manohar mentioned that the three Quarterly Engagement Release Records in the hard copy work papers, for the first three quarters of 2009, were not manually signed. On December 5, 2010, Hotz searched through the hard copy work papers for these documents and located them. Hotz manually signed, but did not date, the three Quarterly Engagement Release Records, months after the documentation completion date, without indicating the date he added his signature to these documents in the hard copy work papers or the reasons for signing them after the documentation completion date.

Hotz Improperly Initialed Documents Within the Hard Copy Work Papers

32. On the evening of December 5, 2010, Hotz also added handwritten initials to eleven hard-copy documents within the hard copy work papers. These documents were:

a. four hard copy Management Representations:

   i. three Management Representation Letters, one for each of the Company's first, second and third quarter Forms 10-Q; and

   ii. a Management Representation Letter relating to the Audit.

ORDER

b. three hard copy Legal Representations:

i. a Legal Representation letter from the Company's legal counsel;

ii. a Legal Representation email from the Company's legal counsel, updating the prior legal representation letter; and

iii. a Legal Representation letter from another of the Company's legal counsel that Hotz did not review during the Audit.

c. a Confirmation Selection Memo.

d. an Engagement Report Release and Delivery Record for the Audit.

e. two Engagement Letters: an engagement letter[14/] and an amended engagement letter.

Hotz initialed these documents in the hard copy work papers without indicating the date the initials were added to the hard copy work papers or the reasons for initialing them after the documentation completion date.

Hotz Improperly Altered a Document
Within the Hard Copy Work Papers by Adding Information

33. Among the hard copy work papers was a copy of Exhibit 13 to the Company's 2009 Form 10-K, Management's Discussion & Analysis of Financial Condition & Results of Operations ("Exhibit 13"), which included M&P's audit opinion and the Company's financial statements with accompanying footnotes. The copy of Exhibit 13 bore handwritten annotations, including cross-references. The electronic work papers did not contain a copy of this annotated Exhibit 13.

34. On the evening of December 5, 2010, Hotz reviewed that document, noted that the last three footnotes to the financial statements were not cross-referenced,

[14/] On December 5, 2010, Hotz initialed a black and white copy of this engagement letter that was in the hard copy work papers. The next day, Manohar and Fadner obtained the same engagement letter – with an original client signature – and improperly added it to the hard copy work papers. (See ¶24, above.)

and added handwritten annotations (cross-references) to the last three footnotes to the financial statements within the hard copy Exhibit 13. Hotz added this information without indicating the date he had done so, the name of the person who added the information, or the reasons for adding it.

Misleading Documents Provided to the Board During the Board's Inspection

35. Field work for the Board's Inspection took place during the week of December 6, 2010. On December 6, 2010, Fadner delivered the hard copy work papers to the Board's inspectors, including the documents that were improperly created, backdated, and/or added to the hard copy work papers shortly before the Board's Inspection field work commenced. The hard copy documents that Fadner delivered to the Board's inspectors also included the documents that were improperly altered within the hard copy work papers shortly before the Board's Inspection field work began. Respondents did not advise the inspectors that any of these documents were improperly created, backdated, added to the work papers, or altered in December 2010.

36. As a result of the conduct described above, Respondents violated PCAOB Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, and AS3, Audit Documentation.

The Misleading Updated Engagement Profile

37. On November 29, 2010 (before Inspection field work began), Hotz submitted to the Board a document entitled Public Company Accounting Oversight Board 2010 Inspection Period Engagement Profile (the "Engagement Profile"). Hotz drafted the Engagement Profile, with the assistance of others on the Audit engagement team.

38. One of the questions in the Engagement Profile asked: "Have there been any changes made to the audit documentation subsequent to the documentation complete [sic] date [?] If yes, please explain the nature of the changes below, and provide a summary log of when the changes were made." In reply to this question, Hotz represented: "No changes have been made."

39. During field work for the PCAOB Inspection of the Audit, the PCAOB inspectors asked Hotz to revise the Engagement Profile. Hotz made the revisions. On December 8, 2010, Hotz updated and submitted another Engagement Profile to the Board's Inspection Division. The updated Engagement Profile that Hotz submitted to the Board's Inspection Division falsely represented that no changes had been made to the audit documentation subsequent to the documentation completion date when, in fact, changes had been made just days before field work for the PCAOB Inspection began.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

40. At no time did Hotz disclose to the Board's Inspection Division that the Respondents had, in fact, made changes to the audit documentation subsequent to the documentation completion date, by improperly creating and/or adding documents to the hard copy work papers, and altering (by initialing, signing, or adding information) documents in the hard copy work papers, after the documentation completion date, and shortly before the Inspection fieldwork began.

41. As a result of Hotz's submission of the misleading Engagement Profile, Hotz violated Rule 4006.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Dale Arnold Hotz, CPA is censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Dale Arnold Hotz, CPA is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i);

C. After two years from the date of this Order, Dale Arnold Hotz, CPA may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm;

D. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Jyothi Nuthulaganti Manohar, CPA is censured;

E. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Jyothi Nuthulaganti Manohar, CPA is suspended for one (1) year from the date of this Order from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i); and

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS Baumgarten & Company LLP, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-001 February 21, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Baumgarten & Company LLP (the "Firm" or "Baumgarten") and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $2000. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report in 2010, 2011 and 2012 and timely pay an annual fee in 2010, 2011 and 2012.

I.

On December 11, 2012, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, Baumgarten did not file an answer indicating the firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Baumgarten & Company LLP is a limited liability partnership located in Cleveland, Ohio. It is licensed under the laws of Ohio to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. EMPL.4115008-PR). The firm registered with the Board on August 15, 2007, pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules. The firm last issued an audit report on February 21, 2003, prior to the Board's registration requirements.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, Baumgarten failed to timely file an annual report for 2010, 2011, and 2012.

3. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, Baumgarten failed to timely pay its annual fee in 2010, 2011, and 2012.

C. Subsequent Events

4. The Board instituted these proceedings on December 11, 2012. Baumgarten failed to file an answer pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5421(b).

5. On December 18, 2012, Baumgarten paid its annual fees for 2010, 2011, and 2012.

6. On January 9, 2013, Baumgarten filed its annual reports for 2010, 2011 and 2012.

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

7. On January 9, 2013, Baumgarten filed a Form 1-WD to request leave to withdraw its registration from the Board.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Baumgarten is censured; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act, and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $2000 is imposed upon Baumgarten. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Baumgarten shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer pursuant to instructions provided by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter, which identifies Baumgarten as a respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover letter and money order or check shall be sent to Office of the Secretary, Attention: Phoebe W. Brown, Secretary, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

V.

Upon performance by Baumgarten of Part IV above, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 2107, the Board shall consider Baumgarten's Form 1-WD and whether to grant it leave to withdraw. In doing so, the Board shall not take into consideration its findings contained in Part III herein.

ISSUED BY THE BOARD.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of P. Parikh & Associates, Ashok B. Rajagiri, CA, Sandeep P. Parikh, CA, and Sundeep P S G Nair, CA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-002 April 24, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is: (1) censuring P. Parikh & Associates[1/] (the "Firm" or "Parikh & Associates"), revoking Parikh & Associates' registration and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $10,000 upon Parikh & Associates;[2/] (2) censuring Ashok B. Rajagiri, CA ("Rajagiri") and barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm; (3) censuring Sandeep P. Parikh, CA ("Parikh") and barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm;[3/] and (4) censuring Sundeep P S G Nair, CA ("Nair") and for a period of two years, limiting his activities in connection with audits, as that term is defined in Section 110(1) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), by prohibiting him from serving in the role of engagement partner or engagement quality reviewer, and requiring that he complete forty (40) additional hours of continuing professional education in subjects that are directly related to the audits of issuer financial statements under PCAOB standards.

The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that: (a) Rajagiri and Parikh & Associates violated Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and Rule 10b-5 thereunder and PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of an issuer client from 2006 to 2007; (b) Rajagiri, Nair, and Parikh & Associates violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of an issuer client from 2008 to 2010; (c) Parikh, Nair, and Parikh & Associates violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the financial statements of an issuer client in 2011; (d) Rajagiri and Parikh & Associates violated Section 10A of the Exchange Act and PCAOB rules in connection with the audit of the financial statements of an issuer client in 2008; (e) Parikh & Associates violated PCAOB quality control standards; and (f) Parikh directly and substantially contributed to a registered public accounting firm's violation of PCAOB quality control standards.

[1/] The Firm has issued audit reports under the name of P. Parikh & Associates, Chartered Accountants.

[2/] Parikh & Associates may reapply for registration after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

[3/] Parikh may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Parikh & Associates, Rajagiri, Parikh, and Nair (collectively, "Respondents").

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which are admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[4/]

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[5/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Parikh & Associates is a public accounting firm headquartered in Mumbai, the Republic of India. The Firm's website states that the Firm has seventeen partners. According to the Firm's most recent Annual Report Form filed with the Board, the Firm has seven offices in the Republic of India and seven offices located in countries outside of India. The Firm is registered with the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India (Firm Registration No. 107564W). At all relevant times, the Firm was registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. Since registering with the Board, the Firm has issued audit reports for one issuer client, Mahanagar Telephone Nigam Limited ("MTNL"), for the years ended March 31, 2006 through March 31, 2012.

2. Ashok B. Rajagiri, age 47, of Mumbai, India, is a chartered accountant licensed by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India (License Number 46070). Rajagiri is a partner of Parikh & Associates. At all relevant times, Rajagiri was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Rajagiri had final responsibility for the fiscal year 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, and 2010 audits within the meaning of AU § 311, Planning and Supervision, was responsible for the supervision of the Parikh & Associates engagement teams, and authorized the issuance of Parikh & Associates' reports for each of the fiscal year 2006-2010 audits.

3. Sandeep P. Parikh, age 53, of Mumbai, India, is a chartered accountant licensed by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India (License Number 39713). Parikh is a partner of Parikh & Associates. At all relevant times, Parikh was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Parikh had final responsibility for the fiscal year 2011 audit within the meaning of AU § 311, was responsible for the supervision of the Parikh & Associates engagement team, and authorized the issuance of Parikh & Associates' report for the fiscal year 2011 audit.

4. Sundeep P S G Nair, age 32, of Mumbai, India, is a chartered accountant licensed by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India (License Number 131489). Nair is a partner of Parikh & Associates. At all relevant times, Nair was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). For the fiscal year 2008 through 2011 audits of MTNL's financial statements discussed below, Nair served in the role of audit manager, under the supervision of Rajagiri, the engagement partner for the fiscal year 2008-2010 audits, and Parikh, the engagement partner for the fiscal year 2011 audit. For the fiscal year 2011 MTNL audit, Nair assumed responsibility for coordinating and managing the audit.

B. Summary

5. This matter concerns Respondents' numerous and repeated violations of PCAOB rules, quality control standards, and auditing standards in connection with the audits of its sole issuer client MTNL's financial statements for the fiscal years ended March 31, 2006 through March 31, 2011. After Parikh & Associates registered with the Board on November 19, 2007, the Firm has issued audit reports for MTNL. The Firm staffed the audits with partners who had no formal training or experience with PCAOB standards or U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("U.S. GAAP"). The Firm failed to establish, implement, and communicate quality control policies and procedures sufficient to provide the Firm with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel met applicable professional standards. The Firm's quality control violations resulted in or contributed to numerous and repeated violations of PCAOB auditing standards. The Firm also failed to establish monitoring procedures sufficient to enable the Firm to obtain reasonable assurance that its system of quality control was effective, and its personnel were complying with the professional standards. Parikh, as a senior partner of the Firm with responsibility for, among other things, designing, implementing, communicating, and monitoring the Firm's quality control system, directly and substantially contributed to the Firm's quality control violations.

6. In connection with the MTNL audits, the Firm failed to plan and perform audit work on critical aspects of the audits in violation of PCAOB auditing standards. In 2008, the Firm and Rajagiri also violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act by issuing an audit report regarding the 2006 and 2007 MTNL financial statements that represented that the audits had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards when they knew or were reckless in not knowing that such representations were false.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

During the 2008-2011 MTNL audits, Rajagiri, Parikh, Nair, and the Firm performed few to no audit procedures in connection with the issuance of audit reports in violation of PCAOB rules and auditing standards.

C. Parikh and the Firm Violated PCAOB Rules and Quality Control Standards

7. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm comply with certain quality control standards.[6/] A firm should establish policies and procedures to provide it with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality.[7/] A firm's policies and procedures should provide reasonable assurance that the firm "[u]ndertakes only those engagements that the firm can reasonably expect to be completed with professional competence."[8/] Policies and procedures, as well, should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that work "is assigned to personnel having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances."[9/] One element of quality control is monitoring, and the firm should implement monitoring procedures to provide a firm with reasonable assurance that "its system of quality control is effective."[10/] In addition, PCAOB rules prohibit an associated person of a registered public accounting firm from taking or omitting to take an action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that the act or omission would directly and substantially contribute to a violation of Board standards by that firm.[11/] As described below, the Firm violated the Board's quality control standards, and Parikh directly and substantially contributed to those violations.

8. At the time of the Firm's MTNL audits, the Firm assigned personnel who had no prior experience with performing audits under PCAOB standards or education regarding U.S. GAAP. The Firm's partners who acted as auditors with final responsibility during the MTNL audits had no formal training in PCAOB standards or U.S. GAAP. The Firm provided no training to its staff who worked on the MTNL audits with respect to performing audits in compliance with PCAOB standards. In addition, the Firm did not require its personnel to participate in continuing professional education or professional development activities to ensure that its staff understood U.S. GAAP and applicable SEC reporting requirements.

9. Policies and procedures should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that the policies and procedures established by the firm related to each of the elements of quality control are suitably designed and are being effectively applied.[12/] There were no policies and procedures in place at the Firm to ensure that the staff performed procedures necessary to comply with PCAOB standards and regulatory requirements.

10. At all relevant times, Parikh was a senior partner of the Firm during the relevant time period. In this capacity, Parikh was responsible for, among other things, designing, implementing, communicating, and monitoring the Firm's quality control system. Parikh was aware that he, Rajagiri, Nair, and other Parikh & Associates personnel had no training or experience in conducting audits pursuant to PCAOB auditing standards. All of the Firm's quality control violations described in paragraphs 7-9, above, were the result of either Parikh's conduct or omissions to act for which Parikh was responsible. With respect to all such acts and omissions, Parikh knew, or was reckless in not knowing, that his acts and omissions would directly and substantially contribute to the Firm's quality control failures described above, which constituted violations of the Board's quality control standards. Parikh thereby violated PCAOB Rule 3502.

D. Respondents Violated the Securities Laws, PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

11. Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Commission Rule 10b-5 thereunder prohibit a person, in connection with the purchase or sale of a security, from making an untrue statement of a material fact or from omitting to state a material fact necessary to make statements made, in light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards and related professional practice standards.[13/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[14/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements under audit.[15/] An auditor must also prepare audit documentation in sufficient detail to provide a clear understanding of its purpose, source, and the conclusions reached.[16/] In addition, the auditor must document the procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached with respect to relevant financial statement assertions, and clearly demonstrate that the work was in fact performed.[17/] As detailed below, Respondents violated the Exchange Act and failed to meet the aforementioned standards in connection with the audits of MTNL's financial statements.

1. Audits of MTNL's 2006 and 2007 Financial Statements

Rajagiri and the Firm Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards and Violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Commission Rule 10b-5 Thereunder

12. MTNL was, at all relevant times, an Indian corporation headquartered in New Delhi, India. According to its public filings, MTNL was established by the government of India in 1986 and provides basic or fixed-line, cellular, broadband, Internet, and other telecommunications services in New Delhi and Mumbai in India.[18/] MTNL provides all of its telecommunications services, other than Internet, under a single, general, non-exclusive license granted by the Indian Department of Telecommunications.[19/] MTNL derives its revenue primarily from local, domestic long distance, and international calls that originate from its network.[20/] At all relevant times, MTNL's common stock was registered under Section 12(b) of the Exchange Act. Its American Depository Shares were listed on the New York Stock Exchange and was an "issuer," as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

13. In February 2008, MTNL engaged Parikh & Associates as the U.S. GAAP auditor for MTNL's fiscal year 2008 and 2009 financial statements. Two different audit firms previously issued audit reports for MTNL's fiscal year 2006 and 2007 financial statements, respectively. MTNL was unable to obtain permission from the two predecessor audit firms to issue reports previously issued for the fiscal year 2006 and 2007 financial statements. On August 29, 2008, MTNL engaged Parikh & Associates to be the U.S. GAAP auditor for the fiscal year 2006 and 2007 financial statements. The Firm continued to serve as MTNL's U.S. GAAP auditor for fiscal years 2009, 2010, and 2011.

14. In its 2008 audit report, dated September 25, 2008, the Firm expressed unqualified opinions on MTNL's financial statements. Rajagiri, the partner with final responsibility for the audit, authorized the issuance of the audit report. The September 25, 2008 audit report concerned MTNL's consolidated balance sheet as of March 31,

The audit report was included in the Form 20-F that MTNL filed with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission") on September 29, 2008.[21/] In the audit report, the Firm stated that MTNL's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position as of March 31, 2007 and 2008, and results of operations and cash flows for the years ended March 31, 2006, March 31, 2007, and March 31, 2008 in conformity with U.S. GAAP, and that the Parikh & Associates' audits were conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

15. Rajagiri and the Firm failed to perform any audit procedures relating to MTNL's 2006 and 2007 financial statements prior to issuing its 2008 audit report and consenting to its inclusion in MTNL's 2008 Form 20-F. When asked in the course of the Board's investigation about whether the Firm performed any audit procedures relating to MTNL's 2006 and 2007 financial statements, Rajagiri admitted that he did not audit the financial statements. Despite not performing any audit procedures, Rajagiri authorized the Firm's issuance of an audit report on September 25, 2008, containing an unqualified opinion.[22/]

17. Rajagiri and the Firm violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Commission Rule 10b-5 thereunder by their issuance of an audit report that falsely stated that the MTNL fiscal year 2006 and 2007 audits had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, when Rajagiri and the Firm knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that Parikh & Associates personnel had not performed any audit procedures prior to the issuance of the Firm's audit report. Rajagiri and the Firm nevertheless authorized the issuance of the 2008 audit report on those financial statements.

2. Audits of MTNL's 2008, 2009, 2010, and 2011 Financial Statements

18. The Firm continued to serve as MTNL's auditors for the fiscal year 2008-2011 MTNL audit engagements. Rajagiri served as the engagement partner for the fiscal year 2008 through 2010 MTNL audits and had final responsibility for the audit as that phrase is used in AU § 311. He authorized the issuance of MTNL's audit reports dated September 25, 2008, September 25, 2009, and September 30, 2010.[28/] Parikh was the engagement partner for the fiscal year 2011 MTNL audit and had final responsibility for the audit as that phrase is used in AU § 311. issuance of MTNL's audit report dated September 29, 2011.[29/] Nair was a partner of Parikh & Associates, and a member of the engagement team for the fiscal year 2008-2011 MTNL audits. For the fiscal year 2011 MTNL audit, Nair assumed responsibility for coordinating and managing the audit. In connection with the MTNL engagements, the Firm issued audit reports on MTNL's 2008, 2009, 2010, and 2011 financial statements. Each report stated that the audits had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, expressed an unqualified opinion, and stated that, in Parikh & Associates' opinion, MTNL's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with U.S. GAAP. The audit reports were dated September 25, 2008, September 25, 2009, September 30, 2010, and September 29, 2011, and were included as part of the following MTNL filings with the Commission: (a) the Form 20-F filed on September 29, 2008; (b) the Form 20-F filed on September 29, 2009; (c) the Form 20-F filed on September 30, 2010; and (d) the Form 20-F filed on September 29, 2011.[30/] or determine the nature, extent, and timing of the work to be performed, and they failed to prepare a written audit program for the audit setting forth the audit procedures they believed were necessary to accomplish the objectives of the audit.

21. Inquiry of the predecessor auditor is a necessary procedure because the predecessor auditor may be able to provide information that will assist the successor auditor in determining whether to accept the engagement.[35/] As MTNL's new auditors, Respondents were required to make specific inquiries of MTNL's predecessor auditor. Further, Respondents were required to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for expressing an opinion on the financial statements they were engaged to audit, including evaluating the consistency of the application of accounting principles.[36/] Respondents, however, failed to make the required inquiries of the predecessor auditor before accepting the MTNL engagement and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to analyze the impact of the opening balances on current financial statements.

22. As described in detail below, Respondents also failed to perform any procedures regarding significant balances and transactions reported in the financial statements of MTNL. Specifically, Respondents failed to test the balances of: (1) cash and bank deposits, (2) accounts receivable, due from related parties, and other receivables, (3) property and equipment, and (4) accounts payable, accrued expenses and other current liabilities, as well as accrued employee cost.

23. In its 2008, 2009, 2010, and 2011 financial statements, MTNL reported cash and bank deposits of $845 million (USD), $947 million (USD), $1.088 billion (USD), and $39 million (USD), respectively. These asset balances represented 17%, 24%, 16%, and 1% of the total assets at the end of each of the respective years. Respondents failed to test cash and bank deposits balances during the audit periods by failing to: (a) test the existence of cash and bank deposits; (b) test whether the company had the rights to the cash and bank deposits; and (c) determine whether the values included in the financial statements for cash and bank deposits were appropriate.

24. For example, despite the fact that Rajagiri and Nair thought it was necessary to confirm cash balances, they failed to perform confirmation procedures concerning MTNL's cash balances at banks for the fiscal year 2008 and 2009 audits. In addition, Rajagiri and Nair failed to maintain control over the cash confirmation requests sent by MTNL for fiscal year 2010, and Parikh and Nair failed to maintain control over the cash confirmation requests sent by MTNL for fiscal year 2011. Rajagiri, Parikh, and Nair failed to comply with the PCAOB standards governing the confirmation process, which requires the auditor to make direct contact with a third party.[37/] MTNL requested the purported confirmations from its banks. MTNL subsequently received the responses directly from the banks. The Firm obtained the purported confirmations responses from MTNL. As a result, Respondents failed to maintain control over purported confirmation requests and responses for the fiscal year 2010 and 2011 MTNL audits.[38/]

25. In its 2008, 2009, 2010, and 2011 financial statements, MTNL reported certain asset balances, including accounts receivables, due from related parties (current and non-current), and other receivables of $1.267 billion (USD), $1.045 billion (USD), $1.335 billion (USD), and $1.316 billion (USD), respectively. These asset balances represented 26%, 27%, 19%, and 24% of MTNL's total assets at the end of each of the respective years. Other than relying on management's representations on the non-current portion of due from related parties, Respondents failed to test the asset balances during the audit periods by failing to: (a) test the existence of these assets; (b) test whether the company had the rights to these assets; and (c) determine whether the values included in the financial statements for these assets were appropriate.

[37/] AU § 330.28 states that: "[d]uring the performance of confirmation procedures, the auditor should maintain control over the confirmation requests and responses. Maintaining control means establishing direct communication between the intended recipient and the auditor to minimize the possibility that the results will be biased because of interception and alteration of the confirmation requests or responses."

No. 105-2011-002 (April 5, 2011) where the Board found that auditors failed to control the cash confirmation process by relying on audit clients to send cash confirmation requests to banks and to return cash confirmation responses to the auditors.

26. For example, PCAOB standards state that confirmation of accounts receivable is a generally accepted auditing procedure. There is a presumption that the auditor will request the confirmation of accounts receivable during an audit.[39/] In the aforementioned audits, Respondents failed to request confirmations for MTNL's claims against customers that arose from the sale of goods and services in the normal course of business.

27. In its 2008, 2009, 2010, and 2011 financial statements, MTNL reported net property and equipment balances of $2.036 billion (USD), $1.545 billion (USD), $1.828 billion (USD), and $1.862 billion (USD), respectively. These asset balances represented 42%, 39%, 26%, and 34% of the total assets at the end of each of the respective years. The predecessor auditor stated in its 2007 audit report that it had identified the following material weakness: "the Company did not maintain effective controls over the accounting for properties and equipments. Specifically, the Company has ineffective controls in its Mumbai unit over physical verification and reconciling the results thereof with the assets register as well as updating and reconciling the assets register with the books of account."[40/] Despite being aware of this material weakness, Respondents failed to test the balances of property and equipment, including the opening balances[41/] during the audits by failing to: (a) test the existence of the property and equipment balances; (b) test whether the company had the rights to the property and equipment; and (c) determine whether the values included in the financial statements for property and equipment were appropriate.

28. For example, during fiscal years 2008-2011, MTNL purchased additional property and equipment. However, in its audits, Respondents failed to test the additions during the year. Further, Respondents failed to test the depreciation rates, salvage values, and useful lives used in the calculation during the fiscal year 2008-2011 audits.

[39/] AU § 330.34, The Confirmation Process.

[40/] MTNL, Annual Report (Form 20-F), at F-2 (Oct. 15, 2007).

[41/] As described in paragraph 21 above, no audit procedures were performed on any opening balances, including property and equipment. The untested opening balance amounts remaining in property and equipment was 95% for the year-end 2008, 84% for the year-end 2009, 66% for the year-end 2010, and 51% for the year-end 2011.

29. In its 2008, 2009, 2010, and 2011 financial statements, MTNL's reported certain liability balances, including accounts payable, accrued expenses and other current liabilities, and accrued employee cost of $1.935 billion (USD), $1.562 billion (USD), $2.494 billion (USD), and $2.606 billion (USD), respectively. These liability balances represented 74%, 72%, 44%, and 53% of the total liabilities at the end of each of the respective years. Respondents failed to test the balances of current liabilities during the audit periods by failing to: (a) test the existence of these liabilities; (b) test whether the company had the obligations for these liabilities; and (c) determine whether the values included in the financial statements of these liabilities were appropriate.

30. For example, MTNL used actuaries to estimate its liabilities related to the retirement benefits and obtained actuarial reports supporting the estimates. PCAOB standards require auditors to perform certain procedures when using the work of a specialist, including evaluating the specialist's professional qualifications,[42/] obtaining an understanding of the methods and assumptions used by the specialist, and making appropriate tests of data provided to the specialist.[43/] Respondents obtained the actuary reports, but failed to perform these audit procedures.

31. Respondents failed to comply with Auditing Standard No. 3 in connection with the audit of MTNL's 2008-2010 financial statements. An auditor must identify all significant findings or issues in an engagement completion document. Respondents failed to create an engagement completion document for each of the fiscal year 2008-2010 MTNL audits.[44/]

E. Rajagiri and the Firm Violated Section 10A of the Exchange Act and PCAOB Rule 3520 in the Audit of MTNL's 2008 Financial Statements

32. PCAOB rules require registered public accounting firms and associated persons to comply with the Board's auditing standards and independence standards in connection with an audit.[45/] PCAOB rules also require that an auditor be independent.

Specifically, Rajagiri and the Firm were engaged to provide internal audit services from June 1, 2005 to January 31, 2008 and the Firm issued quarterly internal audit reports for certain MTNL units for fiscal years 2006-2008. On February 4, 2008, MTNL appointed Parikh & Associates as the U.S. GAAP auditor for MTNL's fiscal year 2008 and 2009 financial statements, and the Firm accepted the engagement on February 5, 2008.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Michael F. Cronin, CPA and Michael F. Cronin, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-003 May 14, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring the registered public accounting firm Michael F. Cronin, CPA (the "Firm"), revoking the Firm's registration, and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $10,000 upon the Firm;[1/] and censuring Michael F. Cronin, CPA ("Cronin") and barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[2/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning the Firm and Cronin's (collectively, "Respondents") repeated violations of Section 10A(j) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"), Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, and PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the Firm's audits of five issuer clients.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Cronin and the Firm.

[1/] The Firm may reapply for registration after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

[2/] Cronin may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[3/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[4/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Michael F. Cronin, CPA, is, and at all relevant times was, a public accounting firm located in Winter Springs, Florida, with another office located in Rochester, New York. At all relevant times, the Firm has been registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. At all relevant times, the Firm was the external auditor for each of the issuers identified below.

2. Michael F. Cronin, 57, of Winter Springs, Florida, is a certified public accountant licensed in the State of Florida (License No. AC38391) and in the State of New York (License No. 045325). He is the sole employee of the Firm and, at all relevant times, was the sole owner of the Firm and an associated person of a registered public

[3/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other persons or entities in this or any other proceeding.

[4/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that each Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). According to a Form 10-K filed by SaveDaily, Inc. with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") on April 11, 2013, Cronin is serving as its Chief Financial Officer.[5/]

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' repeated failure to comply with PCAOB auditing standards in connection with the audits of Baltia Air Lines, Inc.'s ("Baltia") financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2007 and December 31, 2009.[6/] As detailed below, Respondents failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter, failed to exercise due professional care, and failed to exercise professional skepticism in connection with the 2007 and 2009 Baltia audits.

4. As detailed below, Respondents also repeatedly violated Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, and PCAOB rules and standards that require a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons be independent of the firm's audit client throughout the audit and professional engagement period. Respondents were not independent with respect to four issuer clients because: (1) Cronin served as lead partner on two issuer audits for more than five consecutive years; and (2) Cronin served as lead partner on two other issuer audits within the five consecutive year period following the performance of services as the lead partner for the maximum permitted period.[7/]

5. This matter also involves the Firm's failure to comply with Auditing Standard No. 7, Engagement Quality Review, in the course of auditing the year ended June 30, 2011 financial statements of Odyssey Pictures Corporation ("Odyssey

[5/] Pursuant to Section 105(c)(7)(B) of the Act, the bar on Cronin from being associated with a registered public accounting firm also prohibits Cronin from "becom[ing] or remain[ing] associated with any issuer, broker or dealer in an accountancy or financial management capacity . . . without the consent of the Board or the Commission." 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(7)(B).

[6/] Cronin and the Firm did not audit Baltia's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008.

Baltia Audits

6. PCAOB standards provide that an auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[9/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[10/]

7. PCAOB standards require that an auditor respond to risks of material misstatement due to fraud through the application of professional skepticism in gathering and evaluating audit evidence.[11/] In addition, "professional skepticism requires an ongoing questioning of whether the information and evidence obtained suggests that a material misstatement due to fraud has occurred."[12/] An auditor's assessment of such risk should "be ongoing throughout the audit,"[13/] and an auditor should consider whether the "nature of auditing procedures performed may need to be

8. PCAOB standards also require an auditor to obtain satisfaction concerning the purpose, nature, and extent of related party transactions through the performance of certain procedures that extend beyond the inquiry of management.[15/] In addition, these standards require the auditor to evaluate the information available concerning the related party transaction in order to satisfy the auditor that it has been adequately disclosed in the financial statements.[16/] As described below, Respondents failed to comply with these standards in connection with the Baltia Audits.

Audit of Baltia's 2007 Financial Statements

9. At all relevant times, Baltia Air Lines, Inc. ("Baltia") was a New York corporation with its principal office in Rego Park, New York. At all relevant times, Baltia's common stock was registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, Baltia was an "issuer" as defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). As disclosed in its public filings, Baltia was a "Part 121 (heavy jet operator) start-up United States airline with Government fitness approval and is currently conducting the FAA [Federal Aviation Administration] Air Carrier Certification."[17/] Baltia's public filings disclosed that it intended to commence non-stop air service from New York to St. Petersburg, Russia upon completion of a certification.

10. The Firm audited Baltia's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2007 and issued an unqualified opinion dated March 29, 2008. The 2007 audit report was included in a Form 10-KSB filed by Baltia with the Commission on April 15, 2008. Cronin had final responsibility for the 2007 Baltia audit.

11. Baltia reported in its Form 10-KSB for the year ended December 31, 2007 that since inception Baltia had raised approximately $7.4 million in cash proceeds from

12. During the 2007 Baltia audit, Respondents became aware of information indicating that certain payments were being made to, or on behalf of, officers of Baltia. After becoming aware of the payments during the audit, Respondents failed to perform procedures to ascertain the nature of the payments to the Baltia officers.

13. Despite being aware of these payments and the lack of disclosure in the financial statements related to these payments, Respondents failed to exercise due care and professional skepticism and failed to perform sufficient procedures. Other than obtaining management representations, Respondents failed to take any steps to evaluate the nature of these payments.

14. Respondents also failed to perform any audit procedures to determine whether the payments reflected related party transactions. Specifically, Respondents failed to perform any procedures to evaluate this issue and to determine whether any related party transactions should have been disclosed.

Audit of Baltia's 2009 Financial Statements

Independence Standards

20. PCAOB rules and standards require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons be independent of the firm's audit client throughout the audit and professional engagement period.[28/] "[A] registered public accounting firm or associated person's independence obligation with respect to an audit client that is an issuer encompasses not only an obligation to satisfy the independence criteria set out in the rules and standards of the PCAOB, but also an obligation to satisfy all other independence criteria applicable to the engagement, including the independence criteria set out in the rules and regulations of the Commission under the federal securities laws."[29/]

21. Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act provides, "[i]t shall be unlawful for a registered public accounting firm to provide audit services to an issuer if the lead (or coordinating) audit partner (having primary responsibility for the audit), or the audit partner responsible for reviewing the audit, has performed audit services for that issuer in each of the 5 previous fiscal years of that issuer."[30/]

22. Exchange Act Rule 10A-2 provides that it shall be unlawful for an auditor not to be independent with respect to, among other requirements, the partner rotation requirements of Commission Regulation S-X.[31/]

24. In addition, PCAOB rules prohibit an associated person of a registered public accounting firm from omitting to take an action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that the omission would directly and substantially contribute to violations by that firm of the Act, rules of the Board, the provisions of the securities laws relating to the preparation and issuance of audit reports and the obligations and liabilities of accountants with respect thereto, including the rules of the Commission issued under the Act, or professional standards.[33/]

25. As described below, Respondents failed to comply with Exchange Act Rule 10A-2 and PCAOB rules and standards, the Firm failed to comply with Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, and Cronin directly and substantially contributed to the Firm's violations of Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act.

Respondents Receive Notice from PCAOB Inspection of Potential Independence Issues

26. In connection with an October 2007 inspection of the Firm, the PCAOB inspection staff brought to the Firm's attention apparent failures by the Firm to comply with independence requirements related to lead partner rotation for certain of the Firm's issuer clients. The Firm responded, in part, by representing that it had implemented a revised client acceptance process to comply with independence requirements. Cronin was responsible for the Firm's adherence to the revised client acceptance process.

27. Notwithstanding the Firm's representations that it had put into place a revised client acceptance policy, the Firm failed to comply with independence requirements in connection with subsequent audits for four issuer clients.[34/]

Audits of Peregrine Industries' Financial Statements

28. At all relevant times, Peregrine Industries, Inc. ("Peregrine Industries") was a Florida corporation with its headquarters in New York, New York. The company's public filings disclosed that it was a smaller reporting company as defined by Rule 12b-2 of the Exchange Act and it had no present operations other than seeking new business opportunities. Peregrine Industries' common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, Peregrine Industries was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

29. The Firm was engaged as Peregrine Industries' external auditor in May 2004. The Firm issued audit reports that were included in Peregrine Industries' financial statements, which were filed with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on Peregrine Industries' year ended financial statements in five consecutive fiscal years between 2004 and 2008. Cronin served as lead audit partner on the Peregrine Industries engagements and authorized the issuance of all audit reports during this five year period.

30. After serving as lead partner for the aforementioned five year period, Cronin continued to serve as lead partner on the audit of Peregrine Industries' June 30, 2009 year ended financial statements in violation of Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, PCAOB Rule 3520 and AU § 220. Cronin also authorized the issuance of an audit report dated October 13, 2009, that was included in a Form 10-K that Peregrine Industries filed with the Commission on October 13, 2009, even though the Firm and Cronin were not independent of the client.

Audits of Zaxis International's Financial Statements

31. At all relevant times, Zaxis International, Inc. ("Zaxis International") was a Delaware corporation with its headquarters in Los Angeles, California. The company's public filings disclosed that it was a smaller reporting company as defined by Rule 12b-2 of the Exchange Act and it had no present operations other than pursuing and effecting a business combination. Zaxis International has securities registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and its common stock is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, Zaxis International was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

32. The Firm was engaged as Zaxis International's external auditor in February 2005. The Firm issued audit reports that were included in Zaxis International's financial statements, which were filed with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on Zaxis International's year ended financial statements in five consecutive fiscal years between 2004 and 2008. Cronin served as lead audit partner on the Zaxis International engagements and authorized the issuance of all audit reports during this five year period.

33. After serving as lead partner for the aforementioned five year period, Cronin continued to serve as lead partner on the audit of Zaxis International's December 31, 2009 year ended financial statements in violation of Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, PCAOB Rule 3520 and AU § 220. Cronin also authorized the issuance of an audit report dated April 13, 2010, that was included in a Form 10-K that Zaxis International filed with the Commission on April 15, 2010, even though the Firm and Cronin were not independent of the client.

Audits of Destination Television's Financial Statements

34. At all relevant times, Destination Television, Inc. ("Destination Television")[35/] was a Delaware corporation with its headquarters in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. The company's public filings disclosed that it was a smaller reporting company as defined by Rule 12b-2 of the Exchange Act and was engaged in media production, promotion and advertising. Destination Television's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, Destination Television was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). As Destination Television has over 300 record holders per its most recent Form 10-K, it has a reporting obligation under Section 15(d) of the Exchange Act. At all relevant times, Destination Television was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

35. The Firm issued audit reports that were included in Destination Television's financial statements, which were filed with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on Destination Television's year ended financial statements in five consecutive fiscal years between 2002 and 2006. Cronin served as lead audit partner on the Destination Television engagements and authorized the issuance of all audit reports for this five year period.

[35/] Destination Television was formerly known as Magic Media Networks, Inc. through the fiscal year ended October 31, 2005. The Company also reported in its Form 10-K for the year ended October 31, 2009 that "[t]he Company intends to change its name of operations from Destination Television, Inc. to The Movie Studio, Inc.…." See The Movie Studio, Inc. Concurrent with the acceptance of the resignation of the Firm as its auditor, Destination Television announced that it had engaged another Board registered firm as the registered public accounting firm to audit Destination Television's financial statements for the year ending October 31, 2007.

37. That named firm subsequently performed the audit of Destination Television's financial statements for the year ending October 31, 2007, and authorized the issuance of an audit report dated February 13, 2008 that was included in a Form 10-KSB that Destination Television filed with the Commission on the same day.

38. In violation of Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, PCAOB Rule 3520 and AU § 220, the Firm was re-engaged as Destination Television's external auditor in February 2009, and Cronin served as the lead partner on the audit of Destination Television's October 31, 2008 year ended financial statements. Specifically, Cronin served as the lead audit partner within the five consecutive year period following the performance of services as the lead audit partner for the maximum permitted period. Cronin also authorized the issuance of an audit report dated February 13, 2009, that was included in a Form 10-K that Destination Television filed with the Commission on the same day, even though the Firm and Cronin were not independent of the client.

Audits of Baltia's Financial Statements

39. The Firm was engaged as Baltia's external auditor in February 2004. The Firm issued audit reports that were included in Baltia's financial statements, which were filed with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on Baltia's year ended financial statements in five consecutive fiscal years between 2003 and 2007. Cronin served as lead audit partner on the Baltia engagements and authorized the issuance of all audit reports for this five year period.

40. In a Form 8-K filed with the Commission on March 20, 2009,[36/] Baltia announced that it had accepted the resignation of Michael F. Cronin, CPA as its principal registered public accounting firm. Concurrent with the acceptance of the resignation of the Firm as its auditor, Baltia announced that it had engaged another Board registered firm as the registered public accounting firm to audit Baltia's financial statements for the year ending December 31, 2008.

Audit of the 2011 Financial Statements of Odyssey Pictures

43. PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 7, Engagement Quality Review ("AS No. 7"), requires that an engagement quality review and concurring approval of issuance are required for all audits and interim reviews for fiscal years beginning on or after December 15, 2009.[37/]

44. At all relevant times, Odyssey Pictures Corporation ("Odyssey Pictures") was a Nevada corporation with its headquarters in Plano, Texas. The company's public filings disclosed that it was a smaller reporting company as defined by Rule 12b-2 of the Exchange Act and engaged in brand marketing services, web site design and development services. Odyssey Pictures has securities registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and its common stock is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, Odyssey Pictures was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

45. The Firm was engaged as Odyssey Pictures' external auditor in August 2011 for the audit of Odyssey Pictures' financial statements for the year ended June 30, 2011. The Firm issued an audit report dated October 13, 2011, expressing an unqualified opinion on Odyssey Pictures' financial statements which accompanied Odyssey Pictures' Form 10-K filed with the Commission on the same day.

46. AS No. 7 required that the Firm have an engagement quality review performed on the fiscal year 2011 audit of Odyssey Pictures. Specifically, AS No. 7 states that a firm may grant permission to a client to use the engagement report only after the engagement quality reviewer provides concurring approval of issuance.[38/] However, even though Cronin was aware that an engagement quality review needed to be performed, the Firm failed to have an engagement quality review performed on the fiscal year 2011 audit of Odyssey Pictures. While Cronin planned for a partner at another Board registered firm to perform an engagement quality review, he failed to notify the partner in time and the engagement quality review was not performed. Consequently, Respondents violated AS No. 7 in connection with the audit of Odyssey Pictures' financial statements for the year ended June 30, 2011.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Michael F. Cronin and Michael F. Cronin, CPA are hereby censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Michael F. Cronin is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i);

C. After three (3) years from the date of this Order, Michael F. Cronin may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm;

D. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Michael F. Cronin, CPA is revoked;

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

E. After three (3) years from the date of this Order, Michael F. Cronin, CPA may reapply for registration by filing an application pursuant to PCAOB Rule 2101; and

F. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $10,000 is imposed upon Michael F. Cronin, CPA. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Michael F. Cronin, CPA shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer in accordance with instructions furnished by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter which identifies Michael F. Cronin, CPA as a Respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release Number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover letter and money order or check shall be sent to the Office of the Secretary, Attention: Phoebe Brown, Secretary, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Rehan Saeed, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-004 May 21, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Rehan Saeed, CPA ("Respondent" or "Saeed") and barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that Saeed violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with his failure to perform timely concurring reviews and his backdating of concurring review documentation.

I.

On June 15, 2012, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings against Respondent pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1). Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, these proceedings were not public. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in these proceedings public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in these proceedings public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, Respondent did not consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[2/]

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[3/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Rehan Saeed, 50, of Walnut, California, is a certified public accountant licensed by the California Board of Accountancy (license no. 59167). At all relevant times, Saeed was an employee of, or independent contractor with, registered public accounting firm Kabani & Company, Inc. ("Firm"), was based in the Firm's Los Angeles, California office, and was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Saeed's work with the Firm was part-time, on a project basis, and included the performance of concurring reviews on audits for issuer clients of the Firm. In 2009, Saeed decided not to perform further Firm-assigned work, and has not since worked at or with the Firm. Saeed has a law degree and has been a member of the State Bar of California since 2006.

B. Summary

2. Saeed violated PCAOB standards requiring the exercise of due professional care in the performance of concurring partner reviews for two issuer audits.

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[3/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondent in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Although Saeed had been assigned to perform concurring partner reviews for those audits and was aware that he needed to perform those reviews before the Firm released its audit reports, Saeed failed to perform his concurring review procedures until after the Firm had released its audit reports and the issuers had filed their financial statements with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission"). He then backdated certain documents to make it appear that he had performed those procedures before the release of the audit reports. With respect to one of those audits, Saeed's backdating also violated PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS3").

C. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

3. PCAOB rules require that an associated person of a registered public accounting firm comply with the Board's auditing standards.[4/] Among other things, PCAOB auditing standards provide that "[d]ue professional care is to be exercised in the performance of the audit and the preparation of the report."[5/] In particular, PCAOB standards require all auditors, including concurring partners, to perform their work with "reasonable care and diligence."[6/] PCAOB auditing standards also require that audit documentation contain sufficient information to enable an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with an engagement, to determine who performed the work that has been documented, the date the work was completed, who reviewed that work, and the date of the review.[7/]

4. As described below, Saeed violated PCAOB due care standards by failing to perform two concurring partner review assignments until after the Firm had released its audit reports and after the issuers had filed their financial statements with the Commission and then backdating certain documents to make it appear that he had performed those procedures before the release of the audit reports. In one of the audits, Saeed's backdating of a work paper to make it appear that he had performed a timely concurring partner review also violated PCAOB auditing standards relating to audit documentation.

5. The Firm was a member of the SEC Practice Section of the AICPA ("SECPS") prior to and as of April 16, 2003. At all relevant times, PCAOB rules required that registered public accounting firms that were members of the SECPS as of April 16, 2003 obtain timely concurring partner reviews of issuer audit reports for fiscal years beginning before December 15, 2009.[8/]

Hartcourt Audit

6. The Firm served as the auditor of the May 31, 2008 financial statements of The Hartcourt Companies, Inc ("Hartcourt"). On September 2, 2008, Hartcourt filed with the Commission a Form 10-K for its fiscal year ending May 31, 2008. Included in that filing was an audit report signed by the Firm dated June 17, 2008. The audit report release date for the Hartcourt audit was August 29, 2008.

7. Saeed was assigned to perform the concurring partner review for the Hartcourt audit and was aware that he needed to perform his review before the Firm issued its audit report. Saeed was also aware that Hartcourt planned to file its Form 10-K on or around September 2, 2008. Saeed failed, however, to perform his concurring partner review procedures until after the date of the Firm's audit report, after the report release date, and after Hartcourt filed its Form 10-K.

8. Specifically, although Saeed ultimately sent concurring partner review comments to Firm staff, he did not do so until September 23, 2008, three weeks after Hartcourt had filed its 2008 Form 10-K.

9. Saeed's comments concerned significant omissions and deficiencies in the Hartcourt work papers related to basic planning and substantive audit procedures. Saeed backdated his comments to August 29, 2008, to make it appear that he had performed concurring partner review procedures before the Firm had released its audit report on Hartcourt's 2008 financial statements.

10. As a result of the conduct described above, Saeed violated PCAOB Rule 3100, Compliance with Auditing and Related Professional Practice Standards, and Rule

NetSol Audit

11. The Firm served as the auditor of the June 30, 2008 financial statements of NetSol Technologies, Inc ("NetSol"). On September 19, 2008, NetSol filed with the Commission a Form 10-KSB for its fiscal year ending June 30, 2008. Included in that filing was an audit report signed by the Firm dated September 12, 2008. The audit report release date for the NetSol audit was September 18, 2008.

12. Saeed was assigned to perform a concurring partner review on the NetSol audit and was aware that he needed to perform his review before the Firm issued its audit report. Saeed was also aware that NetSol planned to file its Form 10-KSB on or around September 19, 2008. Saeed, however, did not perform his review until after the September 18, 2008 report release date and after the September 19, 2008 date on which NetSol filed its Form 10-KSB.

13. On October 3, 2008, Saeed provided to Firm staff his concurring partner review comments on the NetSol audit. Saeed backdated his comments to September 15, 2008. That same day, Saeed also sent the Firm a signed "PX-14: Supervision, Review, and Approval Form" work paper indicating that he had completed his concurring partner review by September 15, 2008. Saeed backdated both his comments and the PX-14 work paper to make it appear as if he had completed the concurring partner review before the Firm had released its audit report on NetSol's 2008 financial statements.

14. As a result of the conduct described above, Saeed violated PCAOB Rule 3100, Compliance with Auditing and Related Professional Practice Standards, and Rule 3200T, Interim Auditing Standards, by failing to comply with AU § 150, Generally Accepted Auditing Standards, and AU § 230, Due Professional Care in the Performance of Work. Saeed also violated PCAOB Rule 3100, Compliance with Auditing and Related Professional Practice Standards, by failing to comply with AS3.

ORDER

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer.

Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Rehan Saeed, CPA is censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Rehan Saeed, CPA is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i); and

C. After eighteen (18) months from the date of this Order, Rehan Saeed, CPA may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Gruber & Co., LLC, and E. Randall Gruber, CPA Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-005 June 27, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is (1) permanently revoking the registration of Gruber & Co., LLC ("G&C"); and (2) permanently barring E. Randall Gruber, CPA ("Gruber") from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions against G&C and Gruber (collectively "Respondents") on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with their non-cooperation with a Board inspection in which they improperly created, added, and backdated audit documentation prior to and during a Board inspection in violation of PCAOB Rule 4006 and Auditing Standard No. 3.

I.

On March 21, 2012, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondents. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, these proceedings were not public. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, Respondents did not consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted,

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Respondents consent to the entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[1/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds that:[2/]

A. Respondents

1. G&C is a limited liability company headquartered in Lake Saint Louis, Missouri. G&C is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. It is licensed by the Missouri State Board of Accountancy (License No. 2002009503). At all times relevant to this Order, Gruber was the sole principal and owner of G&C, and G&C had no other audit staff. From the time the Board instituted these proceedings until issuance of this Order, G&C issued 11 audit reports for issuers.

2. E. Randall Gruber, age 61, of Lake Saint Louis, Missouri, is the Managing Member of G&C, its sole principal and owner, and a certified public accountant licensed in the state of Missouri (License No. 006667). At all times relevant to this matter, Gruber was an associated person of G&C, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

B. Other Entities and Individuals

3. Firm A is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. At all times relevant to this matter, Firm A had one principal and owner, Individual A, and no audit staff.

4. Individual A, is the sole owner of Firm A, and a certified public accountant. At all times relevant to this matter, Individual A was an associated person of Firm A, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

5. Individual B is a former CPA. Although Individual B was not an employee of G&C, individual B referred work to G&C.

6. Individual C is a non-accountant hired by G&C to assist in a number of audits performed by G&C. Individual C was employed by G&C at all times relevant to this matter.

C. Summary

7. This matter concerns Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards. Respondents repeatedly violated Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, and Auditing Standard No. 3 ("AS3"), Audit Documentation.

8. In violation of Rule 4006, Respondents provided a misleading document and other information concerning the purported audit of the 2007 financial statements of Issuer A to the Board in connection with the Board's inspection of that audit. In addition, Respondents and others acting on their behalf improperly created, altered, and backdated audit documentation concerning G&C's purported audit of Issuer A and improperly created, altered and backdated audit documentation related to G&C's audits of the 2007 financial statements of Issuer B and Issuer C. Respondents took these actions after being informed that the Board was inspecting G&C, in violation of Rule 4006.

9. In violation of AS3, Respondents, and others acting on their behalf, added documents as well as signatures and other markings to audit documentation related to the above-mentioned audits without indicating the dates that those documents and markings were added to the working papers, the names of the persons preparing the additional documentation, and the reason for adding the documentation months after the documentation completion date.

ORDER

D. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

10. PCAOB Rule 4006 provides, in part, that "[e]very registered public accounting firm, and every associated person of a registered public accounting firm, shall cooperate with the Board in the performance of any Board inspection."[3/] This cooperation responsibility "includes an obligation not to provide misleading documents or information in connection with the Board's inspection processes."[4/] PCAOB rules also require that registered public accounting firms and their associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards.[5/] Among other things, PCAOB auditing standards require that an auditor make certain written disclosures if the auditor makes additions to audit documentation after the documentation completion date.[6/]

a. Issuer A 2007 Audit

11. On April 14, 2008, Issuer A filed a Form 10-KSB with the Commission, for the year ending December 31, 2007. Included in that filing was an audit report dated April 7, 2008, signed by "Gruber & Company, LLC" ("Issuer A 2007 audit report"). Although the audit report bore the signature of G&C, it was prepared by Individual B, who had performed the audit without Gruber's knowledge or authorization.

i. Respondents Provided a Misleading Document and Other Information to the Inspections Division Prior to the Field Work

13. On April 7, 2008, just prior to the issuance of the Issuer A 2007 audit report, the Board's Division of Registration and Inspections ("Inspections Division") confirmed in writing with G&C, through Gruber, that it had selected G&C for inspection. Field work for the inspection was scheduled to commence in September 2008.

14. On April 7, 2008, as part of the Board's notification of the inspection, the Inspections Division provided G&C with a form, entitled "Exhibit B – Issuer Information Form" ("Exhibit B"). Exhibit B required G&C to provide, among other information, a list of all audit opinions for issuers released under the firm's name between May 1, 2007 and March 31, 2008.

15. Gruber completed Exhibit B and, on or about May 2, 2008, provided it to the Inspections Division. On the completed Exhibit B, Gruber represented that Issuer A became a client of G&C in March 2008, and that on April 7, 2008, the Firm issued an audit report on Issuer A's December 31, 2007 financial statements. On the completed Exhibit B, Gruber listed himself as the engagement partner for the Issuer A audit, indicating that he had incurred 48 hours on the audit, and that his concurring review partner had incurred six hours on that audit.

16. At the time Gruber completed Exhibit B and provided it to the Inspections Division, he knew that: (a) G&C had not authorized the issuance of the Issuer A 2007 audit report, and (b) G&C and Gruber had not conducted any work in connection with the issuance of the Issuer A 2007 audit report. At no point in time did Gruber inform the Inspections Division of these facts in connection with the inspection of the Firm.

17. The Inspections Division was originally scheduled to visit G&C's office on September 8, 2008, to conduct a review of certain audits conducted by the Firm. Gruber requested a delay of the inspection, and on August 28, 2008, the Inspections Division granted Gruber's request, and notified Gruber that it would visit the Firm during the week of October 6, 2008.

18. During the week preceding the Inspections Division's planned visit of G&C's office commencing on October 6, 2008, Gruber arranged for Individual A, Individual B, and Individual C to meet him in Missouri for a "firm retreat," held in a hotel conference room. Gruber and Individual B paid the travel and other expenses of Individual A and Individual C. The firm retreat occurred from September 29, 2008 through October 8, 2008. During the firm retreat, Gruber, Individual A, Individual B and Individual C met and prepared for the upcoming visit by the Inspections Division.

19. Gruber asked Individual B to attend in order to facilitate the handover of working papers related to any opinions Individual B had issued under the G&C name in case the Inspections Division selected that audit and related opinion for inspection. Individual A and Individual C were present due to their involvement in other G&C 2007 audits. Individual C had assisted in several audits. Individual A had acted as a concurring review partner in several audits including the Issuer B and Issuer C 2007 audits.

20. On October 3, 2008, Gruber contacted the Inspections Division to confirm the dates of its visit and to inquire about which audit engagements the Inspections Division would review. The Inspections Division confirmed the dates with Gruber, and identified to him four issuers' audits for review, including Issuer A, Issuer B and Issuer C.

21. Immediately upon learning that the Inspections Division planned to examine the Issuer A audit, Gruber, during the firm retreat, instructed Individual B to provide him with all documentation for the Issuer A 2007 audit. Individual B then arranged to have Issuer A management provide this documentation to Gruber, which Gruber received on or about October 3, 2008. This was the first time Gruber had seen any audit documentation related to the Issuer A 2007 Audit Report.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

ii. Gruber Altered, Created, Backdated, and Instructed Others to Backdate Issuer A Audit Documentation

22. At the time of the firm retreat, the AS3 documentation completion date for the Issuer A 2007 Audit Report had passed.

23. At the time of the firm retreat, Gruber was aware of AS3's requirements. In particular, Gruber was aware of AS3's requirement that an auditor must complete audit documentation within 45 days of an audit report release date, and that any changes to that documentation after the documentation completion date must indicate the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it.

24. During the firm retreat on October 3, 2008, Gruber altered, created, and backdated a set of audit working papers purporting to relate to the Issuer A 2007 Audit Report. Gruber's actions included: (a) signing off on and backdating audit working papers that neither G&C nor Gruber prepared or reviewed in connection with issuance of the Issuer A 2007 Audit Report; (b) making handwritten entries on certain audit working papers for work that neither G&C nor Gruber had performed prior to issuance of the Issuer A 2007 Audit Report, including audit work related to Cash in Bank ("A4 Working Paper"); (c) adding a handwritten list of procedures to the A4 working paper; (d) permitting Individual B to include Gruber's initials on multiple PCAOB audit checklists; (e) and permitting Individual B to include Gruber's name as G&C's engagement partner on the Engagement Completion Document.

25. Gruber also instructed Individual C and Individual A to sign and backdate certain Issuer A working papers. For example, regarding audit work related to Commercial Paper ("A5 Working Paper"), Gruber directed Individual C to sign and backdate the working paper to March 17, 2008, then Gruber himself signed the "approved by" block, which he backdated to March 22, 2008. Gruber then instructed Individual A to place his initials and the date March 30, 2008 on the A5 Working Paper, which Individual A did.

iii. At Gruber's Direction, Individual A Created, Altered, and Backdated Issuer A Audit Documentation

26. During the firm retreat, Gruber informed Individual A that the Inspections Division planned to review the Issuer A 2007 audit.

27. At Gruber's request, Individual A assisted Individual B and Gruber in the creation of various audit documentation that had not previously existed, including documentation related to planning, risk assessment, internal control and audit completion.

28. Also at Gruber's request, Individual A initialed and backdated to April 3, 2008, certain documentation related to audit planning, risk assessment, internal control and completion, and signed and backdated an audit working paper to July 30, 2008.

iv. Respondents Provided Misleading Audit Documentation to the Inspections Division

29. Field work for the Board's inspection occurred during the week of October 6, 2008. During the field work, Gruber and G&C presented the misleading audit working papers for the Issuer A 2007 Audit to the Inspections Division.

30. At no time during the inspection, did Gruber indicate to the Inspections Division that neither he nor Individual A had performed any audit work prior to issuance of the Issuer A 2007 Audit Report, or that in October 2008, they and others had improperly created and modified audit documentation to associate with the audit report.

31. Additionally, at no time during the inspection, did Gruber inform the inspection team of his belief or knowledge that Individual B had, without G&C's authorization, issued the Issuer A 2007 Audit Report as well as other audit reports in G&C's name that were not the subject of the Board's 2008 inspection.

32. Immediately following the field work of the Inspections Division, Gruber directed Individual A to prepare and backdate to March 2008, an independence letter purportedly related to the Issuer A 2007 Audit, which Individual A did. Gruber then produced the backdated independence letter to the inspection team. Neither Gruber nor Individual A informed the Inspections Division that this document was backdated.

33. On October 30, 2009, the Inspections Division provided Gruber's Firm with a draft report of its October 2008 inspection. On November 29, 2009, Gruber submitted to the Inspections Division a response to the draft inspection report. In the Firm's response, Gruber reiterated that the Firm had performed an audit of Issuer A's 2007 financial statements.

34. At no point prior to the Division's investigation into this matter did Gruber withdraw or disassociate himself or G&C from the Issuer A 2007 audit report. It was only in response to the Division's March 2010 request for documentation related to the Issuer A 2007 audit report as part of its investigation that Gruber represented for the first time to the Board that he and G&C had not been involved in the Issuer A 2007 audit.

35. It was not until his September 2010 testimony as part of the Division's investigation, and the Division's inquiry about the creation or modification of certain audit work papers, that Gruber acknowledged that in fact, Gruber, Individual A, Individual B and Individual C had created, altered and backdated audit documentation related to Issuer A's 2007 financial statements.

b. Issuer B 2007 Audit

36. G&C audited Issuer B's 2007 financial statements. Gruber served as the auditor with final responsibility for the engagement. Individual A served as the concurring review partner.

37. On April 15, 2008, Issuer B filed a Form 10-KSB with the Commission. Included in that filing was an audit report dated April 11, 2008, signed by "Gruber & Co. LLP" ("Issuer B 2007 audit report").

38. The audit report release date was April 15, 2008. The documentation completion date, therefore, was May 30, 2008.

39. During the October 2008 firm retreat addressed above, the Inspections Division informed Gruber that the inspection team would be examining G&C's audit of Issuer B's 2007 financial statements.

40. At the time of the firm retreat, Gruber understood that the documentation completion date for the Issuer B audit had passed.

41. At the time of the firm retreat, Gruber was also aware of AS3's requirements. In particular, Gruber was aware of AS3's requirement that an auditor must complete audit documentation within 45 days of an audit report release date, and that any changes to that documentation after the documentation completion date must indicate the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it.

42. In response to learning that the Inspections Division would be examining G&C's audit of Issuer B's 2007 financial statements, Gruber asked Individual A to "clean up" the Issuer B audit working papers and to memorialize Individual A's concurring review work in the working papers.

ORDER

43. In October 2008 and prior to the inspection visit, Gruber provided Individual A for the first time with a set of working papers and financial statements for the Issuer B 2007 audits. At that time, Gruber and Individual A decided that Individual A would initial and backdate to April 15, 2008, audit programs and checklists including various audit planning and audit program documents. After receiving these documents, Individual A initialed and backdated them to April 15, 2008.

44. In addition, during the firm retreat, after discussions with Gruber, Individual A initialed and backdated to April 15, 2008, audit working papers related to the audit of financial statement balances and altered or created working papers related to planning and audit completion.

45. During field work for the Board's inspection, Respondents presented the misleading audit working papers for the Issuer B 2007 Audit to the Inspections Division.

46. At no time prior to the investigation of this matter, did Gruber disclose to the Board that he and Individual A had improperly created, signed off, and backdated these documents before or during the Inspections Division's inspection of the Gruber Firm.

47. During the field work, the Inspections Division noted the absence of an independence letter from Individual A. Again, at Gruber's request, Individual A prepared and backdated to January 1, 2008, an independence letter for the 2007 Issuer B audit, which Gruber then provided to the Inspections Division. Neither Individual A nor Gruber informed the Inspections Division at any time that this document was backdated.

c. Issuer C 2007 Audit

48. G&C audited Issuer C's 2007 financial statements. Gruber served as the auditor with final responsibility for the engagement. Individual A served as the concurring review partner.

49. On March 24, 2008, Issuer C filed a Form 10-KSB with the Commission. Included in that filing was an audit report dated March 17, 2008, signed by "Gruber & Co. LLP" ("Issuer C 2007 audit report").

50. The audit report release date was March 24, 2008. The documentation completion date, therefore, was May 7, 2008.

ORDER

51. During the October 2008 firm retreat addressed above, the Inspections Division informed Gruber that the inspection team would be examining G&C's audit of Issuer C's 2007 financial statements.

52. At the time of the firm retreat, Gruber understood that the documentation completion date for the Issuer C audit had passed.

53. At the time of the firm retreat, Gruber was also aware of AS3's requirements. In particular, Gruber was aware of AS3's requirement that an auditor must complete audit documentation within 45 days of an audit report release date, and that any changes to that documentation after the documentation completion date must indicate the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it.

54. In response to learning that the Inspections Division would be examining G&C's audit of Issuer C's 2007 financial statements, Gruber asked Individual A to help "clean up" the Issuer C audit working papers and to memorialize Individual A's concurring review work in the working papers.

55. In October 2008, Gruber provided Individual A for the first time with various audit planning and audit program documents. Gruber and Individual A then decided that Individual A would initial and backdate those documents to March 22, 2008.

56. Although Individual A had not previously seen these working papers, in consultation with Gruber, he initialed and backdated all of them, except PCA-AP-2, Audit Program for General Auditing and Completion Procedures, to March 22, 2008.

57. During field work for the Board's inspection, Respondents Gruber and G&C presented the misleading audit working papers for the Issuer C 2007 Audit to the Inspections Division.

58. At no time prior to the investigation of this matter, did Gruber disclose to the Board that he and Individual A had improperly created, signed off, and backdated these documents prior to or during the Inspections Division's inspection of the Gruber Firm.

59. During the field work, the inspection team noted the absence of an independence letter from Individual A. Again at Gruber's request, Individual A prepared and backdated to January 1, 2008, an independence letter for the 2007 Issuer C audit which Gruber provided to the Inspections Division. Neither Individual A nor Gruber informed the Inspections Division at any time that this document was backdated.

60. As a result of the conduct described above, Respondents violated Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, and AS3, Audit Documentation.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

Pursuant to Sections 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Gruber & Co., LLC is permanently revoked; and

Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), E. Randall Gruber, CPA is permanently barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Lake & Associates, CPA's LLC, and Jay Charles Lake, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-006 August 13, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Lake & Associates, CPA's LLC (the "Firm"), and Jay Charles Lake, CPA ("Lake"), revoking the registration of the Firm,[1/] and barring Lake from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[2/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the Firm and Lake (collectively, "Respondents") on the basis of its findings that Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the 2009 financial statements of four issuer clients, that the Firm violated PCAOB quality control standards, and that Lake directly and substantially contributed to the Firm's violation of PCAOB quality control standards.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against the Firm and Lake.

[1/] The Firm may reapply for registration after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

[2/] Lake may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement (collectively, "Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[3/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[4/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Lake & Associates, CPA's LLC, is a professional limited liability company organized under the laws of the State of Florida and headquartered in Schaumburg, Illinois. The Firm is licensed by the State of Florida (license no. AD62907) and the State of Illinois (license no. 066-004126). The Firm is, and at all relevant times was, registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. At all relevant times, the Firm was the independent auditor for each of the issuers identified below. As of the time the Firm filed its 2012 annual report on Form 2 with the Board, it had two partners and four other professional staff members.

2. Jay Charles Lake, CPA, 50, of Boca Raton, Florida, is a certified public accountant licensed by the State of Florida (license no. AC0034533) and by the State of Illinois (license no. 065-022654). He is the managing member of the Firm, was the auditor with final responsibility for the Firm's audits of the financial statements of all four of the issuers discussed below, and authorized the issuance of the Firm's audit reports on those financial statements. Lake is, and at all relevant times was, an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

[3/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[4/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' numerous and repeated violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the issuance of audit reports on the 2009 financial statements of four issuers (collectively, the "Audits").[5/] Specifically, Respondents failed to, among other things: (a) plan the Audits adequately; (b) perform sufficient audit procedures on material accounts, including revenue, accounts receivable, and inventory; and (c) prepare and maintain sufficient audit documentation.

4. Furthermore, as detailed below, the Firm failed to establish and implement quality control policies and procedures sufficient to provide it with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel met all applicable professional standards. At all relevant times, Lake was responsible for the development, implementation and monitoring of the Firm's quality control policies and procedures. Despite those responsibilities, during the Audits, Lake took or omitted to take action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that his acts and/or omissions would directly and substantially contribute to the Firm's violation of PCAOB quality control standards, in contravention of PCAOB Rule 3502, Responsibility Not to Knowingly or Recklessly Contribute to Violations.[6/]

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards In Connection with the Audits

5. In connection with the preparation or issuance of any audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards.[7/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion

[5/] Specifically, the Audits consist of the Firm's audits of the 2009 financial statements of: (a) MediaNet Group Technologies, Incorporated; (b) Hutech21 Company, Limited, f/k/a China Logistics Incorporated; (c) China Education Technology, Incorporated; and (d) China Fruits Corporation.

6. PCAOB standards also require that audit work be adequately planned[10/] and require auditors to perform procedures to identify, assess, and respond to risks of material misstatement due to fraud.[11/] Among other procedures, audit team members should conduct a discussion concerning the risks of material misstatement due to fraud and must perform analytical procedures to identify "unusual transactions or events, and amounts, ratios, and trends that might indicate matters that have financial statement and audit planning implications."[12/] Further, PCAOB standards identify certain procedures, such as those relating to confirming accounts receivable and observing inventories, as "generally accepted auditing procedure[s]."[13/]

7. Additionally, PCAOB audit documentation standards require an auditor to prepare an engagement completion document that identifies all "significant findings or issues," such as significant unusual transactions, matters that could result in a modification of the audit report, and audit adjustments.[14/]

8. As detailed below, Respondents failed to comply with the aforementioned rules and standards, among others, in connection with the Audits.

The Audit of MediaNet's 2009 Financial Statements

9. MediaNet Group Technologies, Inc. ("MediaNet"), was, at all relevant times, a Nevada corporation with its principal executive office in Florida. MediaNet's public filings disclose that it was a global network marketing firm that was engaged in selling merchandise, predominantly consumer electronics, jewelry, and electronic gift cards, to consumers through Internet-based auctions conducted under the trade name "DubLi.com." Its common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"), and its stock is currently quoted on the Pink Sheets. At all relevant times, MediaNet was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

10. The Firm expressed an unqualified opinion on MediaNet's 2009 fiscal year-end financial statements in an audit report dated December 7, 2009, which was included in MediaNet's January 13, 2010 Form 10-K filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission").[15/] The report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards and that, in the Firm's opinion, the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with GAAP. Lake authorized the issuance of the audit report.

11. Respondents failed to comply with applicable PCAOB standards in connection with the audit of MediaNet's fiscal year 2009 financial statements. Specifically, Respondents failed to perform appropriate audit procedures with respect to MediaNet's reported accounts receivable and revenue.

Accounts receivable

12. In its 2009 financial statements, MediaNet reported accounts receivable of $70,375 at year end, which represented more than 34 percent of MediaNet's reported assets. Although Respondents identified MediaNet's accounts receivable as a significant audit area that presented the risk of material misstatement due to fraud, they failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning accounts receivable.[16/]

13. During the audit, MediaNet management provided Respondents with a report purporting to list all of the company's accounts receivable. The report contained more than 4,000 entries, including amounts totaling $1,158,912 and off-setting amounts totaling $1,150,165. The net balance of the accounts receivable listed on the report was thus $8,747, i.e., less than 13 percent of the accounts receivable balance MediaNet ultimately reported in its 2009 financial statements.

14. Other than agreeing 11 of the 4,000 entries on the report management provided to various account statements, Respondents performed no procedures with respect to MediaNet's accounts receivable.[17/] Instead, Respondents proposed that MediaNet increase the accounts receivable total reflected in management's report by $61,628. In fact, Respondents highlighted various entries in the report that management could double count to support the $61,628 increase.

Revenue

15. Respondents also violated PCAOB standards by failing to perform adequate procedures to test the existence and valuation of MediaNet's reported revenue.[18/] Those failures occurred despite Respondents' recognition when planning the audit that MediaNet's revenue presented a risk of material misstatement due to fraud.[19/]

16. For fiscal year 2009, MediaNet reported revenue of approximately $1.7 million. During the audit, Respondents failed to perform any substantive testing of that reported revenue. That failure occurred even though Respondents obtained a schedule from management indicating that revenue may have been overstated by more than 80 percent.

17. Specifically, during the audit, Respondents obtained from management a system-generated report purporting to summarize MediaNet's sales by customer for the entire fiscal year ("Sales Report"). According to the Sales Report, MediaNet's total sales for the year were only $277,454. Respondents failed both to test the revenue items contained in the Sales Report and to investigate or address the discrepancy between the Sales Report balance and MediaNet's reported revenue.

[17/] Under PCAOB standards, "there is a presumption that the auditor will request the confirmation of accounts receivable during an audit," unless the accounts receivable are immaterial or the auditor concludes that the use of confirmations would be ineffective. AU § 330.34, The Confirmation Process. Respondents did not request any confirmations of accounts receivable and, instead, documented that confirmation procedures were "not applicable," without further explanation. That statement was not sufficient under PCAOB standards to overcome the presumption that Respondents would request confirmation of accounts receivable. See id. § 330.35 ("[A]n auditor who has not requested confirmations in the examination of accounts receivable should document how he or she overcame this presumption").

The Audit of China Logistics' 2009 Financial Statements

18. Hutech21 Co. Ltd. (f/k/a China Logistics, Inc.) ("China Logistics") was, at all relevant times, a Nevada corporation headquartered in the People's Republic of China ("PRC"). China Logistics' public filings disclose that it was engaged in the business of providing logistical services for car manufacturers, car components, food assortments, chemicals, paper, and machinery. Its common stock was registered under Section 12(b) of the Exchange Act, and its stock was quoted on the Pink Sheets. At all relevant times, China Logistics was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

19. The Firm expressed an unqualified opinion on China Logistics' 2009 fiscal year-end financial statements in an audit report dated April 12, 2010, which was included in China Logistics' Form 10-K filed with the Commission on April 16, 2010. The report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards and that, in the Firm's opinion, the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with GAAP. Lake authorized the issuance of the audit report.

20. Respondents failed to comply with applicable PCAOB standards in connection with the audit of China Logistics' fiscal year 2009 financial statements ("2009 China Logistics Audit"). Specifically, Respondents failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter as to the existence or valuation of approximately $3.8 million of China Logistics' inventory, which represented more than 35 percent of the Company's total reported assets.

21. PCAOB standards specify that "[o]bservation of inventories is a generally accepted auditing procedure," and that an auditor who has not employed that procedure "has the burden of justifying the opinion expressed."[20/] During the 2009 China Logistics Audit, Respondents failed to perform observation procedures or any other procedures to test the existence of the inventory the company reported.

22. Additionally, with respect to 89 percent of reported inventory (by value), Respondents did not perform any audit procedures at all, including any procedures concerning valuation.[21/] As to the other 11% of reported inventory, Respondents purported to conduct valuation testing, but selected for testing only one item. Such limited testing failed to provide Respondents with adequate assurance concerning the valuation of the recorded inventory balance.

The Audit of China Education's 2009 Financial Statements

23. China Education Technology, Inc. ("China Education") was, at all relevant times, a Nevada corporation with its principal executive office in the PRC. China Education's public filings disclose that it was a high-tech company specializing in the research and development of education products and technology applications. Its common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act, and its stock was quoted on the Pink Sheets. Since that time, China Education has filed a Form 15-12G Certification and Notice of Termination of Registration with the Commission. At all relevant times, China Education was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

24. The Firm expressed an unqualified opinion on China Education's 2009 fiscal year-end financial statements in an audit report dated May 12, 2010, which was included in China Education's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on May 14, 2010. The report stated that the audit (the "2009 China Education Audit") was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards and that, in the Firm's opinion, the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with GAAP. Lake authorized the issuance of the audit report.

25. Just as in the 2009 China Logistics Audit, Respondents failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter as to the existence and valuation of inventory in the 2009 China Education Audit.[22/] At year-end 2009, China Education reported inventory of $372,971, which was approximately 17.5 percent of reported assets. Respondents failed to conduct physical inventory counts or perform other procedures sufficient to verify the existence of this inventory.[23/] In fact, Respondents' work papers contain a template for an inventory count form that is blank. Respondents also failed to obtain any audit evidence or perform any audit

The Audit of China Fruits' 2009 Financial Statements

26. China Fruits Corp. ("China Fruits") was, at all relevant times, a Nevada corporation headquartered in the PRC. China Fruits' public filings disclose that it was engaged in the business of manufacturing, trading, and distributing Nanfeng tangerines and tangerine-based products. China Fruits' common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and its stock is currently quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, China Fruits was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

27. The Firm expressed an unqualified opinion on China Fruits' 2009 fiscal year-end financial statements in an audit report dated April 12, 2010, which was included in China Fruits' Form 10-K filed with the Commission on April 15, 2010. The report stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards and that, in the Firm's opinion, the company's financial statements were fairly presented in all material respects in conformity with GAAP. Lake authorized the issuance of the report. Respondents failed to comply with applicable PCAOB standards in connection with the audit of China Fruits' fiscal year 2009 financial statements.

28. China Fruits disclosed in its Form 10-K (and Respondents knew at the time of the audit) that it had sold one of its business lines in the second quarter of 2009. China Fruits treated the sale as discontinued operations and recast its historical financial statements for prior periods, including for 2008, to account for the discontinued operations. Respondents failed to perform adequate audit procedures concerning the presentation and disclosure of the company's discontinued operations.

29. In fact, Respondents failed to plan or carry out essentially any audit procedures relating to China Fruits' classification of the results of its discontinued operations for 2008.[25/] Although China Fruits provided Respondents with an adjusting entry and an adjusted trial balance showing the reclassification for 2008, Respondents failed to perform any procedures to evaluate the reasonableness of the amounts attributed to discontinued operations for that year.[26/]

30. Respondents also failed to appropriately evaluate the amounts that China Fruits had attributed to discontinued operations for 2009.[27/] China Fruits' 2009 statement of operations included $683,603 in general and administrative expenses, which represented more than 60 percent of the total operating expenses China Fruits reported. Respondents' work papers, however, indicate that $174,950 of that amount should have been included in the results of discontinued operations rather than in general and administrative expenses. Respondents failed to plan or perform any steps to reconcile the reported amounts of general and administrative expenses from continuing operations with the contradictory information contained in the work papers.

31. After being alerted to these failures during a Board inspection, Respondents requested that China Fruits restate its financial statements to present properly its results from discontinued operations, which China Fruits did.[28/]

Violations Relating to Multiple Audits

32. Respondents also repeatedly violated PCAOB standards requiring them to identify, assess, and respond to risks of material misstatement due to fraud and to prepare appropriate audit documentation.

33. Specifically, Respondents failed, in connection with each of the Audits, to conduct the required audit team discussion concerning the risks of material misstatement due to fraud. Respondents also failed, in connection with three of the four Audits, to perform the required analytical procedures to identify "unusual transactions or events, and amounts, ratios, and trends that might indicate matters that have financial statement and audit planning implications."[29/]

34. With respect to the documentation of significant findings or issues required by AS 3, Respondents failed to document, in connection with three of the four Audits, significant unusual transactions or matters that could result in a modification of the audit report. ORDER

D. The Firm Violated PCAOB Rules and Quality Control Standards and Lake Knowingly or Recklessly Contributed to Those Violations

35. PCAOB rules require registered public accounting firms to comply with the Board's quality control standards,[31/] which, in turn, require every registered firm to "have a system of quality control for its accounting and auditing practice."[32/]

36. Under PCAOB quality control standards, a firm should establish policies and procedures that "provide the firm with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality."[33/] Those procedures should encompass "all phases of the design and execution of the engagement," including "planning, performing, supervising, reviewing, documenting, and communicating the results of each engagement."[34/] The Firm failed to comply with these PCAOB quality control standards in connection with the Audits.

37. At all relevant times, the Firm failed to put policies and procedures in place to ensure that engagement personnel performed audit procedures necessary to comply with all PCAOB standards.[35/] As a result, in multiple instances, the Firm's personnel failed to complete necessary audit work before the Firm released its audit opinions for the Audits, and, in other instances, failed to document any significant work in critical audit areas.

38. In particular, the Firm failed to establish sufficient policies and procedures to provide it with reasonable assurance that its engagement personnel evaluated the risk that the financial statements under audit may be misstated due to fraud.[36/] As noted above, as a result of these quality control failures, the Firm failed, in conducting the Audits, to comply with PCAOB standards requiring engagement team members to

39. The Firm's system of quality control also failed to provide reasonable assurance that engagement personnel complied with PCAOB audit documentation requirements, as set forth in AS 3. As noted above, as a result, the Firm's Audits violated AS 3 in multiple respects.

40. PCAOB Rule 3502 prohibits an associated person of a registered public accounting firm from taking or omitting to take an action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that the act or omission would directly and substantially contribute to a violation of Board standards by that firm. Respondent Lake, the managing member of the Firm, was principally responsible for designing, implementing, and monitoring the Firm's system of quality control.[39/] Accordingly, Lake had overall responsibility for ensuring that the Firm complied with PCAOB rules and standards. All of the Firm's conduct described in paragraphs 37 through 39 above was either conduct of Lake's or omissions to act for which Lake was responsible. With respect to all such acts and omissions, Lake knew, or was reckless in not knowing, that his acts and omissions would directly and substantially contribute to the Firm's quality control violations described above. Lake thereby violated PCAOB Rule 3502.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Lake & Associates, CPA's LLC, is hereby censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Lake & Associates, CPA's LLC, is revoked;

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Nathan M. Suddeth, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-007 September 10, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is: (1) censuring Nathan M. Suddeth, CPA ("Suddeth"); and (2) barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that Suddeth violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards by creating and improperly backdating certain audit work papers in connection with a Board inspection.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended, (the "Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Suddeth.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Suddeth has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over him and the subject matter of these proceedings, which are admitted, Suddeth consents to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[2/]

III.

On the basis of Suddeth's Offer, the Board finds[3/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Nathan M. Suddeth, age 47, of Gibsonia, Pennsylvania, is a certified public accountant who is licensed under the laws of the State of Illinois (license no. 065-029071) and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (license no. CA052400). At all relevant times, Suddeth was a partner in the Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania office of Deloitte & Touche LLP ("Deloitte"), and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Suddeth was the engagement partner for Deloitte's audits of the fiscal year 2009, 2010, and 2011 financial statements of the "Company," as defined below in paragraph 3. As the engagement partner, Suddeth was responsible for supervising the members of the Company audit engagement team, and had overall responsibility for ensuring their compliance with PCAOB rules and auditing standards relating to the audits of the Company. In June 2010, Deloitte appointed Suddeth as the Partner in Charge of Deloitte's audit practice for the Pittsburgh office. In or about July 2012, Deloitte investigated allegations that Suddeth had improperly added work papers to the Company audit documentation in advance of a PCAOB inspection. By August 2012, Deloitte voluntarily reported the results of its investigation to the PCAOB, and removed Suddeth both from his role as Partner in Charge of the audit practice for the Pittsburgh office and from all direct audit responsibility for any public or private client. Suddeth retired from Deloitte effective June 1, 2013.

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Suddeth's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[3/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Suddeth in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Suddeth's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

B. Summary

2. This matter concerns Suddeth's failure to cooperate in a Board inspection and failure to adhere to the Board's standards regarding audit documentation. Specifically, Suddeth violated Board rules and auditing standards by creating and improperly backdating three work papers for an audit, more than two months after the applicable documentation completion date, and after he knew that the Board had selected that audit for inspection. At no time did Suddeth make PCAOB inspectors aware that he had created those work papers, improperly backdated them, and caused them to be added to Deloitte's audit documentation shortly before the inspection. Through his actions, Suddeth violated PCAOB Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors. Suddeth's conduct also violated PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3 ("AS3"), Audit Documentation, because he caused documents to be added to the work papers after the documentation completion date, without indicating the actual dates that the documents were added to the work papers and the reasons for adding the documentation.

C. Suddeth Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

3. The "Company" is an issuer as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). In June 2011, the Board began fieldwork for its inspection of Deloitte's audit of the Company's December 31, 2010 financial statements.

4. PCAOB rules require that an associated person of a registered public accounting firm "shall cooperate with the Board in the performance of any Board inspection."[4/] This cooperation obligation includes an obligation not to provide misleading documents or information in connection with the Board's inspection processes.[5/] PCAOB rules also require that associated persons of registered public accounting firms comply with the Board's auditing standards.[6/] Among other things, PCAOB auditing standards require that an auditor make certain written disclosures if the auditor adds audit work papers after the documentation completion date.[7/] As described below, Suddeth violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards when he: (1) created and improperly backdated three documents and caused them to be added to the audit work papers after the documentation completion date; (2) provided those misleading documents to the Board in connection with the Board's inspection of the audit; and (3) failed to disclose to the Board that a statement in an "Engagement Profile," submitted to the Board prior to the inspection, was no longer accurate because of the addition of the three documents after the documentation completion date.

The Audit

5. Deloitte audited the Company's December 31, 2010 financial statements. Suddeth served as the engagement partner for that audit (the "Audit").

6. Deloitte's audit report for the Audit expressed an unqualified opinion and stated that the Audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. The audit report stated that the Company's December 31, 2010 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the Company's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles. The audit report was included in the Company's annual report filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission").

7. The audit report release date for the Audit was prior to March 1, 2011.[8/] The documentation completion date, therefore, was prior to April 15, 2011.[9/] While information may be added to the work papers following the documentation completion date, the new documentation must disclose the date the information was added, the person preparing the additional documentation, and the reason for adding the information to the work papers after the documentation completion date.[10/]

ORDER

Suddeth Failed to Prepare Audit Documentation in a Timely Manner

8. During the Audit, Suddeth planned to document that he held certain meetings with the Company's management, specifically the Chief Financial Officer and General Counsel, to discuss, among other things, information relating to risks of fraud at the Company.[11/] Suddeth documented that he had those discussions in two memoranda (respectively, the "CFO Memorandum" and the "GC Memorandum"), but did not do so until more than two months after the documentation completion date.

9. During the Audit, Suddeth also planned to draft a memorandum (the "Independence Memorandum") to document Deloitte's consideration of the requirements of PCAOB Rule 3524, Audit Committee Pre-Approval of Certain Tax Services, PCAOB Rule 3525, Audit Committee Pre-Approval of Non-Audit Services Related to Internal Control Over Financial Reporting, and Rule 3526, Communication with Audit Committees Concerning Independence, information that those rules require to be documented. Suddeth also did not complete the Independence Memorandum until more than two months after the documentation completion date.

10. Between the audit report release date and the documentation completion date for the Audit, Suddeth was reminded by the engagement team that the CFO Memorandum, GC Memorandum, and Independence Memorandum (collectively, the "Three Memoranda") were not in the work papers.

11. Just prior to the Audit engagement team submitting the Audit documentation to Deloitte's records management office to begin the process of archival and retention, Suddeth informed the Audit engagement team that he would not complete the Three Memoranda prior to commencement of the submission process. However, Suddeth caused a work paper index for the Audit to list the Three Memoranda as manual work papers (i.e., work papers in hard copy paper format, as opposed to electronic format).[12/]

[11/] AU §§ 316.20 – 316.27, Consideration of Fraud in a Financial Statement Audit, provide that auditors should inquire of management and others about risks of fraud during the audit. All references to PCAOB standards are to the versions of those standards in effect at the time of Deloitte's audit of the Company for fiscal year 2010.

[12/] The work paper indexes for Deloitte's audits of the Company for fiscal years 2009 and 2011 also list memoranda similar to the CFO Memorandum and GC Memorandum as manual work papers. However, those memoranda were never included in the work papers for those audits, nor did the Board inspect those audits.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

12. As of the documentation completion date for the Audit, Deloitte had assembled the Audit work papers for retention, but neither Suddeth nor anyone else had completed the Three Memoranda or added them to the work papers for the Audit.

Suddeth's Steps Taken in Advance of the Board's Inspection

13. By May 23, 2011, the Board notified Deloitte that the Board's Division of Registration and Inspections ("Board's Inspection Division") would inspect the Audit. The Act "requires the Board to conduct a 'continuing program of inspections to assess the degree of compliance of each registered public accounting firm and associated persons . . . with [the Act], the rules of the Board, the rules of the Commission, or professional standards.'"[13/]

14. On May 23, 2011, Deloitte informed Suddeth that the Audit would be inspected by the Board's Inspection Division. Field work for the inspection was scheduled to commence on June 13, 2011.

The Engagement Profile

15. Before inspection field work began, the Board's Inspection Division provided Deloitte with a document entitled Public Company Accounting Oversight Board 2011 Inspection Period Engagement Profile ("Engagement Profile"), and requested that the document be completed and returned by June 6, 2011. The Audit engagement team completed the Engagement Profile, and Suddeth reviewed it, signed it, and submitted it to the Board's Inspection Division on June 6, 2011.

16. One of the questions in the Engagement Profile stated: "Have there been any changes made to the audit documentation subsequent to the documentation complete [sic] date[?] If yes, please explain the nature of the changes below, and provide a summary log of when the changes were made." Deloitte's response in the Engagement Profile stated: "Archive was re-submitted on [a date just after the documentation completion date] in order to delete duplicate Permanent File binder records within the archive. No changes to archived file made."

Suddeth Created and Backdated the Three Memoranda

17. On June 11, 2011, two days before the Board's Inspection Division arrived at Deloitte's Pittsburgh office to inspect the Audit, Suddeth informed a member of the Audit engagement team that Suddeth intended to complete the Three Memoranda.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

18. On the evening of June 12, 2011 and morning of June 13, 2011, Suddeth completed the Three Memoranda, identifying himself as their author and initialing by his typewritten name. He improperly backdated each of the Three Memoranda to a date on or just prior to the audit report release date for the Audit. The Three Memoranda do not indicate the date on which they had actually been completed.

Suddeth Caused the Three Memoranda to be Added to the Work Papers

19. On the morning of June 13, 2011, Suddeth caused the Three Memoranda to be added to the manual work paper binders.

20. The Audit work papers did not indicate the date the Three Memoranda actually were added to the work papers and the reasons they were added more than two months after the documentation completion date.

21. As a result of the conduct described above, Suddeth violated PCAOB Rule 3100, Compliance with Auditing and Related Professional Practice Standards, and PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation.

Misleading Documents Provided to the Board During the Board's Inspection

22. Field work for the Board's inspection took place during the weeks of June 13, 2011 and June 27, 2011. During field work, Suddeth knew that Deloitte made the manual work papers for the Audit, including the Three Memoranda, available to the Board's inspectors. Also during field work for the inspection, Suddeth communicated with personnel from the Board's Inspection Division. At no point in time did Suddeth disclose or instruct others to disclose to the Board's Inspection Division that he had improperly backdated the Three Memoranda and caused them to be improperly added to the Audit work papers after the documentation completion date, on the very morning that inspection field work began.

23. At no point in time did Suddeth inform or instruct others to inform the Board's Inspection Division that the Engagement Profile that he submitted the week before inspection field work was misleading as a result of his subsequently causing the misleading Three Memoranda to be added to the Audit work papers.[14/] Under the circumstances, Suddeth's duty to cooperate with the Board's inspectors required that he make such a disclosure.

In view of the foregoing and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Suddeth's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Nathan M. Suddeth, CPA, is censured;

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-008
In the Matter of Deloitte & Touche LLP,	October 22, 2013
Respondent.

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is: (1) censuring the registered public accounting firm Deloitte & Touche LLP ("Deloitte"); (2) imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $2,000,000; and (3) requiring Deloitte to undertake certain remedial actions.

The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Deloitte's violations of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), and PCAOB rules by permitting a former partner of Deloitte, who was subject to a Board-ordered suspension, to become an "associated person" of Deloitte during the period of the suspension.

I.

On March 20, 2013, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings against Deloitte pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1). Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, these proceedings were not public. Pursuant to Section 105(c) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, Deloitte did not consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Deloitte submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Deloitte and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Deloitte consents to the entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[1/]

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Deloitte's Offer, the Board finds that:[2/]

A. Respondent

1. Deloitte is, and at all relevant times was, a public accounting firm organized as a limited liability partnership under the laws of the State of Delaware and headquartered in New York, New York. Deloitte has offices in multiple locations, including Wilton, Connecticut, where it housed certain firm-wide functions included as part of its National Office. Deloitte is registered with the Board under Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules.

B. Other Relevant Individual

2. Christopher E. Anderson ("Anderson"), 51, of Lake Forest, Illinois, is a certified public accountant licensed in Washington (license no. 15285). At all relevant times, Anderson was an agent of Deloitte, first as a partner in Deloitte's Chicago, Illinois office, and then, in anticipation of the settlement that resulted in the Board's issuance of an Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions, In the Matter of Christopher E. Anderson, CPA, PCAOB Rel. No. 105-2008-003 (Oct. 31, 2008) (the "Anderson Order"), as a salaried Director employed in Deloitte's National Office.

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Deloitte's Offer and are not binding on any other persons or entities in this or any other proceeding.

[2/] The Board finds that Deloitte's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

C. Deloitte Violated the Act and PCAOB Rules

3. This matter concerns Deloitte's violations of the Act and PCAOB rules when it permitted Anderson, a former Deloitte partner, to become or remain an associated person of Deloitte during the time that Anderson was subject to a Board order suspending Anderson from being associated with a registered public accounting firm.

Background

4. On October 31, 2008, the Board issued the Anderson Order, with Anderson's consent, on a neither admit nor deny basis. The Anderson Order resulted from Anderson's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards when he served as the engagement partner for Deloitte's audit of the fiscal year 2003 financial statements of Navistar Financial Corporation ("NFC"). Among other things, the Anderson Order suspended Anderson for a period of one year from the date of the Anderson Order (the "suspension year") from being an "associated person of a registered public accounting firm," as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act, Definitions: Person Associated with a Public Accounting Firm, and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(1), Definitions of Terms Employed in Rules: Person Associated with a Public Accounting Firm (and Related Terms). The suspension year covered the period October 31, 2008 through October 30, 2009.

5. Under the Act and PCAOB rules, a registered public accounting firm that knows an individual is suspended from associating with any registered firm may not permit him to become or remain an "associated person" of the firm without the consent of the Board or the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission").[3/] The Act and PCAOB rules define an "associated person" as, among other things, any "professional employee of a public accounting firm . . . that, in connection with the preparation or issuance of any audit report . . . participates as agent on behalf of such accounting firm in any activity of that firm."[4/]

6. After the Board issued the Anderson Order, Deloitte permitted Anderson to become or remain an associated person of the firm by placing him in a position that allowed him to engage in activities in connection with the preparation or issuance of issuer audit reports.[5/] It did so with knowledge of the Anderson Order and without the consent of the Board or the Commission. Although Deloitte took certain actions to limit Anderson's deployment, Deloitte failed to develop sufficient policies and procedures to ensure that Anderson did not remain associated with the firm during the suspension year. By these acts and omissions, Deloitte violated Section 105(c)(7)(A) of the Act, Effect of Suspension: Association with a Public Accounting Firm, and PCAOB Rule 5301(b), Effect of Sanctions: Effect on Registered Public Accounting Firms.

7. After the Division began its investigation of Anderson's conduct as the engagement partner for the NFC audit, but before the Anderson Order was issued, Deloitte restricted Anderson's deployment by prohibiting him from signing audit opinions for public company clients, from accepting new public company audit engagements, and from serving as a concurring reviewer on such engagements.

8. In anticipation of a potential settlement between Anderson and the Board, Deloitte began the process of removing Anderson from its Chicago audit practice and transferring him to the Audit and Assurance Services ("A&AS") Group within the firm's National Office. The A&AS Group was responsible for handling consultations with all audit engagement teams, including issuer engagement teams, and also was responsible for developing and maintaining all of Deloitte's audit policies and guidance, including for issuer audits.

9. At that time, in spring 2008, the leader of the A&AS Group in the National Office ("Group Leader"), with input from Anderson, drafted a description of Anderson's proposed job duties ("Anderson position description") for a three to five year assignment in the A&AS Group. The then-deputy managing partner of Deloitte's Audit and Enterprise Risk Services professional practice department reviewed the position description.

10. Based, in part, on the position description drafted and approved by the Group Leader, Deloitte's Leadership Oversight Committee ("LOC") approved transferring Anderson to the A&AS Group of the National Office.[6/] The LOC, among other things, had primary responsibility on behalf of Deloitte for determining and directing appropriate remedial actions to be taken with respect to Deloitte partners and employees subject to regulatory action. Anderson officially transferred into the National Office in July 2008 and remained there during the suspension year.

11. At the time Deloitte transferred Anderson to the National Office pursuant to the position description, Deloitte assigned the Group Leader to supervise Anderson. During the suspension year, the Group Leader understood that Anderson was subject to a Board-ordered suspension.

12. Anderson's position description listed three general responsibilities. Those general responsibilities included, among other things: (a) "oversee[ing] how [Deloitte] effectively and efficiently use[s] specialists on [Deloitte's] audit engagements;" (b) "oversee[ing] the reconsideration of [Deloitte's] audit approach as it related to the consideration of fraud," and (c) "lead[ing] other miscellaneous projects," including the development of Deloitte audit guidance.

13. The position description did not reference the Board-ordered suspension and did not include an analysis of how Anderson's job responsibilities were consistent with his suspension pursuant to the definition of "associated person," as set forth in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(1), or how Deloitte complied with its obligations in Section 105(c)(7)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5301(b).

14. The position description stated that, "[a]t this time, we will not be using [Anderson] on consultations or any other client specific matters." The Group Leader and Anderson believed that, consistent with the limitations of the position description, Anderson would have contact with issuer engagement teams, and might provide certain audit advice of a general nature to issuer audit engagement teams. Anderson and the Group Leader did not inform the LOC of their belief, but the Group Leader later confirmed to the LOC that Anderson was "not doing any consultations." No one on the LOC advised Anderson or the Group Leader that Anderson was not permitted to provide advice of a general nature.

15. Prior to the issuance of the Anderson Order and the commencement of the suspension year, Deloitte sought and received guidance from the Board's staff concerning whether Anderson could "continue as a partner of the firm and [continue] to be compensated as such" pursuant to the compensation prong of the definition of "associated person," and at Deloitte's suggestion Anderson resigned from the Deloitte partnership and became a Director, a salaried position.[7/] In seeking guidance from the Board's staff, Deloitte did not seek guidance about Anderson's intended role in Deloitte's National Office,[8/] and, during the suspension year, did not inform Board staff about Anderson's actual activities in that role.[9/]

Anderson's Activities During the Suspension Year

Anderson's Role in Deloitte's National Office

16. Each registered public accounting firm is required to develop, implement, and maintain a system of quality control for its accounting and audit practice.[10/] A firm's system of quality control is designed to provide that "firm with reasonable assurance that its personnel comply with applicable professional standards and the firm's standards of quality."[11/]

17. Deloitte maintains a system of quality control for its audit practice, including its issuer audit practice, which includes a National Office function for ensuring the development, implementation, and maintenance of, among other things, audit guidance, audit training materials, audit practice alerts, and consultations with engagement teams for use in Deloitte's audit practice.

The e-mail did not include any other specifics about Anderson's limitations or what Anderson was or was not permitted to do.

ORDER

18. During the suspension year, and consistent with his position description, Anderson participated in the development of Deloitte's quality control policies and procedures, including among other things, the development and drafting of audit guidance, training materials, and practice alerts applicable to issuer audits.[12/] Deloitte's quality control policies and procedures were designed, among other things, to help issuer engagement teams, among others, understand their responsibilities and comply with professional auditing standards, including PCAOB standards.

19. Among other things, Anderson participated in developing, drafting, and presenting training materials, firm guidance, and forms relating to a variety of topics, including, but not limited to, Pension Actuaries, Insurance Reserves, Capital Markets Valuations, Fair Value, Auditing Assumptions, Self Insurance, Journal Entry Testing, and Risk Management. Anderson did not have ultimate responsibility or approval authority within Deloitte for any of the Deloitte materials he participated in developing or drafting.

20. The individuals with access to the audit guidance that Anderson drafted or contributed to included, among others, individuals working on Deloitte's audits of issuers.

Anderson's Advice to Issuer Engagement Teams

21. During the suspension year, Anderson's name was included in the firm's internal directories as a National Office consultation resource on subject matters that related to issuer audits. As such, Anderson was listed as one of the professionals in the National Office who was a subject-matter resource for consultations related to "Fair Value/Use of Specialists and Fraud – Miscellaneous."

22. On three occasions during the suspension year, Anderson responded to questions from Deloitte engagement team members seeking guidance on the interpretation of firm-wide policies and procedures and the applicability of PCAOB audit standards concerning subjects falling within Anderson's areas of expertise, including, for example, the use of specialists and journal-entry testing in performing audits of the financial statements of issuer clients.

23. Specifically, during the suspension year Anderson provided advice in connection with Deloitte's audits of the fiscal year-end 2009 financial statements of three issuers, each of which Anderson knew, at the time, was an issuer audit client of Deloitte. In each instance, Anderson communicated directly with a member of an audit engagement team who was seeking advice from Deloitte's National Office in connection with the audit of an issuer client.

Issuer A

24. During the suspension year, Anderson consulted with the audit engagement team for Issuer A in connection with the preparation or issuance of Deloitte's audit report on Issuer A's 2009 financial statements.

25. In September 2009, the Issuer A engagement team consulted with Deloitte's National Office to ask whether the engagement team was required to obtain an independence confirmation from a third-party specialist hired by Issuer A to value the company's asbestos reserve. The senior manager on the team contacted Deloitte's consultation hotline, and the request was received by a senior manager in Deloitte's National Office. The senior manager in the National Office forwarded the consultation request to Anderson, stating that because "this question is audit related, I prefer to send it to someone" in Deloitte's A&AS Group in the National Office.

26. Anderson contacted the senior manager on the Issuer A engagement team and consulted with him concerning whether Deloitte needed to obtain an independence confirmation from Issuer A's third-party specialist. After speaking with Anderson, the engagement team documented the consultation in an October 15, 2009 work paper, stating: "We discussed this matter with Chris Anderson, National Office Assurance Services, who agreed with the conclusions reached."

Issuer B

27. During the suspension year, Anderson also advised the audit engagement team for Issuer B in connection with the preparation or issuance of Deloitte's audit report on Issuer B's fiscal year-end 2009 financial statements.

28. In June 2009, a partner in Deloitte's National Office e-mailed Anderson selected work papers from Issuer B's 2008 audit, in connection with the planning of Issuer B's 2009 audit. After reviewing those work papers, Anderson participated in a conference call with members of the 2009 Issuer B audit engagement team. Following the conference call, an electronic data analysis specialist ("specialist") in Deloitte's National Office who had also participated in the call, drafted written recommendations to the 2009 Issuer B audit engagement team, and sought comments from Anderson on those draft recommendations. Anderson replied that her draft recommendations "look[ed] good," and the specialist then responded to the engagement team in a June 17, 2009 e-mail that, among other things, identified "[o]pportunities to streamline the working papers documentation" for the Issuer B audit engagement.

29. Next, in August 2009, a senior manager on the 2009 Issuer B audit engagement team sought advice from Deloitte's National Office by e-mailing the specialist and copying the e-mail to Anderson. The senior manager on the audit engagement team noted that the engagement team used a data analysis tool to select journal entries for testing through the first three quarters of 2009, and asked whether the engagement team was required to use that tool to select journal entries for testing for the fourth quarter of 2009.

30. In his August 4, 2009 e-mail response, Anderson advised the senior manager on the 2009 Issuer B audit engagement team that there was no requirement to use the data analysis tool to select journal entries for testing for the fourth quarter of 2009. Anderson further advised that the PCAOB auditing "standard requires that we [, i.e. Deloitte,] consider testing [journal entries] throughout the year." Anderson advised the engagement team that it "may conclude that it is not necessary to test the entries posted during the 4th quarter (other than those recorded as part of the financial close reporting process)."

Issuer C

31. During the suspension year, Anderson also advised the audit engagement team for Issuer C in connection with the preparation or issuance of Deloitte's audit report on Issuer C's December 31, 2009 financial statements.

32. The Issuer C audit engagement team sought input from Deloitte's National Office concerning journal entry testing. Issuer C was a new audit client for Deloitte, and the Issuer C audit engagement team sought input from the National Office regarding Deloitte's ability to rely on journal entry testing performed by Issuer C's internal audit department. At the direction of the audit engagement partner, a manager on the Issuer C audit engagement team sent an e-mail requesting assistance to Deloitte's National Office. The e-mail was received by a senior manager in the National Office, an individual whose responsibilities included forwarding consultation requests to subject-matter resources within the National Office. The National Office senior manager forwarded the consultation request to Anderson.

33. On or about September 25, 2009, Anderson and the manager on the Issuer C audit engagement team had a telephone conference to discuss journal entry testing for the Issuer C audit. Anderson identified the relevant Deloitte auditing guidance for the engagement team and discussed whether, and in what way, the engagement team could use the journal entry testing performed by Issuer C's internal audit department.

Deloitte Permitted Anderson to Associate with the Firm.

34. By its acts and omissions described above, Deloitte permitted Anderson to become or remain an associated person by engaging in activities on Deloitte's behalf in connection with the preparation or issuance of audit reports for Deloitte's issuer clients, during the suspension year.

35. The LOC did not develop sufficient policies or procedures to ensure that Anderson complied with the terms of the Anderson Order. The LOC did not appropriately instruct anyone at Deloitte concerning how to monitor Anderson's compliance with the limitations imposed by the Anderson Order.

36. As a result of the actions and omissions described above, Deloitte violated Section 105(c)(7)(A) of the Act, Effect of Suspension – Association with a Public Accounting Firm, and PCAOB Rule 5301(b), Effect of Sanctions – Effect on Registered Public Accounting Firms.

IV.

37. Deloitte has represented to the Board that, since the events described in this Order and after the investigation in this matter began, it has established and implemented the following changes to its quality control policies and procedures for persons subject to PCAOB-ordered restrictions on activities:

a. On February 2, 2010, the LOC adopted procedures requiring (i) definition of the individual's responsibilities while associated with Deloitte and a determination that those responsibilities are consistent with the individual's PCAOB-ordered restrictions; (ii) appointment of a supervisor to monitor the individual's work; (iii) the signing of an LOC-approved job description by both the individual subject to restriction and the supervisor; (iv) periodic meetings between the supervisor and the individual for the express purpose of ensuring that the individual's activities are consistent with the regulatory requirements; and (v) semi-annual reporting by the supervisor to the LOC on compliance with restrictions;

b. On August 16, 2012, the LOC (i) revised its policies to emphasize and clarify that "[t]he [LOC approved] job responsibilities will be such that there is no risk that the individual will engage in conduct that calls into question compliance with the terms of the [o]rder or other limitation;" and (ii) added the requirement that the individual's job responsibilities shall be communicated to the PCAOB staff in advance of or contemporaneously with the term of the restrictions;

c. The LOC subsequently adopted a policy of not allowing individuals subject to PCAOB-ordered restrictions to hold any role forming part of its system of quality control for its issuer audit practice; and

d. The LOC formed a subcommittee to handle, on an expedited basis, matters arising between regularly scheduled LOC meetings involving individuals subject to PCAOB-ordered restrictions.

V.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Deloitte is hereby censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $2,000,000 is imposed. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of these civil money penalties will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Deloitte shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer in accordance with instructions furnished by Board staff, United States postal money order certified check, bank cashier's check, or bank money order; (b) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (c) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W.,

Brown, Secretary, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006; and

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(G) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(9), Deloitte shall establish and implement the following additional changes to its quality control policies and procedures for persons subject to PCAOB-ordered restrictions:

1. The LOC shall document its analysis and resulting determination (see supra paragraph 37.a(i)) that a restricted individual's responsibilities are consistent with his/her PCAOB-ordered restriction;

2. A member of the LOC, in addition to the individual and supervisor, shall sign the LOC-approved job description (see supra paragraph 37.a.(iii));

3. The signing member of the LOC shall meet with the supervisor to discuss the specific LOC-approved responsibilities and restrictions, and to discuss how the LOC expects the supervisor to monitor the individual's compliance with the restrictions;

4. The reporting by the supervisor to the LOC on compliance with restrictions (see supra paragraph 37.a(v)) shall occur on a quarterly basis, rather than semi-annually as Deloitte currently requires;

5. In connection with the quarterly reporting to the LOC on compliance with restrictions, the individual, the supervisor, and the signing member of the LOC, shall all document and sign their understanding that the individual remains in compliance with the PCAOB-ordered restrictions;

6. The LOC shall ensure that the restricted individual's specific restrictions are communicated to other individuals at Deloitte, including but not limited to, those supervising the individual's daily responsibilities, those working with the individual, those in the issuer audit practice who may reasonably come in contact with the individual in connection with the firm's audit practice, and any others responsible for disseminating information concerning the individual to personnel within the firm or in marketing materials external to the firm; and,

7. If at any time and for any reason, Deloitte believes that the individual has not complied with PCAOB-ordered restrictions and/or the individual, supervisor, or signing member of the LOC is unable to sign the quarterly compliance document referenced in part V.C.5 above, Deloitte must promptly report this information to the PCAOB Division of Enforcement and Investigations staff.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Hood & Associates CPAs, P.C., and Rick C. Freeman, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-012 November 21, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (the "Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Hood & Associates CPAs, P.C. (the "Firm"), revoking the Firm's registration, and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $10,000 upon the Firm;[1/] and censuring Rick C. Freeman, CPA ("Freeman") and permanently barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning the Firm and Freeman (collectively, "Respondents") that: (a) Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the audits of three issuer clients and Section 10A(a) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") in connection with the Firm's audit of one issuer client; (b) Respondents violated Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, and PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the Firm's audits of two issuer clients; (c) the Firm violated, and Freeman directly and substantially contributed to the Firm's violations of, Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder in connection with all three issuer audits in 2011; and (d) the Firm violated PCAOB quality control standards and Freeman directly and substantially contributed to the Firm's violation of PCAOB quality control standards.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Freeman and the Firm.

[1/] The Firm may reapply for registration after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement (the "Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions (the "Order") as set forth below.[2/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[3/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Hood & Associates CPAs, P.C. is, and at all relevant times was, a professional corporation organized and licensed under the laws of the state of Oklahoma (License No. 13387), and headquartered in Tulsa, Oklahoma. The Firm has been registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules since October 22, 2003. At all relevant times, the Firm was the external auditor for each of the issuers identified below during the relevant audit years.[4/]

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[3/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

[4/] The Firm issued certain of the relevant audit reports while operating under the names Hood Sutton Robinson & Freeman CPAs, P.C., and Sutton Robinson & Freeman CPAs, P.C.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

2. Rick C. Freeman, 54, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the State of Missouri (License No. 2001003942), the State of Oklahoma (License No. 13676), and the State of Texas (License No. 087868). At all relevant times, Freeman was the sole audit partner at the Firm, and was the auditor with final responsibility for, and authorized the issuance of, the Firm's audits of the financial statements of each of the issuers identified below. Additionally, Freeman was the only person at the Firm staffing the relevant audit engagements. At all relevant times, Freeman was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the issuance of audit reports on the financial statements of three issuers over a multiple year period (collectively, the "Audits").[5/] Respondents failed repeatedly, among other things, to plan, perform, and document audit work in accordance with PCAOB standards, and failed to exercise due professional care and to exercise professional skepticism in connection with the Audits. Respondents also violated Section 10A(a) of the Exchange Act by failing to include procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance of detecting illegal acts that would have a direct and material effect on the determination of financial statement amounts in connection with the audit of one issuer client.

4. Respondents also repeatedly violated Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, and PCAOB rules and standards that require a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons be independent of the firm's audit client throughout the audit and professional engagement period. Respondents were not independent with respect to two issuer clients because Freeman served as lead audit partner on the audits of those issuers for more than five consecutive years.[6/]

[5/] Specifically, the Audits consist of the Firm's audits of: (a) the 2010 and 2011 financial statements of FullNet Communications, Inc. ("FullNet"); (b) the 2010 and 2011 financial statements of Revolutions Medical Corporation. ("Revolutions"); and (c) the 2011 financial statements of NightCulture, Inc. (f/k/a XXX Acquisitions, Inc.) ("NightCulture").

[6/] See Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act; Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, Auditor Independence, 17 C.F.R. 240.10A-2; PCAOB Rule 3520, Auditor Independence; and AU §§ 220, Independence.

5. Moreover, the Firm failed to comply with Auditing Standard No. 7, Engagement Quality Review ("AS No. 7"), in the course of the Audits. The Firm and Freeman failed to have an engagement quality review performed on any of the Audits, even though an engagement quality review was required to be performed.[7/]

6. By issuing audit reports stating that the 2011 audits of FullNet, Revolutions, and NightCulture had been performed in accordance with PCAOB standards when it knew, or was reckless in not knowing, that the statement was false, the Firm violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act, and Rule 10b-5 thereunder. Freeman took or omitted to take actions that he knew or was reckless in not knowing, would directly and substantially contribute to the Firm's violations of Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act, and Rule 10b-5 thereunder.

7. Finally, the Firm failed to comply with PCAOB quality control standards in connection with the Audits, and Freeman took or omitted to take, actions during the Audits that he knew, or was reckless in not knowing, would directly and substantially contribute to the Firm's violation of PCAOB quality control standards, in contravention of PCAOB Rule 3502, Responsibility Not to Knowingly or Recklessly Contribute to Violations.

C. Respondents' Violations of PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards, Independence Standards, and the Exchange Act

Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Standards in Connection with the Audits

8. In connection with the preparation or issuance of any audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[8/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[9/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor

exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[10/] PCAOB standards also require that audit work be adequately planned[11/] and require auditors to perform procedures to identify, assess, and respond to risks of material misstatement due to fraud.[12/]

9. Additionally, PCAOB audit documentation standards provide that the documentation for an audit must contain sufficient information to enable an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with the engagement: (a) to understand the nature, timing, extent, and results of the procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached, and (b) to determine who performed the work and the date such work was completed as well as the person who reviewed the work and the date of such review.[13/] Moreover, AS No. 3 requires an auditor to prepare an engagement completion document that identifies all "significant findings or issues," such as matters that could result in a modification of the audit report and audit adjustments.[14/]

10. As detailed below, Respondents failed to comply with the aforementioned rules and standards, among others, in connection with the Audits.

Audits of FullNet's 2010-2011 Financial Statements

11. FullNet is, and at all relevant times was, an Oklahoma corporation headquartered in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. FullNet's public filings disclose that it is an integrated communications provider for individuals, businesses, organizations, educational institutions, and government agencies. all relevant times, FullNet was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

12. The Firm was engaged as FullNet's external auditor in October 2010 for the audit of FullNet's financial statements for the year ending December 31, 2010. The Firm issued an audit report dated March 31, 2011, expressing an unqualified opinion, with an explanatory going concern paragraph, on FullNet's 2010 financial statements that accompanied FullNet's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on the same day. For the subsequent fiscal year, the Firm issued an audit report dated March 29, 2012, expressing an unqualified opinion, with an explanatory going concern paragraph, on FullNet's 2011 financial statements filed with the Commission on March 29, 2012, in FullNet's Form 10-K. Freeman served as the lead audit partner on the FullNet engagements and authorized the issuance of all relevant audit reports.

13. During the 2010 audit, Freeman and the Firm failed to comply with the applicable professional standards. First, Freeman and the Firm failed to adequately plan the audit. Other than using a standardized audit program and checklists, Respondents failed to take any steps to obtain a level of knowledge of the company's business to enable them to appropriately plan and perform the audit.[15/] Respondents also failed to adequately assess the risk of material misstatement on numerous accounts and balances, including accounts receivable, sales, inventory and cost of sales.[16/] Freeman and the Firm additionally failed to gain an adequate understanding of and document the company's internal controls.[17/] Respondents further failed to appropriately consider the risk of fraud and failed to test journal entries.[18/]

14. In performing the 2010 audit, Freeman and the Firm failed to exercise due care and obtain sufficient competent evidence with respect to certain critical aspects of the audit including: revenue, forgiveness of debt, and income.[19/] For example, Freeman and the Firm failed to perform adequate procedures relating to FullNet's reported revenue of $1,687,945 for the year ended December 31, 2010. Freeman and the Firm's audit procedures were primarily limited to obtaining a series of schedules detailing revenue by product, by month and then performing a high level analytical review by comparing monthly revenues from 2009 to 2010. These procedures did not constitute substantive analytical procedures because Respondents failed to develop sufficiently precise expectations and failed to investigate or evaluate significant unexpected differences identified in the audit.[20/] Freeman and the Firm also failed to perform any tests of the underlying detail and failed to test the accuracy of any of the data reflected in the revenue schedules. Having not performed any tests of controls, Respondents had no basis to rely on the data in those schedules. In addition, Freeman and the Firm failed to reconcile the schedules to revenue reported in the financial statements.

15. In 2010, FullNet's financial statements reported other income of approximately $1.2 million. According to the public filings, this other income was the result of FullNet determining that certain outstanding liabilities were no longer collectible and should be written off. Freeman and Firm failed to perform sufficient procedures to corroborate management's representations regarding the treatment of the debt.

16. During the 2011 audit, Freeman and the Firm failed to adequately plan and perform the audit in accordance with PCAOB audit standards. Respondents inappropriately assessed the inherent and control risks for many accounts, including accounts receivables and sales, resulting in insufficient audit testing. Respondents also failed to properly test journal entries.

17. As in 2010, Freeman and the Firm repeatedly relied on analytical review procedures as substantive audit tests during the 2011 audit, when such procedures did not constitute substantive analytical procedures.[21/] Respondents again failed to test the accuracy of data reflected in the revenue schedules and, having not performed any tests of controls, had no basis to rely on the data in those schedules.

Audits of Revolutions' 2010-2011 Financial Statements registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, Revolutions was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

19. The Firm issued an audit report dated March 30, 2011, expressing an unqualified opinion on Revolutions' financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2010, that accompanied Revolutions' Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 31, 2011.[22/] On September 16, 2011, Revolutions' filed a Form 10-K/A with the Commission that amended and restated Revolutions' financial statements and related disclosures for the period ended December 31, 2010.[23/] The Firm issued a revised audit opinion, dated September 1, 2011, in connection with Revolutions' Form 10-K/A. For the subsequent year, the Firm issued an audit report dated March 30 2012, expressing an unqualified opinion, with an explanatory going concern paragraph, on Revolutions' 2011 financial statements in Revolutions' Form 10-K filed with the Commission on the same day.[24/] Freeman served as the lead audit partner on the Revolutions engagements and authorized the issuance of all relevant audit reports.

20. During the 2010 audit, Freeman and the Firm failed to adequately plan the audit. Other than using a standardized audit program and checklists, Respondents failed to take any steps to obtain a level of knowledge of the company's business to enable them to appropriately plan and perform the audit.[25/]

[22/] The audit report included an explanatory going concern paragraph, and included an incorrect issuance date of March 30, 2010. This date was subsequently corrected to March 30, 2011, as part of Revolutions' 2010 Form 10-K/A, filed September 16, 2011.

[23/] The restatement included, among other errors, the acknowledgment that Revolutions had failed to bifurcate a convertible debt agreement and fair value the associated embedded derivative as an embedded derivative liability in its 2010 financial statements.

[24/] On May 2, 2013, Revolutions filed a Form 10-K for the year ended December 31, 2012, with the Commission that restated its 2011 financial statements to correct, among other errors, the $311,000 gain from litigation and the corresponding amount reflected as due from litigation based on uncertain collectability of the gain. The Firm issued an unqualified audit opinion with an explanatory going concern paragraph on both Revolutions' 2012 and restated 2011 financial statements.

21. Respondents also failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support its opinion on Revolution's 2010 financial statements. Revolutions reported fixed assets of $812,478 for the year ended December 31, 2010, which accounted for 65% of reported assets. Freeman and the Firm failed to test the 2010 additions to the fixed assets against any supporting documents and corroborate that it was appropriate to capitalize such costs. Respondents also failed to assess the reasonableness of the company's depreciation method and calculation. They further failed to test journal entries.

22. Freeman and the Firm also failed to obtain sufficient evidence to test other current assets, which accounted for 24% of reported assets. Freeman and the Firm understood this reported asset to be substantially comprised of prepaid consulting fees, but they failed to obtain evidence corroborating that such costs had a future benefit and were appropriately reported as an asset. Freeman and the Firm also failed to properly test the reported notes payable. For expenses reported during 2010, Freeman and the Firm performed only high level analytical review procedures that were not substantive in nature.

23. In conducting the 2011 audit, Respondents failed to exercise due care and professional skepticism and failed to obtain sufficient appropriate audit evidence in performing the substantive audit work.[26/] For example, Revolutions reported property and equipment of $1,185,664 as of December 31, 2011. Despite being the largest reported asset as of December 31, 2011, Freeman and the Firm again failed to test the new additions to property and equipment against supporting documentation and failed to assess whether it was appropriate to capitalize such costs. For prepaid expenses, which accounted for 16% of reported assets, Freeman and the Firm failed to test such costs against supporting documentation and assess whether such costs had a future benefit and qualified as an asset.

24. Apart from inquiries with management, Freeman and the Firm failed to obtain any audit evidence to support the existence and valuation of a reported receivable and gain related to settlement of litigation.[27/] Freeman and the Firm also relied solely on management inquiries and failed to obtain audit evidence to corroborate the value of embedded derivatives relating to convertible debt.[28/] For example,

Freeman and the Firm failed to evaluate the qualifications of a specialist used by the company to value the derivatives, and obtain an understanding of the methods and assumptions used by the specialist.[29/] Finally, for most other income and expenses recognized in 2011, Freeman and the Firm performed only high level analytical procedures that did not constitute substantive analytical procedures.[30/]

Audit of NightCulture's 2011 Financial Statements

25. NightCulture is, and at all relevant times was, a Nevada corporation headquartered in Houston, Texas. According to its public filings, NightCulture promotes, produces, and sells merchandise at live concerts. Its common stock is registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and traded on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, NightCulture was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

26. The Firm issued an audit report dated March 29, 2012, expressing an unqualified opinion with an explanatory going concern paragraph, on NightCulture's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2011, that accompanied NightCulture's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 30, 2012. Freeman served as the lead audit partner on the NightCulture engagement and authorized the issuance of the March 29, 2012 audit report.

27. During the 2011 audit, Freeman and the Firm failed to adequately plan the audit in accordance with PCAOB standards by failing to appropriately assess the inherent and control risks for significant audit areas, such as notes payable and long-term debt.[31/]

28. In 2011, prior to its name change, NightCulture participated in a reverse merger with NightCulture, Inc., a private entity. The acquisition was accounted for as a reverse merger. Consequently, the assets, liabilities and operations of the acquired company were reflected in the financial statements of NightCulture's 2011 Form 10-K as NightCulture's 2010 financial statements. Freeman and the Firm failed to perform any procedures to audit the acquired company's assets and liabilities as of December 31, 2010, and results of its operations for 2010. As such, Freeman and the Firm had no basis to opine on the 2010 financial statements of NightCulture in the March 29, 2012 audit report.

29. With respect to NightCulture's 2011 financial statements, Freeman and the Firm failed to test NightCulture's journal entries. Respondents also failed to obtain sufficient appropriate audit evidence in critical aspects of the audit.[32/] For example, NightCulture reportedly generated revenue primarily from the promotion and production of live music events, and recognized revenue after the performance occurred and settlement of the event took place. Rather than perform substantive audit procedures, Freeman and the Firm performed only high level analytical reviews of reported monthly revenue and expenses that did not constitute substantive analytical procedures.[33/] Respondents failed to develop sufficiently precise expectations and failed to investigate or evaluate significant unexpected differences identified in the audit. They also failed to test the accuracy of data in the analytics and, having not performed any tests of controls, had no basis to rely on the data.

30. Freeman and the Firm also failed to obtain sufficient appropriate audit evidence to support the $55,500 reported gain on the forgiveness of debt, which was material to NightCulture's 2011 financial statements.[34/] Further, NightCulture disclosed that it had entered into a financing arrangement in March 2011 that resulted in the issuance of convertible debentures. Freeman and the Firm relied solely on management representations and failed to obtain any sufficient appropriate audit evidence regarding the fair valuation of the embedded derivatives related to the convertible debentures.

31. Finally, NightCulture's 2011 Form 10-K disclosed $131,000 of notes receivable related to a loan from NightCulture to Stereo Live, Inc., whose Chief Executive Officer and 50 percent owner, Mike Long, was also the CEO of NightCulture. Freeman was aware of this connection and, as part of the 2011 audit, instructed Mike Long to send himself a confirmation of this receivable. Freeman failed to consider whether or not this loan from NightCulture to a corporation owned and controlled by the CEO of NightCulture might constitute an illegal act. As a result, Respondents violated Section 10A(a) of the Exchange Act by failing to include in the audit, procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance of detecting illegal acts that would have a direct and material effect on the determination of financial statement amounts.[35/]

Audit Documentation Failure

32. In addition to the audit deficiencies identified above, Freeman and the Firm also failed to comply with AS No. 3 in connection with the Audits. The audit documentation prepared by Freeman for the Audits consisted primarily of incomplete audit program checklists, and did not contain sufficient information to demonstrate the nature, timing, extent, and results of the procedures performed, evidence obtained, conclusions reached, and the dates such work was completed and reviewed.[36/]

33. Freeman also failed to complete an engagement completion document that identified the significant findings or issues, such as matters that could result in a modification of the audit report and audit adjustments in connection with the Audits.[37/]

34. Further, Freeman failed to comply with AS No. 3 in connection with the 2010 audits of FullNet and Revolutions by adding and modifying audit documentation after the audit documentation completion date, without recording the date that information was added, or the reason for adding it.[38/] In both instances, Freeman added documents to the audit documentation months after the 45-day audit completion date had passed.

Audits of NightCulture's Financial Statements

41. The Firm was engaged as NightCulture's external auditor in November 2004. The Firm issued audit reports that were included in NightCulture's financial statements filed with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on NightCulture's year ended financial statements in five consecutive fiscal years between 2004 and 2008.[43/] Freeman served as the lead audit partner on the NightCulture engagements and authorized the issuance of all audit reports during this five year period.

42. After serving as lead audit partner for the aforementioned five year period, Freeman continued to serve as lead audit partner on the audits of NightCulture's financial statements for the fiscal years ended December 31, 2009 through December 31, 2011, in violation of Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, PCAOB Rule 3520 and AU § 220.

Audits of Revolutions Financial Statements

43. The Firm issued audit reports on financial statements included in Revolutions' filings with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on Revolution's financial statements in consecutive fiscal years between 2003 and 2007.[44/] Freeman served as the lead audit partner on the Firm's engagement during the audit of Revolutions' 2003 financial statements through the audit of Revolutions' 2007 financial statements.

Respondents Failed to Comply with Engagement Quality Review Requirements

45. PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 7, Engagement Quality Review, provides that an engagement quality review and concurring approval of issuance are required for all audits and interim reviews for fiscal years beginning on or after December 15, 2009.[45/] Pursuant to AS No. 7, a firm may grant permission to a client to use the engagement report only after the engagement quality reviewer provides concurring approval of issuance.[46/]

46. AS No. 7 required that the Firm have an engagement quality review performed on the fiscal year 2010 and 2011 audits of FullNet, Revolutions, and NightCulture. In October 2010, Freeman contacted a former audit partner of the Firm about serving as an engagement quality reviewer. That partner initially agreed, but then allowed his certified public accountant license to lapse and declined to serve in the role of an engagement quality reviewer. Other efforts by Freeman and the Firm to identify an engagement quality reviewer were unsuccessful and no engagement quality review was performed for the Audits. As a result, for the 2010 and 2011 audits of FullNet, Revolutions, and NightCulture, the Firm violated AS No. 7.

47. Freeman knew, or was reckless in not knowing, that he was directly and substantially contributing to the Firm's violations of AS No. 7 when he improperly permitted the issuance of the audit opinions by the Firm without an engagement quality review and concurring approval of issuance.[47/]

Respondents Received Notice from PCAOB Inspections of Independence and Engagement Quality Review Problems Prior to Issuing 2011 Audit Reports

48. In October 2011, the Firm was inspected by the PCAOB's Division of Registration and Inspections. As part of that process, the PCAOB inspection staff reviewed the Firm's audits of the 2010 financial statements of FullNet and Revolutions, and reviewed the Firm's independence with respect to NightCulture. The PCAOB inspection staff brought to the Firm's attention apparent failures by the Firm to both comply with independence requirements related to lead partner rotation for Revolutions

49. Despite acknowledging the PCAOB inspection staff's findings, Freeman continued to serve as the lead audit partner with final responsibility for the Firm's audits of the 2011 financial statements of both Revolutions and NightCulture, and Respondents failed to obtain an engagement quality review and concurring approval of issuance for the 2011 audits of FullNet, Revolutions, or NightCulture. Further, Respondents prepared and included memoranda in the audit documentation for the 2011 audits of NightCulture and Revolutions documenting the independence problems and, in the case of NightCulture, acknowledging that the audit was completed without the required engagement quality review. On March 29, 2012, Freeman authorized the issuance of the Firm's audit reports that were included in the Form 10-Ks that FullNet and NightCulture filed with the Commission. On March 30, 2012, Freeman authorized the issuance of the Firm's audit report that was included in the Form 10-K that Revolutions filed with the Commission. For each of these audit reports, Respondents asserted that the audit had been conducted in accordance with the auditing standards of the PCAOB.

56. When the Firm filed its Application for Registration with the PCAOB in 2003, it submitted a set of quality control policies covering, among other things, personnel management, engagement performance, and monitoring. Although the Firm underwent ownership changes subsequent to the initial Application for Registration, the Firm did not modify or update its quality control policies or procedures to reflect the new structure of the Firm, or to address the requirements of new PCAOB standards, such as AS No. 7.

57. Moreover, the Firm did not follow or monitor the policies in place during the Audits. No engagement quality review and concurring approval of issuance occurred for any of the Audits, despite the Firm's policy that "[o]n SEC reporting engagements, a second review of the report, financial statement and selected work papers by the Audit Manager or Shareholder having no other significant responsibilities on the engagement is required."

58. Further, the Firm's system of quality control also failed to provide reasonable assurance that engagement personnel complied with PCAOB audit documentation requirements, as set forth in AS No. 3. As noted above, as a result, the Firm's Audits violated AS No. 3 in multiple respects.

59. Overall, the Firm's monitoring procedures, taken as a whole, did not enable the Firm to obtain reasonable assurance that its system of quality control was effective.[60/] For example, the Firm did not take appropriate steps to monitor whether its associated persons were, in fact, complying with Firm policies engagement quality review or audit documentation.

60. As a consequence of these violations, the Firm failed to comply with PCAOB quality control standards in connection with the Audits. Freeman, as the Firm's sole audit partner, took, or omitted to take, actions that he knew, or was reckless in not knowing, would directly and substantially contribute to the Firm's violation of PCAOB quality control standards, in contravention of PCAOB Rule 3502.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in the Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Hood & Associates CPAs, P.C. and Rick C. Freeman, CPA are hereby censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Rick C. Freeman, CPA is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i);

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Harris F Rattray CPA, PL, and Harris F. Rattray, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-009 November 21, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Harris F Rattray CPA, PL (the "Firm"), and Harris F. Rattray, CPA ("Rattray"), revoking the registration of the Firm, and barring Rattray from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the Firm and Rattray (collectively, "Respondents") on the basis of its findings that Respondents violated Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and Rule 10b-5 thereunder, Section 10A(a) of the Exchange Act, and PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with (a) audits of the financial statements of four issuer clients and (b) audits of the internal control over financial reporting ("ICFR") of one of those issuer clients.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against the Firm and Rattray.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement (collectively, "Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings,

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

which are admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[1/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Harris F Rattray CPA, PL, is a public accounting firm located in Miramar, Florida.[3/] The Firm has been registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules since 2006.

2. Harris F. Rattray, CPA, 59, of Miramar, Florida, is a certified public accountant licensed by the State of Florida (license no. AC36976). He is the sole owner and associated person of the Firm, had final responsibility for all of the audits discussed herein, and authorized the issuance of all audit reports discussed herein. Rattray is, and at all relevant times was, an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

[3/] The Firm originally registered and issued the audit reports discussed herein under the name of "Harris F. Rattray CPA." In its 2011 and 2012 Forms 2 filed with the Board, the Firm identified itself as "Rattray & Associates CPA, LLC."

ORDER

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' numerous and repeated violations of the Exchange Act and PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the issuance of audit reports for four issuers: Patient Portal Technologies, Inc. ("Patient Portal"); AvWorks Aviation Corp. ("AvWorks"); Caribbean Pacific Marketing, Inc. ("CPM"); and Urban Ag. Corp ("Urban Ag."). As detailed below, Respondents issued reports containing unqualified audit opinions concerning the financial statements of CPM and Urban Ag. and representing that the audits had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, under circumstances in which Respondents knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that these representations were false. Respondents also issued reports containing unqualified audit opinions concerning Patient Portal's ICFR and representing that the audits had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, under circumstances in which Respondents knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that these representations were false. Respondents' conduct with regard to these reports violated Exchange Act Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 thereunder.

4. Furthermore, during the audits of Patient Portal's financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2008 and 2009, the audits of AvWorks's financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2010 and 2011, and the audit of Urban Ag.'s financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2011, Respondents violated PCAOB auditing standards by failing, among other things, to plan and sufficiently perform audit work on critical aspects of the audits. Additionally, during their audit of AvWorks's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2011, Respondents violated Exchange Act Section 10A(a) by failing to include procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance of detecting illegal acts that would have a direct and material effect on the determination of financial statement amounts.

C. Background

5. At the time Respondents began to perform audits of the financial statements and ICFR of issuer clients in early 2008, Rattray had never been involved in an audit conducted in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards. He attended college, was certified as a Chartered Accountant, and was trained as an auditor in Kingston, Jamaica. From 1973 until 1983, Rattray worked at the Jamaican affiliate of a global accounting network, rising to the level of manager, and audited, under British auditing standards, the financial statements of companies that used British accounting standards. From 1985 to 1995, Rattray was chief financial officer of a privately held company in Kingston, Jamaica. In addition, from 1983 until 2003, he managed a business college in Kingston, Jamaica, that provided accounting training, also with reference to British accounting standards.

ORDER

6. Rattray took courses in bookkeeping and obtained a master's degree in accounting in the United States in 2005. Rattray became licensed as a certified public accountant in the State of Florida in June 2004. From 2004 to 2007, Rattray worked on the accounting staff of a Board of County Commissioners in Florida.

7. At the time he began performing public audits in 2008, Rattray had not performed audits for twenty-five years. Rattray had no work experience in the United States relating to U.S. GAAP or auditing under PCAOB auditing standards. Yet prior to issuing unqualified audit opinions for his audit clients as discussed in this Order, Rattray did not educate himself about current PCAOB auditing standards.

D. Respondents' Violations of the Exchange Act and PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

8. Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder prohibit a person, in connection with the purchase or sale of a security, from making an untrue statement of a material fact or from omitting to state a material fact necessary to make statements made, in light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading.[4/] To violate Section 10(b) or Rule 10b-5, a respondent must act with scienter,[5/] which the Supreme Court has defined as "a mental state embracing intent to deceive, manipulate, or defraud."[6/] Scienter encompasses knowing or intentional conduct, or recklessness.[7/] An auditor violates Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder by issuing an audit report stating that the audit has been performed in accordance with PCAOB standards when he or she knows, or is reckless in not knowing, that the statement is false.[8/]

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

9. Section 10A(a) of the Exchange Act requires, among other things, that every audit of an issuer must include, among other things, "procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance of detecting illegal acts that would have a direct and material effect on the determination of financial statement amounts."[9/]

10. In connection with the preparation or issuance of any audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards.[10/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[11/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care.[12/] For audits of fiscal years beginning before December 15, 2010, those standards required that the auditor obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[13/] For audits of fiscal years beginning on or after December 15, 2010, those standards require that the auditor plan and perform audit procedures to obtain sufficient appropriate audit evidence to provide a reasonable basis for his opinion.[14/] Among the elements of due professional care is professional skepticism, "an attitude that includes a questioning mind and a critical assessment of audit evidence."[15/] An auditor acting with professional skepticism "should not be satisfied with less than persuasive evidence because of a belief that management is honest."[16/]

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

11. For audits of financial statements for years beginning on or after December 15, 2009, PCAOB standards require that auditors obtain an engagement quality review for each audit and interim review engagement conducted pursuant to the standards of the Board.[17/]

12. As detailed below, Respondents failed to comply with the aforementioned laws, rules, and standards, among others, in connection with certain of their audits of Patient Portal, AvWorks, CPM, and Urban Ag.

Integrated Audits of Patient Portal's Financial Statements and ICFR

13. Patient Portal was, at all relevant times, a Delaware corporation with its principal executive offices in Baldwinsville, New York. According to its public filings, Patient Portal delivered technology services to healthcare institutions through its Patient Portal Connect, Inc. ("PPC"), and TB&A Hospital Television, Inc. ("TB&A"), operating subsidiaries. At all relevant times, Patient Portal's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was traded on the OTC Bulletin Board. Patient Portal was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). On October 12, 2010, Patient Portal submitted a Form 15 to the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") to terminate its registration.

2008 Audit of Patient Portal

14. In an audit report dated April 10, 2009, Respondents expressed an unqualified opinion on Patient Portal's 2008 financial statements that was included in Patient Portal's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on April 14, 2009. In the report, Respondents stated that they had audited Patient Portal's financial statements in accordance with PCAOB standards and that Patient Portal's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position as of December 31, 2008 and its results of operations for the year ended December 31, 2008. The report also stated that Respondents had audited Patient Portal's ICFR in accordance with PCAOB standards, and expressed an unqualified opinion concerning the effectiveness of the company's ICFR as of December 31, 2008. Respondents' unqualified opinion concerning Patient Portal's ICFR was also provided in a separate report contained in the same Form 10-K, which stated that the ICFR audit had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

[17/] See Auditing Standard No. 7, Engagement Quality Review ("AS 7").

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

15. At the time of Respondents' audit of Patient Portal for the year ended December 31, 2008, Rattray was not aware of PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 5, An Audit of Internal Control Over Financial Reporting That Is Integrated with An Audit of Financial Statements ("AS 5"). Respondents took no steps to learn what procedures were required to perform an ICFR audit in accordance with PCAOB standards, and Respondents performed no ICFR procedures in connection with the audit.

16. Respondents violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder by their issuance of an audit report that falsely stated that the audit of Patient Portal's ICFR as of December 31, 2008 had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, when Respondents knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that they had failed to perform any ICFR audit procedures in connection with the issuance of their ICFR opinion.

17. Respondents also violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in conducting their audit of Patient Portal's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008. Among other things, Respondents failed to plan the audit by failing to: develop an overall strategy for the expected conduct and scope of the audit; determine the nature, extent, and timing of the work to be performed; and prepare a written audit program setting forth the audit procedures they believed were necessary to accomplish the objectives of the audit.[18/]

18. Respondents failed to exercise due care and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning significant balances and transactions in Patient Portal's financial statements.[19/] For example, Patient Portal's consolidated financial statements reflected the operations of its two subsidiaries, PPC and TB&A. Respondents' audit work papers indicated that PPC represented 58% of the assets and 73% of the liabilities of the consolidated company and had incurred a loss equal to 160% of the consolidated company's net loss for the year. Respondents performed no audit procedures related to PPC's financial statements.

19. In addition, Respondents understood that TB&A's revenue represented approximately 75% of Patient Portal's consolidated revenue, and its cost of sales represented approximately 78% of the company's consolidated cost of sales. Respondents failed to perform any audit procedures to test the existence or valuation of TB&A's revenues. Respondents also failed to test the cost of sales related to those revenues.

2009 Audit of Patient Portal

20. On March 15, 2010, Respondents expressed an unqualified opinion on Patient Portal's 2009 financial statements in an audit report that was included in Patient Portal's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 29, 2010. The report stated that Respondents had audited Patient Portal's financial statements in accordance with PCAOB standards and that Patient Portal's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position as of December 31, 2009 and its results of operations for the year ended December 31, 2009. The report also stated that Respondents had audited Patient Portal's ICFR in accordance with PCAOB standards, and expressed an unqualified opinion concerning the effectiveness of the company's ICFR as of December 31, 2009. Respondents' unqualified opinion concerning Patient Portal's ICFR was also provided in a separate report contained in the same Form 10-K, which stated that the ICFR audit had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

21. At the time of Respondents' December 31, 2009 audit of Patient Portal, Rattray was still not aware of AS 5. Respondents again took no steps to learn what procedures were required to perform an ICFR audit in accordance with PCAOB standards, and again failed to perform any required ICFR procedures in connection with the audit.

22. Respondents violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder by their issuance of an audit report that falsely stated that the audits of Patient Portal's ICFR as of December 31, 2009 had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, when Respondents knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that they had performed no ICFR audit procedures in connection with the issuance of their audit report containing an ICFR opinion.

23. Respondents also violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in performing their audit of Patient Portal's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2009. Respondents again failed to plan the audit, including by failing to: develop an overall strategy for the expected conduct and scope of the audit; determine the nature, extent, and timing of the work to be performed; and prepare a written audit program setting forth the audit procedures they believed were necessary to accomplish the objectives of the audit.[20/] [20/] See AU § 311.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

24. Respondents failed to exercise due care and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning significant balances and transactions in Patient Portal's financial statements.[21/] For the year ended December 31, 2009, Patient Portal reported approximately $16 million in revenue and $9 million in cost of sales. Other than relying on management's representations regarding revenue and cost of sales, Respondents failed to perform any audit procedures to test the existence or valuation of Patient Portal's revenue or related cost of sales.[22/]

25. In its 2009 financial statements, Patient Portal reported net accounts receivable of approximately $1.7 million, representing over 11% of Patient Portal's assets as of December 31, 2009. Respondents failed to perform any audit procedures to test the existence or valuation of the accounts receivable balance, including the reasonableness of the company's estimate of the allowance for doubtful accounts.

Audits of AvWorks's Financial Statements

26. AvWorks was, at all relevant times, a Nevada corporation with its principal executive offices in Sunrise, Florida. AvWorks's public filings disclosed that it supplied replacement airplane parts and supply-chain services to airlines and maintenance organizations. AvWorks's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was traded on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, AvWorks was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

27. In November 2011, AvWorks engaged the Firm as its auditor for its 2010 and 2011 financial statements. Respondents expressed an unqualified opinion on AvWorks's December 31, 2011 and 2010 financial statements in an audit report dated April 5, 2012, that was included in AvWorks's Form 10-K for the period ended December 31, 2011 filed with the Commission on April 9, 2012. The report stated that Respondents had audited AvWorks's financial statements in accordance with PCAOB standards and that those financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position as of December 31, 2011 and 2010, and its results of operations for the years ended December 31, 2011 and 2010.

28. For both the December 31, 2010 and December 31, 2011 audits, Respondents violated PCAOB auditing standards in several respects. For the 2010 audit, Respondents failed to plan the audit, including by failing to: develop an overall strategy for the expected conduct and scope of the audit; determine the nature, extent, and timing of the work to be performed; and prepare a written audit program setting forth the audit procedures they believed were necessary to accomplish the objectives of the audit.[23/] For the 2011 audit, Respondents again failed to plan the audit by failing to: develop an overall strategy that set the scope, timing, and direction of the audit plan;[24/] and develop and document an audit plan that included a description of the nature, timing, and extent of the risk assessment procedures and tests of controls and substantive procedures.[25/]

29. In addition, Respondents failed to obtain an engagement quality review as required by PCAOB standards for the 2010 and the 2011 audits.[26/]

30. Respondents failed to exercise due care and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning significant balances and transactions relating to AvWorks's financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2010 and December 31, 2011.[27/] For the year ended December 31, 2010, AvWorks's financial statements reported a related party receivable, consisting of a loan to its chief executive officer ("CEO"), of $24,920, representing 58% of the assets on its balance sheet. As of December 31, 2011, AvWorks's financial statements reported that the related party loan to the CEO was $20,138, representing 21% of the company's assets. PCAOB auditing standards require auditors perform certain procedures concerning related party transactions.[28/] Despite the disclosure, Respondents failed in 2010 and 2011 to perform any procedures to obtain and evaluate sufficient competent evidential matter concerning the loan.[29/]

31. AvWorks acquired the loan in October 2011 as part of a business combination with a privately held company, in which the President of the privately held company became the President, CEO, Chief Financial Officer, and Director of AvWorks. During the December 31, 2011 audit, Rattray failed to consider whether the loan might constitute an illegal act. As a result, Respondents violated Section 10A(a) of the Exchange Act by failing to include in the audit procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance of detecting illegal acts that would have a direct and material effect on the determination of financial statement amounts.[30/]

32. Further, for the 2010 audit, Respondents performed no procedures to test the existence or valuation of the $551,426 that AvWorks reported as revenue, and performed no procedures to test the related reported cost of sales of $383,997.

33. Respondents also failed to perform any, or performed inadequate, procedures to test certain other significant amounts in AvWorks's balance sheet as of December 31, 2011, including accounts payable and accrued expenses, accounts receivable, and inventory. For example, AvWorks reported accounts payable and accrued expenses of $39,581, representing approximately 34% of AvWorks's total liabilities at year-end 2011. Nevertheless, Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test the existence, valuation, or completeness of the reported accounts payable and accrued expenses balance.

34. AvWorks reported accounts receivable of $19,030, representing approximately 20% of AvWorks's reported assets as of December 31, 2011. Seventy percent of the accounts receivable balance was owed by one customer on an invoice dated August 26, 2011 that was still outstanding when Respondents conducted their audit of AvWorks in April 2012. Respondents obtained a management representation regarding the collectability of the accounts receivable balance and questioned the reasonableness of management's accounting for the entire receivable balance. Respondents failed, however, to perform any procedures to test the existence or valuation of the accounts receivable balance.

35. AvWorks's reported inventory of $45,100 represented over 46% of its reported total assets as of December 31, 2011. Rattray identified inventory as significant to the audit. During the audit, Respondents visited the inventory location, but failed to document any procedures concerning the visit, including test counts. Respondents failed to obtain sufficient appropriate audit evidence to test the existence of the inventory and whether the values included in the financial statements for inventory were appropriate.[31/]

Audit of CPM's Financial Statements

36. CPM was, at all relevant times, a Florida corporation with its principal executive offices in Boca Raton, Florida. CPM's public filings disclosed that it was a development-stage company founded on January 20, 2012 to market sun and skin care products. CPM filed a registration statement on Form S-1 with the Commission on March 9, 2012. The registration statement included an audit report containing an unqualified audit opinion issued by Respondents dated March 8, 2012. From the filing of its Form S-1 on March 9, 2012 until December 3, 2012, CPM was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).[32/]

37. CPM retained Respondents as its independent auditor sometime in early 2012. Respondents' March 8, 2012 report stated that Respondents had audited CPM's financial statements in accordance with PCAOB standards and that those financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position as of February 24, 2012 and its results of operations for the period January 20 through February 24, 2012.

38. After CPM's Form S-1 filing on March 9, 2012, CPM management requested that Respondents issue an audit opinion for the period from the inception date of January 20, 2012 through and as of June 30, 2012 to be included in a Form S-1/A to be filed with the Commission. Respondents expressed an unqualified opinion on CPM's June 30, 2012 financial statements in an audit report dated August 6, 2012 that was included in CPM's Form S-1/As filed with the Commission on August 7 and August 24, 2012. The August 6 report stated that Respondents had audited CPM's financial statements in accordance with PCAOB standards and that those financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position as of June 30, 2012 and its results of operations for the period January 20 through June 30, 2012.

[31/] See AS 15 ¶ 4.

[32/] CPM's registration statement became effective with the Commission on August 29, 2012. On October 29, 2012, the Commission instituted administrative proceedings in which its Division of Enforcement alleged that CPM's registration statement was materially misleading because it failed to disclose the fact that a barred attorney named William Reilly was involved in CPM's offering. The Commission suspended the effectiveness of CPM's registration statement on December 3, 2012.

ORDER

39. Prior to issuing their August 6, 2012 audit opinion on CPM's June 30, 2012 financial statements, Respondents failed to perform any audit procedures on the company's financial statements. In issuing the opinion, Respondents relied on (1) the work they had performed prior to issuing the March 8, 2012 audit opinion on CPM's February 24, 2012 financial statements; and (2) a management representation that CPM's expenses had increased by a minimal amount since February 24, 2012.

40. Respondents' audit concerning CPM's February 24, 2012 financial statements had not, however, complied with PCAOB standards. Respondents knew or were reckless in not knowing that they had failed to exercise due care and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning significant balances and transactions in those financial statements.[33/] For example, CPM had reported cash of $5,134 as its only asset and accounts payable of $10,000 as its only liability as of February 24, 2012. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test the existence or valuation of the cash or the existence, valuation, or completeness of the accounts payable balance.

41. Respondents obtained a management representation prior to issuing their August 6, 2012 opinion that CPM had incurred only a minimal amount of expenses between February 24, 2012 and June 30, 2012. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test this representation.[34/] As a result, at the time the August 6, 2012 opinion was issued, Respondents were not aware that between February 24, 2012 and June 30, 2012, CPM's expenses had increased by over 29%, from a reported $34,866 to a reported $45,180. Additionally, Respondents again failed to perform any procedures to test the existence or valuation of CPM's only reported asset of cash, and failed to perform any procedures to test the existence, valuation, or completeness of the only reported liability, accounts payable of $15,200.

42. Respondents violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder by their issuance of an audit report, dated August 6, 2012, that falsely stated that an audit of CPM's financial statements for the period ended June 30, 2012 had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, when Respondents knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that they had not conducted an audit of CPM's June 30, 2012 financial statements prior to the issuance of their August 6, 2012 audit report.

Audits of Urban Ag.'s Financial Statements

43. Urban Ag. was, at all relevant times, a Delaware corporation with its principal executive offices in North Andover, Massachusetts. Urban Ag.'s public filings disclose that it provides outsourced services to companies in the construction and engineering industries. Urban Ag.'s common stock is registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is traded in the OTCQB market. At all relevant times, Urban Ag. was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

44. In November 2012, Urban Ag. engaged the Firm as its auditor for its 2011 financial statements. Respondents expressed an unqualified opinion on Urban Ag.'s 2011 financial statements in an audit report dated November 16, 2012 that was included in Urban Ag.'s Form 10-K filed with the Commission on November 23, 2012. The report stated that Respondents had audited Urban Ag.'s financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2011 in accordance with PCAOB standards and that those financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position as of December 31, 2011 and its results of operations for the year ended December 31, 2011. The report stated that the company's financial statements for all prior years, including the year ended December 31, 2010, had been audited by other auditors.

45. Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with their audit of Urban Ag.'s financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2011. For example, Respondents failed to plan the audit. Respondents failed to develop an overall strategy for the audit that set the scope, timing, and direction of the audit plan,[35/] or to develop and document an audit plan that included a description of the nature, timing, and extent of the risk assessment procedures and tests of controls and substantive procedures.[36/]

46. Respondents failed to exercise due care and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning significant balances and transactions in Urban Ag.'s December 31, 2011 financial statements.[37/] For example, Urban Ag. disclosed in its Form 10-K for the year ended December 31, 2011 that during that year it had engaged in a business combination. During their audit, Respondents performed no audit procedures to assess whether the company had properly accounted for the business combination or whether its historical financial statements properly reflected the transaction.

47. For the year ended December 31, 2011, Urban Ag. reported net accounts receivable of approximately $1.8 million, or 82% of Urban Ag.'s total assets. Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures regarding accounts receivable. To test receivables, Respondents selected certain items from a list of invoices for a nine day period in late December and agreed those items to the actual invoices. Other than this step, Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test the existence and valuation of accounts receivable, such as examining subsequent cash receipts, shipping documents, or other client documentation to provide audit evidence. Additionally, Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test the company's allowance for doubtful accounts.

48. Accounts payable represented approximately 39% of Urban Ag.'s liabilities as of December 31, 2011. Respondents failed, however, to conduct any procedures to test the existence, valuation, or completeness of the accounts payable balance.

49. Respondents also failed to obtain an engagement quality review for the 2011 audit.[38/]

50. On January 22, 2013, Urban Ag.'s management requested that Respondents perform an audit for the year ended December 31, 2010. On January 25, 2013, the company filed a Form 10-K/A that included a revised audit report, dated November 16, 2012, stating that Respondents had audited the company's financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2011 and 2010, and that the financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2009 and earlier had been audited by other auditors. The unqualified opinion stated that the audits of Urban Ag.'s financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2011 and 2010 had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards, and that the financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position as of December 31, 2011 and 2010 and its results of operations for the years ended December 31, 2011 and 2010.

51. For the year ended December 31, 2010, Urban Ag. reported total assets of approximately $1.9 million, revenues of $6.3 million and net income of $2,504. Respondents failed to perform any audit procedures concerning Urban Ag.'s December 31, 2010 financial statements before issuing and authorizing the use of their revised unqualified audit opinion concerning those financial statements.

ORDER

52. Respondents violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder by their issuance of an audit report, dated November 16, 2012 and issued on or about January 25, 2013, that falsely stated that they had conducted an audit of Urban Ag.'s financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2010 in accordance with PCAOB standards, when Respondents knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that they had performed no audit procedures.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Harris F Rattray CPA, PL, is hereby censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Harris F Rattray CPA, PL, is revoked;

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Harris F. Rattray, CPA, is hereby censured; and

D. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Harris F. Rattray, CPA, is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of David T. Svoboda, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-011 November 21, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (the "Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring David T. Svoboda, CPA ("Svoboda" or "Respondent"), and barring him from being an associated person of a registered accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that Svoboda: (a) violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the audits of three issuer clients and the improper creation, addition, and backdating of audit documentation prior to a Board inspection; (b) directly and substantially contributed to a registered public accounting firm's violation of PCAOB quality control standards; and (c) violated Section 10A(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and PCAOB rules and standards in connection with the audits of two issuer clients.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other

[1/] Svoboda may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[2/]

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[3/] that:

A. Respondent

1. David T. Svoboda, age 53, of Bohemia, New York, is, and was at all relevant times, a certified public accountant licensed in the State of New York (License No. 083271). At all relevant times, Svoboda was a non-equity partner at Acquavella, Chiarelli, Shuster, Berkower & Co., LLP ("ACSB" or the "Firm"),[4/] and was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). At all relevant times, Svoboda was one of only two ACSB partners performing audits of public companies and was the leader of the Firm's public company audit practice. He was the auditor with final responsibility for the audits of the financial statements for the issuers identified in paragraph 2 below. Svoboda's employment with the Firm ended on or about September 30, 2011.

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[3/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondent in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

ORDER

B. Summary

2. This matter concerns Svoboda's failure to comply with PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the audits of the 2009 financial statements of three issuer clients (collectively, "the Audits").[5/] In each of the Audits, Svoboda was the auditor with final responsibility and authorized issuance of the Firm's audit report. As detailed below, Svoboda failed to: (1) adequately supervise engagement personnel; (2) adequately plan and perform audit procedures related to the Audits; and (3) exercise due care and professional skepticism.

3. In addition, this matter concerns Svoboda's failure to comply with PCAOB Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, and Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS3"). In advance of the Board's inspection of the Firm in 2010, Svoboda, or those working at his direction, improperly created or altered audit documentation and added that documentation to the working papers in violation of Rule 4006. Further, in violation of AS3, the created or altered documentation did not indicate the date the documents were created or altered and added to the working papers, the name of the person who did so, or the reason for doing so.

4. During the relevant period, Svoboda was the partner in charge of the Firm's public company practice and was designated by the Firm as having responsibility for the quality of that practice. Despite those responsibilities, during the Audits, Svoboda took or omitted to take actions knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that his acts and/or omissions would directly and substantially contribute to ACSB's violation of PCAOB quality control standards, in contravention of PCAOB Rule 3502, Responsibility Not to Knowingly or Recklessly Contribute to Violations.

5. Lastly, this matter concerns Svoboda's failure to comply with Section 10A(g) of the Exchange Act and PCAOB rules and standards that require a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons to be independent of the firm's audit client throughout the audit and professional engagement period. Specifically, with respect to two of the Audits, Svoboda prepared the consolidation and financial statements for the issuers.

[5/] Specifically, the Audits consist of ACSB's audits of the 2009 financial statements of: (a) Universal Travel Group ("Universal Travel"); (b) Home System Group ("Home System"); and (c) Sinocom Pharmaceutical, Inc. ("Sinocom").

ORDER

D. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

6. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[6/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[7/] Among other things, PCAOB standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[8/]

7. PCAOB auditing standards require that the auditor with final responsibility for the audit adequately plan the audit and supervise any assistants.[9/] "Supervision involves directing the efforts of assistants who are involved in accomplishing the objectives of the audit and determining whether those objectives were accomplished."[10/]

8. As detailed below, Svoboda failed to comply with these auditing standards in connection with the Audits.

Audit of 2009 Financial Statements of Universal Travel Group

9. Universal Travel Group was, at all relevant times, a Nevada corporation with its principal office in Shenzhen, the People's Republic of China ("PRC"). Universal Travel's public filings disclosed that it was a travel services provider engaged in providing air ticketing, hotel booking and packaged tourism services throughout the PRC via the internet, customer representatives and kiosks. During the relevant period, Universal Travel's common stock was registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under the Exchange Act and was traded at various times on the OTC Bulletin Board, New York Stock Exchange ("NYSE") Amex, and NYSE.[11/] At all relevant times, Universal Travel was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

10. ACSB became the auditor for Universal Travel on June 30, 2009. The Firm audited Universal Travel's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2009 and issued an unqualified opinion dated February 22, 2010, which was included in Universal Travel's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 5, 2010.[12/] The audit report stated that, in ACSB's opinion, Universal Travel's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the issuer's financial position in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States ("U.S. GAAP"), and that ACSB's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

[11/] From January 1, 2009 through May 28, 2009 Universal Travel's common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was traded on the OTC Bulletin Board. On April 14, 2009, the issuer filed a registration statement to register its common stock under Section 12(b) of the Exchange Act in connection with its listing on the NYSE Amex Market. On May 28, 2009, Universal Travel's common stock began trading on the NYSE Amex and also continued to trade on the OTC Bulletin Board. On October 27, 2009 Universal Travel's common stock began trading on the New York Stock Exchange. On April 26, 2012 the issuer filed a Form 25, Notification of Removal from Listing and/or Registration under Section 12(b) of the Exchange Act, voluntarily withdrawing its common stock from listing and registration on the NYSE. On September 27, 2013, the Commission issued an order revoking the registration of Universal Travel's securities due to the issuer's failure to file periodic reports with the Commission since September 30, 2011.

[12/] Although the Firm's audit opinion on the 2009 financial statements was unqualified, the Firm expressed an adverse opinion on Universal Travel's internal control over financial reporting, noting the identification of two material weaknesses including: "Lack of technical accounting expertise among financial staff regarding US GAAP and the requirements of the PCAOB, and regarding preparation of financial statements." The Firm's combined report stated that because of the effect of those material weaknesses "Universal Travel Group did not maintain effective internal control over financial reporting as of December 31, 2009," but that "[o]ur opinion on the effectiveness of internal control over financial reporting does not affect our opinion on the consolidated financial statements." ORDER

11. The engagement team for ACSB's audit of Universal Travel's 2009 financial statements consisted of Svoboda, as the auditor with final responsibility, two assistants from the Firm, and assistants from a firm based in the PRC ("the China Firm").

12. Svoboda failed to comply with the applicable professional standards in connection with the 2009 Universal Travel audit. First, Svoboda failed to adequately plan the audit by failing to consider, or ensure his assistants considered, the nature, extent, and timing of work to be performed.[13/] The 2009 planning memorandum included in the Universal Travel working papers contained risk assessments and planned audit procedures that were not relevant to the issuer. The risk assessments and planned audit procedures included in the planning memorandum were copied from another company's audit and Svoboda and the engagement team failed to exercise due care to ensure that they were appropriate for the 2009 Universal Travel audit.[14/]

13. Audit field work occurred primarily at the issuer's headquarters in the PRC. Svoboda failed to adequately supervise the work of his assistants, including assistants from the China Firm. He failed to adequately direct the efforts of the assistants involved in accomplishing the objectives of the audit, including informing them of the objectives of the procedures that they were to perform.[15/]

14. The China Firm assistants performed a significant portion of the audit work. Svoboda failed to adequately review and supervise that work. As a result, he failed to determine whether the audit work was adequately performed and failed to evaluate whether the results of the audit work were consistent with the conclusions to be presented in the audit report.[16/]

15. During the Universal Travel audit, Svoboda failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support ACSB's opinion on Universal Travel's 2009 financial statements.[17/] Specifically, Svoboda failed to obtain, or ensure the engagement team obtained, sufficient audit evidence to test the existence and valuation of Universal Travel's reported accounts receivable. In its 2009 Form 10-K, Universal Travel reported net accounts receivable totaling $17.3 million, approximately 20% of its reported assets. During the 2009 audit, the China Firm assistants working for Svoboda sent out positive confirmations for receivables totaling $10.9 million or approximately 63% of the net accounts receivable balance. However, the engagement team did not receive responses for accounts totaling one-third of the amounts selected for confirmation and Svoboda failed to perform, or ensure the engagement team performed, alternative procedures with respect to those nonresponses.[18/]

16. In its 2009 Form 10-K, Universal Travel reported that it generated revenue from four lines of business, namely, air-ticketing, hotel reservations, packaged-tours, and air cargo agency services. Universal Travel's financial statements disclosed that the issuer recognized packaged-tour revenue at the time that the tour was completed and that total revenues from its packaged-tour operations represented approximately 69% of Universal Travel's reported revenue in 2009. Svoboda and the engagement team failed to perform sufficient procedures to determine whether Universal Travel recognized its revenue in accordance with its disclosed policy.[19/]

17. Universal Travel's 2009 financial statements reported goodwill totaling $9.9 million or 11.5% of its total reported assets at December 31, 2009. Svoboda failed to appropriately test, or ensure that the engagement team appropriately tested, Universal Travel's goodwill for impairment. The working papers contained an analysis prepared by the issuer that contained management's goodwill impairment analysis. Svoboda failed to perform, or ensure that the engagement team performed, sufficient procedures to test the assumptions and estimates used in management's impairment analysis.[20/] Further, Svoboda and the engagement team failed to perform any audit procedures to corroborate management's representations concerning its impairment analysis.[21/]

18. Svoboda failed to obtain, or ensure that the engagement team obtained, sufficient competent evidential matter relating to material adjustments recorded in the issuer's consolidation at year-end, including an entry for $5 million in cash, representing

Audit of 2009 Financial Statements of Home System Group

19. Home System Group was, at all relevant times, a Nevada corporation with its principal office in Zhongshan City, PRC. Home System's public filings disclose that it was primarily engaged in the production of a variety of household appliances, including stainless steel gas grills and ovens, ceiling and table fans and decorative lamps. Its common stock was registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and was traded on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets. At all times relevant to this Order, Home System was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

20. ACSB became the auditor for Home System on June 30, 2009. ACSB audited Home System's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2009 and issued an unqualified opinion dated March 18, 2010, which was included in Home System's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 29, 2010. The audit report stated that, in ACSB's opinion, Home System's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the issuer's financial position in conformity with U.S. GAAP and that ACSB's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

21. The engagement team for ACSB's audit of Home System's 2009 financial statements consisted of Svoboda, as the auditor with final responsibility, an assistant from the Firm, and assistants from the China Firm.

22. Svoboda failed to comply with the applicable professional standards in connection with the 2009 Home System audit. First, Svoboda failed to adequately plan the audit by failing to consider, or ensure his assistants considered, the nature, extent, and timing of work to be performed.[23/] The 2009 planning memorandum included in the Home System working papers contained risk assessments and planned audit procedures that were not relevant to the issuer. As a result, he failed to determine whether the audit work was adequately performed, and failed to evaluate whether the results of the audit work were consistent with the conclusions to be presented in the audit report.[26/]

25. During the Home System audit, Svoboda failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support ACSB's opinion on Home System's 2009 financial statements.[27/] The issuer's 2009 financial statements reported goodwill totaling $25 million or 28% of Home System's total reported assets at December 31, 2009, the issuer's largest asset. In the footnotes to the 2009 Home System financial statements, management stated that goodwill was not impaired. The Home System working papers contained a cash flow projection prepared by management that appeared to be an impairment analysis of the issuer's goodwill as of December 31, 2009. Svoboda failed to perform, or ensure the engagement team performed, sufficient audit procedures to assess the reasonableness of the cash flow projection, including the relevance, sufficiency, and reliability of the data supporting the projection and the assumptions management made in formulating the projection.[28/] As a result, Svoboda failed to obtain, or ensure the engagement team obtained, sufficient competent evidential matter concerning the valuation of goodwill.

On May 27, 2010, in anticipation of the upcoming visit by the PCAOB inspection team, Svoboda held a meeting with certain ACSB staff. At that meeting Svoboda directed ACSB staff to add missing documents to the working papers for the Universal Travel, Home Systems and Sinocom audits and to backdate certain documents to make it appear the documents were prepared and added to the working papers prior to the documentation completion date. Thereafter, Svoboda and staff working under his supervision created or altered documents and added them to the work papers. After subsequently learning that the Board's inspectors planned to inspect the Universal Travel and Home System audits, Svoboda and those working at his direction, provided the Board's inspectors with the misleading documents and information relating to those two audits. At no point in time did Svoboda inform or instruct others to inform the Board's inspectors that these modifications to the working papers were made shortly before, and in anticipation of, the Board's inspection. This conduct violated PCAOB Rule 4006.

40. Svoboda and the staff working under his direction failed to indicate the dates that the modifications and additions were made to the working papers, the name of the person making the modifications and additions, and the reasons for making these modifications and additions to the Universal Travel, Home System and Sinocom working papers after the documentation completion date. This conduct failed to comply with AS3.

PCAOB rules also prohibit an associated person of a registered public accounting firm from taking or omitting to take an action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that the act or omission would directly and substantially contribute to a violation of Board standards by that firm.[52/] As detailed below, ACSB failed to comply with PCAOB quality control standards in connection with the Audits, and Svoboda took, or omitted to take, actions that he knew, or was reckless in not knowing, would directly and substantially contribute to ACSB's violations.

43. During the relevant period, Svoboda was the partner in charge of the Firm's public company practice and was designated by the Firm as having responsibility for the quality of that practice. In his capacity as the partner in charge of quality control for the public company practice, Svoboda failed to implement quality control policies and procedures to ensure that engagement personnel had the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances.[53/] Svoboda failed to control which individuals from the China Firm were assigned to the Audits. Svoboda failed to adequately assess the China Firm assistants' competency in U.S. GAAP and knowledge of PCAOB rules and standards. Svoboda also failed to provide any training to the China Firm assistants in PCAOB standards prior to the Audits.

44. Svoboda also failed to implement policies and procedures to ensure that engagement personnel performed audit procedures necessary to comply with PCAOB standards.[54/] As detailed above, for each of the Audits, Svoboda failed to adequately supervise and review the work of his assistants. G. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Standards, and Section 10A of the Exchange Act

45. PCAOB rules and standards require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons be independent of the firm's audit client throughout the audit and professional engagement period.[55/] "[A] registered public accounting firm or associated person's independence obligation with respect to an audit client that is an issuer encompasses not only an obligation to satisfy the independence criteria set out in the rules and standards of the PCAOB, but also an obligation to satisfy all other independence criteria applicable to the engagement, including the independence criteria set out in the rules and regulations of the Commission under the federal securities laws."[56/]

46. Section 10A(g)(1) of the Exchange Act prohibits an accounting firm and any associated person from performing certain non-audit services including "bookkeeping or other services related to the accounting records or financial statements of the audit client."

47. Rule 2-01 (c)(4)(i) of Commission Regulation S-X provides that an accountant is not independent if, at any point during the audit and professional engagement period, the accountant prepares the audit client's financial statements that are filed with the Commission or that form the basis of financial statements filed with the Commission.

48. With respect to the 2009 Universal Travel and Sinocom audits, Svoboda, the auditor with final responsibility, prepared the consolidation and financial statements that formed the basis of these issuer's financial statements that were included in issuers' Forms 10-K filed with the Commission. As a result, Svoboda failed to comply with Section 10A(g) of the Exchange Act, PCAOB Rule 3520 and AU § 220.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Acquavella, Chiarelli, Shuster, Berkower & Co., LLP Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-010 November 21, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (the "Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Acquavella, Chiarelli, Shuster, Berkower & Co., LLP ("ACSB," the "Firm" or "Respondent"), revoking ACSB's registration, and imposing a civil penalty in the amount of $10,000 upon ACSB.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that ACSB (a) violated PCAOB rules, quality control standards and auditing standards in connection with the audits of three issuer clients; and (b) violated Section 10A(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and PCAOB rules and standards in connection with the audits of two issuer clients.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[2/]

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer and information obtained by the Board in this matter, the Board finds[3/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Acquavella, Chiarelli, Shuster, Berkower & Co., LLP was, at all relevant times, a public accounting firm with offices in Iselin, New Jersey, and New York, New York. The Firm was licensed by the New Jersey Office of Attorney General (License No. 20CB00456100) and by the State of New York (License No. 061381). The Firm became registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules on June 2, 2009. At all relevant times, ACSB was the external auditor for each of the issuers identified below.

B. Other Relevant Individual

2. David T. Svoboda ("Svoboda"), age 53, of Bohemia, New York, is a certified public accountant licensed in the State of New York (License No. 083271). At all relevant times, Svoboda was a non-equity partner and an associated person of ACSB. Svoboda authorized the issuance of ACSB's audit reports for each of the audits identified below.[4/] At all relevant times, Svoboda was one of only two ACSB partners

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[3/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondent in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

performing audits of public companies and was the leader of the Firm's public company audit practice. Svoboda's employment with the Firm ended on or about September 30, 2011.

C. Summary

3. This matter concerns ACSB's failure to comply with PCAOB rules, quality control standards and auditing standards in connection with the audits of three issuers. In addition, ACSB violated Section 10A(g) of the Exchange Act and PCAOB rules and standards that require a registered public accounting firm be independent of the firm's audit client throughout the audit and professional engagement period.

4. At all times relevant to this Order, ACSB failed to develop quality control policies and procedures sufficient to provide it with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel met applicable professional standards. ACSB also failed to develop quality control policies and procedures sufficient to ensure that the audit personnel possessed the degree of technical training and proficiency required to fulfill their engagement responsibilities.

5. ACSB's violations of quality control standards contributed to numerous violations of PCAOB auditing standards in connection with the audits of three issuers' financial statements (collectively, the "Audits").[5/] As detailed below, ACSB failed to: (1) adequately supervise engagement personnel; (2) adequately plan and perform audit procedures related to the Audits; and (3) exercise due care and professional skepticism.

D. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Quality Control Standards

6. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm comply with the Board's quality control standards.[6/] PCAOB quality control standards require that a registered public accounting firm "shall have a system of quality control for its accounting and auditing practice."[7/]

[5/] Specifically, the Audits consist of the Firm's audits of the 2009 financial statements of: (a) Universal Travel Group ("Universal Travel"); (b) Home System Group ("Home System"); and (c) Sinocom Pharmaceutical, Inc. ("Sinocom").

7. Policies and procedures should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that work "is assigned to personnel having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances."[8/] PCAOB quality control standards also state that policies and procedures "should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality."[9/] PCAOB quality control standards also provide that policies and procedures "should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that the policies and procedures established by the firm for each of the other elements of quality control . . . are suitably designed and are being effectively applied."[10/] As detailed below, ACSB failed to comply with PCAOB rules and quality control standards in connection with the Audits.

Personnel Management

8. Throughout the relevant time period, ACSB failed to put policies and procedures in place to provide the Firm with reasonable assurance that work was assigned to personnel having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances.[11/] Universal Travel and Home System had primary operations in the People's Republic of China ("PRC"). Sinocom had its primary operations in Hong Kong Special Administrative Region of the PRC ("Hong Kong"). ACSB entered into an agreement to work with a PRC-based accounting firm (the "China Firm") whereby the China Firm would perform a significant portion of the audit procedures for the Audits.

9. ACSB assigned Svoboda to serve as the auditor with final responsibility for the Audits. Svoboda, who does not speak, understand or read Chinese, relied on lower level accounting assistants ("assistants") with Chinese language skills, including those from ACSB and the China Firm, to identify audit issues, communicate with management and third-parties, and translate and analyze documents provided by the issuers. ACSB failed to control which individuals from the China Firm were assigned to the Audits. ACSB failed to adequately assess the China Firm assistants' competency in accounting principles generally accepted in the United States ("U.S. GAAP") and knowledge of PCAOB rules and standards. ACSB also failed to provide any training to the China Firm assistants in PCAOB standards prior to the Audits.

Engagement Performance

10. Throughout the relevant time period, ACSB failed to put policies and procedures in place to ensure that engagement personnel performed audit procedures necessary to comply with PCAOB standards.[12/] As a result, in certain instances described below, ACSB staff members failed to complete necessary audit work before the Firm released its audit reports for the Audits. For each of the Audits, ACSB staff members with limited public audit experience and China Firm personnel conducted virtually all of the Firm's audit procedures. Much of that work was never reviewed by Svoboda or any senior person at ACSB.[13/]

Monitoring

11. In its quality control policies, ACSB stated that: "Annually, the Quality Control Partner/Manager selects an individual or a team… to review the Firm's quality control system." However, ACSB failed to do so and, thus, did not perform such an internal inspection with regard to its issuer clients in calendar years 2009 and 2010. Accordingly, ACSB's monitoring procedures did not enable the Firm to obtain reasonable assurance that its system of quality control was effective.[14/]

E. Respondent Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards in Connection with the Audits

12. In connection with the preparation or issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[15/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[16/] Among other things, PCAOB standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[17/]

13. PCAOB auditing standards also require that an audit is adequately planned and that assistants are properly supervised.[18/] "Supervision involves directing the efforts of assistants who are involved in accomplishing the objectives of the audit and determining whether those objectives were accomplished."[19/]

14. As detailed below, ACSB failed to comply with these auditing standards in connection with the Audits.

Audit of 2009 Financial Statements of Universal Travel Group

15. Universal Travel Group was, at all relevant times, a Nevada corporation with its principal office in Shenzhen, PRC. Universal Travel's public filings disclosed that it was a travel services provider engaged in providing air ticketing, hotel booking and packaged tourism services throughout the PRC via the internet, customer representatives and kiosks. During the relevant period, Universal Travel's common stock was registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under the Exchange Act and was traded at various times on the OTC Bulletin Board, New York Stock Exchange ("NYSE") Amex, and NYSE.[20/] At all relevant times, Universal Travel was an "issuer" as defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

16. ACSB became the auditor for Universal Travel on June 30, 2009. The Firm audited Universal Travel's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2009, and issued an unqualified opinion dated February 22, 2010, which was included in Universal Travel's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 5, 2010.[21/] The audit report stated that, in ACSB's opinion, Universal Travel's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the issuer's financial position in conformity with U.S. GAAP and that ACSB's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

17. The engagement team for ACSB's audit of Universal Travel's 2009 financial statements consisted of Svoboda, as the auditor with final responsibility, two assistants from the Firm, and assistants from the China Firm.

18. ACSB failed to comply with the applicable professional standards in connection with the 2009 Universal Travel audit. First, the Firm failed to adequately plan the audit by failing to consider the nature, extent, and timing of work to be performed.[22/] The 2009 planning memorandum included in the Universal Travel

On April 26, 2012, the issuer filed a Form 25, Notification of Removal from Listing and/or Registration under Section 12(b) of the Exchange Act, voluntarily withdrawing its common stock from listing and registration on the NYSE. On September 27, 2013, the Commission issued an order revoking the registration of Universal Travel's securities due to the issuer's failure to file periodic reports with the Commission since September 30, 2011.

[21/] Although the Firm's audit opinion on the 2009 financial statements was unqualified, the Firm expressed an adverse opinion on Universal Travel's internal control over financial reporting, noting the identification of two material weaknesses including: "Lack of technical accounting expertise among financial staff regarding US GAAP and the requirements of the PCAOB, and regarding preparation of financial statements." The Firm's combined report stated that because of the effect of those material weaknesses "Universal Travel Group did not maintain effective internal control over financial reporting as of December 31, 2009," but that "[o]ur opinion on the effectiveness of internal control over financial reporting does not affect our opinion on the consolidated financial statements." working papers contained risk assessments and planned audit procedures that were not relevant to the issuer. The risk assessments and planned audit procedures included in the planning memorandum were copied from another company's audit and the engagement team failed to exercise due care to ensure that they were appropriate for the 2009 Universal Travel audit.[23/]

19. Audit field work occurred primarily at the issuer's headquarters in the PRC. ACSB failed to adequately supervise the work of its assistants, including assistants from the China Firm. ACSB failed to adequately direct the efforts of the assistants involved in accomplishing the objectives of the audit, including informing them of the objectives of the procedures that they were to perform.[24/]

20. The China Firm assistants performed a significant portion of the audit work. ACSB failed to adequately review and supervise that work. As a result, ACSB failed to determine whether the audit work was adequately performed and failed to evaluate whether the results of the audit work were consistent with the conclusions to be presented in the audit report.[25/]

21. During the Universal Travel audit, ACSB failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support its opinion on Universal Travel's 2009 financial statements.[26/] Specifically, ACSB failed to obtain sufficient audit evidence to test the existence and valuation of Universal Travel's reported accounts receivable. In its 2009 Form 10-K, Universal Travel reported net accounts receivable totaling $17.3 million, approximately 20% of its reported assets. During the 2009 audit, the China Firm assistants sent out positive confirmations for receivables totaling $10.9 million or approximately 63% of the net accounts receivable balance. However, the engagement team did not receive responses for accounts totaling one-third of the amounts selected for confirmation and ACSB failed to perform alternative procedures with respect to those nonresponses.[27/]

22. In its 2009 Form 10-K, Universal Travel reported that it generated revenue from four lines of business, namely, air-ticketing, hotel reservations, packaged-tours, and air cargo agency services. Universal Travel's financial statements disclosed that the issuer recognized packaged-tour revenue at the time that the tour was completed and that total revenues from its packaged-tour operations represented approximately 69% of Universal Travel's reported revenue in 2009. ACSB failed to perform sufficient procedures to determine whether Universal Travel recognized its revenue in accordance with its disclosed policy.[28/]

23. Universal Travel's 2009 financial statements reported goodwill totaling $9.9 million or 11.5% of its total reported assets at December 31, 2009. ACSB failed to appropriately test Universal Travel's goodwill for impairment. The working papers contained an analysis prepared by the issuer that contained management's goodwill impairment analysis. ACSB failed to perform sufficient procedures to test the assumptions and estimates used in management's impairment analysis.[29/] Further, ACSB failed to perform any audit procedures to corroborate management's representations concerning its impairment analysis.[30/]

24. ACSB failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter relating to material adjustments recorded in the issuer's consolidation at year-end, including an entry for $5 million in cash, representing 13.6% of total cash or 5.8% of Universal Travel's total reported assets at December 31, 2009. The Firm audited Home System's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2009 and issued an unqualified opinion dated March 18, 2010, which was included in Home System's Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 29, 2010. The audit report stated that, in ACSB's opinion, Home System's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the issuer's financial position in conformity with U.S. GAAP and that ACSB's audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards.

27. The engagement team for ACSB's audit of Home System's 2009 financial statements consisted of Svoboda, as the auditor with final responsibility, an assistant from the Firm, and assistants from the China Firm.

28. ACSB failed to comply with the applicable professional standards in connection with the 2009 Home System audit. First, the Firm failed to adequately plan the audit by failing to consider the nature, extent, and timing of work to be performed.[32/] The 2009 planning memorandum included in the Home System working papers contained risk assessments and planned audit procedures that were not relevant to the issuer. 31. During the Home System audit, ACSB failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support its opinion on Home System's 2009 financial statements.[36/] The issuer's 2009 financial statements reported goodwill totaling $25 million or 28% of Home System's total reported assets at December 31, 2009, the issuer's largest asset. In the footnotes to the 2009 Home System financial statements management stated that goodwill was not impaired. The Home System working papers contained a cash flow projection prepared by management that appeared to be an impairment analysis of the issuer's goodwill as of December 31, 2009. ACSB failed to perform sufficient audit procedures to assess the reasonableness of the cash flow projection, including the relevance, sufficiency, and reliability of the data supporting the projection and the assumptions management made in formulating the projection.[37/] As a result, ACSB failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning the valuation of goodwill.

32. Additionally, with respect to the issuer's sale of a property, Home System reported a "gain on the transfer of the building" of $2.4 million in its 2009 financial statements, representing approximately 19% of its pre-tax income for the year. As a result, ACSB failed to determine whether the audit work was adequately performed and failed to evaluate whether the results of the audit work were consistent with the conclusions to be presented in the audit report.[43/]

39. During the Sinocom audit, ACSB failed to exercise due professional care and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to support its opinion on Sinocom's 2009 financial statements.[44/] Specifically, ACSB failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter to test the existence and valuation of Sinocom's reported accounts receivable. Sinocom's 2009 financial statements reported accounts receivable in the amount of $22.5 million, representing 36.8% of total reported assets as of December 31, 2009. The engagement team tested accounts receivable by performing positive confirmation procedures, but selected only 27 out of approximately one thousand accounts to confirm, relating to only $7.3 million or 32% of the outstanding balance at year-end. ACSB did not receive responses relating to accounts totaling $1.8 million, or 24% of the amounts selected for confirmation and it failed to perform alternative procedures relating to these accounts. In light of the non-responses, ACSB should have performed alternative procedures to obtain the necessary evidence.[45/] In addition, the accounts selected for confirmation were chosen based upon a dollar threshold and therefore did not include a representative sample of the total accounts receivable population as of year-end.[46/] ACSB failed to perform sufficient procedures to test the remaining 68% of the accounts receivable balance that it did not select for confirmation during the 2009 audit.[47/]

40. Sinocom's 2009 financial statements reported cash in the amount of $34.4 million, representing 56.2% of total reported assets as of December 31, 2009. Sinocom's 2009 financial statements reported total liabilities of $18.5 million which included accounts payable of $14.8 million, or 80% of total reported liabilities as of December 31, 2009. ACSB failed to perform adequate procedures to test the valuation of the year-end accounts payable balance. The China Firm assistants selected 31 accounts for positive confirmation, but only received responses for six accounts. Confirmations for which it did not receive a response totaled $8.6 million, representing 83.9% of the amounts for which confirmations were requested. ACSB failed to perform any alternative procedures with respect to those nonresponses[49/] and failed to perform any other procedures to test the valuation of accounts payable at year-end.[50/]

42. ACSB also failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter relating to the completeness of the year-end accounts payable balance.[51/] The Firm's working papers contained an audit program for accounts payable that indicated that the Firm planned to perform a search for unrecorded liabilities. With respect to the 2009 Universal Travel and Sinocom audits, Svoboda, the auditor with final responsibility, prepared the consolidation and financial statements that formed the basis of these issuers' financial statements that were included in the issuers' Forms 10-K filed with the Commission. As a result, ACSB failed to comply with Section 10A(g) of the Exchange Act, PCAOB Rule 3520, and AU § 220.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Iter Audit S.R.L., Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2013-013 December 17, 2013

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Iter Audit S.R.L. (the "Firm" or "Iter Audit") and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report and timely pay an annual fee in 2010, 2011, 2012, and 2013.

I.

On September 25, 2013, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 (as amended) ("Act") and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, Iter Audit did not file an answer indicating the Firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Iter Audit S.R.L. is a limited liability corporation located in Rome, Italy. The Firm registered with the Board on April 12, 2005, pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules. Iter Audit is licensed by the Commissione Nazionale per le Società e la Borsa of Italy to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. 23 (Albo Speciale Società di Revisione)). The Firm has not, since registering with the Board, issued any audit reports or broker-dealer certifications, or played a substantial role in the preparation or furnishing of any audit report. The Firm is no longer operational, and is currently in liquidation.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, Iter Audit failed to timely file an annual report for 2010, 2011, 2012, and 2013.

3. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, Iter Audit failed to timely pay its annual fee in 2010, 2011, 2012, and 2013.

C. Subsequent Events

4. The Board instituted these proceedings on September 25, 2013. Iter Audit's time to file an answer pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5421(b) was extended to November 6, 2013, by Hearing Officer Order dated October 16, 2013.

5. On October 24, 2013, Iter Audit filed its annual reports for 2010, 2011, 2012, and 2013.

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

6. On October 24, 2013, Iter Audit filed a Form 1-WD to request leave to withdraw its registration from the Board.

7. On November 5, 2013, Iter Audit paid its annual fees for 2010, 2011, 2012, and 2013.

8. The proceeding was stayed by Hearing Officer Order dated November 6, 2013, to allow for Board consideration of Respondent's Offer of Settlement.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Iter Audit is censured; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act, and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000 is imposed upon Iter Audit. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Iter Audit shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer pursuant to instructions provided by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter, which identifies Iter Audit as a respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover letter and money order or check shall be sent to Office of the Secretary, Attention: Phoebe W. Brown, Secretary, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

V.

Upon performance by Iter Audit of Part IV above, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 2107, the Board shall consider Iter Audit's Form 1-WD and whether to grant it leave to withdraw. In doing so, the Board shall not take into consideration its findings contained in Part III herein.

ISSUED BY THE BOARD.

AMENDED ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, AND ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Labrozzi & Co., P.A., and Douglas A. Labrozzi, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-001 February 13, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Labrozzi & Co., P.A. (the "Firm"), and Douglas A. Labrozzi, CPA ("Labrozzi"), revoking the registration of the Firm, and barring Labrozzi from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the Firm and Labrozzi (collectively, "Respondents") on the basis of its findings concerning Respondents' non-cooperation with a Board investigation and violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards, in which they failed to comply with Accounting Board Demands for documents and testimony, and also improperly added, altered and backdated audit documentation during a Board investigation in violation of their duties to cooperate and Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS 3").

I.

On September 17, 2013, the Board issued an Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings ("Original OIP") pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(3) against Respondents. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, these proceedings were not public. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations (the "Division") consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, Respondents did not consent to making the hearing public.

Pursuant to Section 105(c) and PCAOB Rules 5200(a)(1) and (a)(3), the Board now deems it appropriate to issue this Amended Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings ("Amended Order") against Respondents that includes allegations that Respondents improperly added, altered, and backdated audit documentation submitted to the Division in response to March 27, 2013 Accounting Board Demands as further evidence of Respondents' noncooperation and that Respondents thereby violated AS 3, because Respondents did not document that the information had been created and added to the audit work papers after the documentation completion dates or the reason for so doing.

II.

In anticipation of the issuance of this Amended Order and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement (collectively, "Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which are admitted, Respondents consent to the entry of this Amended Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, and Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[1/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Labrozzi & Co., P.A. is a professional association organized under the laws of the state of Florida, with an office in Miami, Florida. The Firm is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. The Firm is licensed

[1/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2/] Except with respect to sanctions imposed under Section 105(b)(3) of the Act, the sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

ORDER

by the Florida Board of Accountancy (License No. AD65931). The status of the license is currently "Delinquent." As of its 2012 Annual Report on Form 2, the Firm had one principal (Douglas A. Labrozzi, CPA) and no audit staff.

2. Douglas A. Labrozzi, CPA is the president of the Firm and a certified public accountant licensed in the state of Florida (License No. AC40693). The status of his license is currently "Delinquent, Active." Labrozzi is an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' repeated failure to cooperate with a Board investigation and comply with PCAOB rules and standards. Respondents failed to produce certain categories of documents and information demanded in Accounting Board Demands until after the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings against them on September 17, 2013. Further, Labrozzi refused to appear for sworn testimony as demanded by the Division until after the institution of disciplinary proceedings against him.[3/] In addition, Respondents added, altered, and backdated audit documentation for three audits prior to providing that documentation to the Division in connection with its investigation without informing the Division, and without documenting, that the information had been created and added to the audit work papers after the documentation completion dates or the reason for so doing, as required by AS 3.

C. Respondents Failed to Cooperate with a Board Investigation

4. The Act authorizes the Board to impose disciplinary sanctions for a registered firm's or associated person's noncooperation with a Board investigation.[4/] Board rules include procedures for implementing that authority.[5/] Noncooperation with a Board investigation includes failing to comply with an accounting board demand.[6/] As described below, Respondents failed to comply with Accounting Board Demands issued

---

[3/] The Original OIP alleged that Respondents failed to cooperate with a Board investigation based on Respondents' failure to produce certain categories of documents and information to the Division and Labrozzi's refusal to appear for investigative testimony.

on March 27, 2013 pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5101(a)(2) by failing to produce certain documents and information. Further, Douglas Labrozzi failed to comply with a March 27, 2013 Accounting Board Demand requiring him to appear for sworn testimony.

5. Noncooperation with a Board investigation also includes knowingly making any false material declaration or making or using any other information, including any book, paper, document, record, recording, or other material, knowing the same to contain any false material declaration.[7/] As described below, Respondents failed to cooperate with a Board investigation by submitting audit documentation to the Division that they knew to contain false declarations.

Respondents Failed to Produce Certain Demanded Documents and Information

6. On March 20, 2013, the Board issued an Order of Formal Investigation ("OFI"), In the Matter of Labrozzi & Co., P.A. The March 20, 2013 OFI related to potential audit failures involving the Firm's audits of the June 30, 2011 financial statements of Issuer A and the December 31, 2010 financial statements of Issuer B. Labrozzi was the sole auditor involved in those audits.

7. Prior to the Board's issuance of the OFI, and as part of an informal inquiry the Division was conducting pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5100, the Division issued a request for documents and information to the Firm on November 8, 2012 ("November 8 Request"). In response, the Firm provided the Division with certain documents in late November and December 2012.

8. Following the issuance of the OFI, the Division issued an Accounting Board Demand ("ABD") on March 27, 2013 directed to Labrozzi for documents, information and testimony. At the same time, the Division issued a separate ABD for documents and information directed to the Custodian of Records of the Firm. The ABDs required Labrozzi and the Firm to produce responsive documents and information by April 15, 2013. In addition, the Division staff enclosed copies of an informational PCAOB Form ENF-1, detailing the consequences of a refusal to produce documents in connection with an investigation.

9. The demanded documents were relevant to the Board's investigation. Specifically, the March 27, 2013 ABDs required Respondents to produce, among other things, documents relating to the Firm's audits and reviews of Issuer A and Issuer B. The demands spanned three fiscal years as related to Issuer A and two fiscal years with respect to Issuer B. The demanded documents included audit and review work papers and other documents relating to those audits and reviews.

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

10. As indicated in the cover letters to Respondents, to the extent that Respondents had previously produced an identical copy of one or more of the documents specified in the ABDs, they did not need to provide an additional copy. Instead, the letter directed Respondents to describe such documents, including the date of production, and the paragraphs of the ABDs to which such documents related. The ABDs contained essentially identical demands for documents and information as the November 8 Request, except that the ABDs included Demands 14 and 15, which sought, respectively, a written description of the search conducted for responsive documents and a sworn, written certification that all responsive, non-privileged documents have been produced.

11. While documents produced by the Firm in response to the November 8 Request were responsive to certain demands, as of the date of the Original OIP entire categories of documents demanded by the ABDs had not been produced, as set forth below in paragraph 22.

12. After the ABDs' April 15 deadline for producing documents and information had passed and no response had been received, the Division advised Respondents' attorneys that Respondents had missed the deadline to respond and that the PCAOB considered the non-production of all responsive, non-privileged documents and other information by the due date to constitute a failure to cooperate under Board Rule 5110. The Division, however, granted Respondents certain limited extensions, each time reminding Respondents that a failure to fully respond might result in disciplinary action being taken.

13. On June 5, 2013, counsel provided to the Division certain documents by email; however, that production did not respond to various categories of demanded documents and information outstanding at that time and, thus, did not satisfy Respondents' obligations. For example, at that time Respondents still had not produced certain audit and review work papers for Issuer A and Issuer B, and correspondence files for certain years for both issuers.

14. Thereafter, the Division again advised counsel that neither Labrozzi nor the Firm had provided sufficient responses to the ABDs and that such non-compliance was viewed by PCAOB staff as a failure to cooperate under Board Rule 5110.

Labrozzi Failed to Appear for Testimony Pursuant to the ABD

15. As stated, pursuant to the OFI, the Division issued an ABD to Labrozzi on March 27, 2013. In addition to demanding documents, the ABD required Labrozzi to appear for sworn testimony. The ABD set his testimony to begin on May 14, 2013 in

ORDER

New York. That date was postponed to June 11, 2013 in order to accommodate settlement discussions.

16. Then, on June 5, 2013, Respondents' counsel requested that testimony be rescheduled because of his vacation plans. The Division accordingly agreed to a final, two week extension of the testimony date to June 25, 2013, and stated that no further extensions would be granted.

17. On June 19, 2013, the Division asked counsel to confirm that Labrozzi would arrive for his testimony in New York beginning on Tuesday, June 25, 2013. In response, by email dated June 21, 2013, counsel wrote, "Mr. Librozzi [sic] will appear for deposition on Tuesday."

18. On Monday, June 24, 2013, the day before Labrozzi's scheduled testimony − after the Division had made travel plans for certain staff to travel to New York, booked a court reporter, and organized and arranged for the use of testimony exhibits − Respondents' counsel informed the Division by phone that Labrozzi would not be arriving for his testimony. As of the date of the Original OIP, neither Labrozzi nor his attorney had offered an alternative date for Labrozzi's testimony.

* * * * *

19. On June 27, 2013, the Division sent counsel for Respondents a letter (the "Charging Letter") outlining the Division's intent to recommend that the Board commence a disciplinary proceeding to determine whether Respondents failed to cooperate with a PCAOB investigation, by failing to comply with the March 27, 2013 ABDs.

20. The Charging Letter detailed the events surrounding Labrozzi's failure to appear for sworn testimony and explained that such non-compliance with an ABD was viewed as a failure to cooperate with the Board.

21. In addition, the Charging Letter set out the categories of documents and information that had been demanded of Respondents and not produced, including, certain audit and review work papers for Issuer A and Issuer B, and correspondence files for certain years for both issuers.

22. On July 19, 2013, Respondents submitted a brief statement of position to the Charging Letter (the "SOP"). The SOP included the production of certain additional work papers and correspondence. However, entire categories of documents were not produced and remained outstanding as of the date of the Original OIP: (1) the fiscal year-end 2010 audit work papers for Issuer A; (2) the 2011 quarterly review work papers for Issuer A; and (3) the correspondence files for the fiscal year-end 2012 audit and 2012 quarterly reviews of Issuer A.[8/] As of the issuance of the Original OIP, Respondents had also failed to provide a description of the search conducted for responsive documents and a sworn certification that all responsive documents have been produced.[9/]

23. The SOP made no mention of Labrozzi's willingness to appear for testimony. Therefore, on July 22, 2013, the Division wrote counsel for Respondents, pointing out the SOP's silence as to Labrozzi's willingness to appear for testimony and requesting that counsel advise the Division by July 25, 2013 whether or not Labrozzi would agree to appear for sworn testimony. As of the date of the Original OIP, the Division had not received a response.

24. Thus, Respondents failed to cooperate with a Board investigation by failing to comply with ABDs requiring the production of certain documents and information to the Division.

25. Further, Labrozzi failed to cooperate with a Board investigation by failing to comply with an ABD demanding his sworn testimony.

Respondents Altered Work Papers Before Producing Them to the Division

26. After receiving the Division's informal request for documents dated November 8, 2012, Respondents significantly added to, altered, and backdated the audit documentation for (1) the audit of the June 30, 2010 Issuer A financial statements ("Issuer A 2010 Audit"), (2) the audit of the June 30, 2011 Issuer A financial statements ("Issuer A 2011 Audit"), and (3) the audit of the December 31, 2010 Issuer B financial statements ("Issuer B 2010 Audit"). Respondents subsequently produced these altered audit work papers in response to the March 27, 2013 ABDs without informing the

And it was not until December 2013, after the institution of disciplinary proceedings, that Respondents clarified that the Firm did not perform 2011 quarterly reviews for Issuer A and, thus, Respondents did not possess 2011 quarterly review work papers for Issuer A.

Division that the documentation did not reflect contemporaneous audit work.[10/] The Division only learned of this in the course of questioning Labrozzi during his rescheduled investigative testimony on December 12 and December 13, 2013. Labrozzi acknowledged during testimony that he had prepared and added the audit documentation in an attempt to make the work papers appear more complete and robust.

27. In particular, for all three audits, Labrozzi completed and added to the work papers numerous checklists and other form documents issued by PPC (Thomson Reuters) ("PPC work papers") which purported to describe procedures performed as part of the audits. For example, Labrozzi wholesale added to the audit documentation for all three audits PPC forms entitled "Financial Statement Materiality Worksheet for Planning Purposes"; "Audit Program for General Planning Procedures"; "Fraud Risk Factors"; "Audit Documentation Checklist"; and "Disclosure Requirements for Financial Statements of Smaller Reporting Companies," among other forms. The 33 separate PPC work papers that were added to the audit documentation for the three audits account for a total of (1) 161 pages out of 199 total pages of the work paper file for the Issuer A 2010 Audit; (2) 165 pages out of 222 total pages of the work paper file for the Issuer A 2011 Audit; and (3) 191 pages out of 455 total pages of the work paper file for the Issuer B 2010 Audit.

28. In addition, with regard to other work papers (non-PPC work papers) included in the Issuer A 2010 Audit file and the Issuer A 2011 Audit file produced to the Division, Labrozzi, after receiving the November 8 Request, added substantive comment boxes with text purporting to explain the significance of the work paper for the audit, as revealed by the metadata corresponding to these comments. For example, in the work papers for the Issuer A 2011 Audit, Labrozzi added comment boxes to a "Stock Agreement – Public Company" containing the following text: "Objective: To determine if transaction exists" and "Conclusion: Transaction deemed reasonable. See Memo at WP 4404 for auditors explanation of media credits." Metadata reveals these comment boxes were added on November 20, 2012.

29. In no instance where Labrozzi added documentation or information to the work papers for the three audits after he received the November 8 Request did he Respondents first produced the Issuer A 2011 Audit documentation to the Division on December 14, 2012, and then re-produced the same altered audit documentation on December 8, 2013 in response to the ABDs. Respondents first produced the Issuer B 2010 Audit documentation to the Division on November 29, 2012, and then re-produced the same altered audit documentation on June 5, 2013 in response to the ABDs.

document that he was adding the information at a later date or the reason for such an addition. To the contrary, in many instances, Labrozzi added his initials and backdated the PPC work papers to misleadingly suggest that they had been completed at the time of the audit. For example, Labrozzi dated the "Audit Documentation Checklist" PPC work paper included in the Issuer A 2011 Audit file as having been completed on August 14, 2011, even though he completed it after receiving the November 8 Request.

30. Thus, Respondents produced to the Division the work papers for the Issuer A 2010 Audit, the Issuer A 2011 Audit and Issuer B 2010 Audit without informing the Division of the numerous late alterations and addition of backdated documents to those work papers. As a result, Respondents failed to cooperate with a Board investigation by submitting audit documentation to the Division that they knew to contain false declarations.

D. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

31. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards and related professional practice standards.[11/] AS 3 requires that an auditor prepare audit documentation in sufficient detail to document the procedures performed, evidence obtained, and conclusions reached with respect to relevant financial statement assertions, and to demonstrate clearly that the work was in fact performed.[12/] Prior to the report release date,[13/] the auditor must have completed all necessary auditing procedures and obtained sufficient evidence to support the representations in the auditor's report. A complete and final set of audit documentation should be assembled for retention as of a date not more than 45 days after the report release date ("documentation completion date").[14/] Circumstances may require additions to audit documentation after the report release date. While information and documentation may be added after that date, any added information or documentation must indicate the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it.[15/]

32. Both the November 8 Request and ABDs expressly sought the Firm's "complete and final sets of audit and review documentation assembled for retention" for the relevant audits in accordance with AS 3.

33. Respondents improperly created and added audit documentation to the audit files following the documentation completion dates for the Issuer A 2010 Audit, the Issuer A 2011 Audit, and the Issuer B 2010 Audit. In particular, for all three audits, following the relevant documentation completion dates, Labrozzi completed and added to the work papers numerous PPC work papers which purported to describe procedures performed as part of the audits. In addition, with regard to other work papers (non-PPC work papers) included in the Issuer A 2010 Audit file and the Issuer A 2011 Audit file produced to the Division, Labrozzi, following the relevant documentation completion dates, added substantive comment boxes with text purporting to explain the significance of the work paper for the audit. Respondents performed such additions and alterations without documenting that the audit documentation had been created and added after the documentation completion dates or the reason for so doing.

34. Accordingly, Respondents repeatedly violated AS 3.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Sections 105(b)(3)(A)(iii) and 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rules 5300(a)(5) and 5300(b)(1), Labrozzi & Co., P.A. and Douglas A. Labrozzi, CPA are hereby censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(b)(3)(A)(ii) and 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rules 5300(a)(1) and 5300(b)(1), the registration of Labrozzi & Co., P.A. is revoked; and

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Patrick Rodgers, CPA, PA and Patrick E. Rodgers, CPA Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-002 March 6, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring the registered public accounting firm Patrick Rodgers, CPA, PA (the "Firm") and revoking the Firm's registration;[1/] and censuring Patrick E. Rodgers, CPA ("Rodgers") and barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[2/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning the Firm and Rodgers' (collectively, "Respondents") repeated violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the Firm's audits of the financial statements of one issuer client for the years ended December 31, 2008, December 31, 2009, December 31, 2010, and December 31, 2011.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Rodgers and the Firm.

[1/] The Firm may reapply for registration after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

[2/] Rodgers may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after two (2) years from the date of this Order.

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[3/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[4/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Patrick Rodgers, CPA, PA is, and at all relevant times was, a public accounting firm located in Altamonte Springs, Florida and licensed in the State of Florida (License No. AD64983). At all relevant times, the Firm has been registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB Rules. At all relevant times, the Firm was the external auditor for the issuer identified below.

2. Patrick E. Rodgers, 73, of Altamonte Springs, Florida, is a certified public accountant licensed in the State of Florida (License No. AC38732) and in the State of New Jersey (License No. 20CC00537600). At all relevant times, he was the sole owner of the Firm and an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

[3/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondents' Offers and are not binding on any other persons or entities in this or any other proceeding.

[4/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondents in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that each Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

ORDER

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' repeated failure to comply with PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the audits of Baltia Air Lines, Inc.'s ("Baltia") financial statements for the years ended December 31, 2008, December 31, 2009, December 31, 2010, and December 31, 2011 ("Baltia Audits"). As detailed below, Respondents failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter, failed to exercise due professional care, and failed to exercise professional skepticism in connection with the Baltia Audits.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

4. In connection with the preparation and issuance of an audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards and related professional practice standards.[5/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[6/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care.[7/]

5. For audits of fiscal years beginning before December 15, 2010, those standards require that the auditor obtain sufficient competent evidence to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[8/] For audits of fiscal years beginning on or after December 15, 2010, those standards require that the auditor plan and perform the audit to obtain appropriate audit evidence that is sufficient to support the opinion expressed in the auditor's report.[9/]

6. Among the elements of due professional care is professional skepticism, "an attitude that includes a questioning mind and a critical assessment of audit evidence."[10/] An auditor acting with professional skepticism "should not be satisfied with less than persuasive evidence because of a belief that management is honest."[11/] In addition, "professional skepticism requires an ongoing questioning of whether the information and evidence obtained suggests that a material misstatement due to fraud has occurred."[12/]

7. For audits of fiscal years beginning before December 15, 2010, PCAOB standards require that an auditor respond to risks of material misstatement due to fraud through the application of professional skepticism in gathering and evaluating audit evidence.[13/] An auditor's assessment of such risk should "be ongoing throughout the audit,"[14/] and an auditor should consider whether the "nature of auditing procedures performed may need to be changed to obtain evidence that is more reliable or to obtain additional corroborative information."[15/] For audits of fiscal years beginning on or after December 15, 2010, PCAOB standards state that the auditor's responses to the assessed risks of material misstatement, particularly fraud risks, should involve the application of professional skepticism in gathering and evaluating audit evidence.[16/] Examples of the application of professional skepticism in response to assessed fraud risks are "modifying the planned audit procedures to obtain more reliable evidence regarding relevant assertions" and "obtaining sufficient appropriate evidence to corroborate management's explanations or representations concerning important matters."[17/]

8. PCAOB standards require an auditor to obtain satisfaction concerning the purpose, nature, and extent of related party transactions through the performance of certain procedures that extend beyond the inquiry of management.[18/] In addition, these standards require the auditor to evaluate the information available concerning the related party transaction in order to satisfy the auditor that it has been adequately disclosed in the financial statements.[19/]

Audit of Baltia's 2008 Financial Statements

9. At all relevant times, Baltia Air Lines, Inc. ("Baltia") was a New York corporation with its principal office in Queens, New York. At all relevant times, Baltia's common stock was registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and was quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, Baltia was an "issuer" as defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). As disclosed in its public filings, Baltia was a start-up United States airline "currently conducting the FAA [Federal Aviation Administration] Air Carrier Certification process…."[20/] Baltia's public filings disclosed that it intended to commence non-stop air service from New York to St. Petersburg, Russia upon completion of certification.

10. The Firm audited Baltia's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2008, and issued an unqualified opinion dated April 13, 2009. The 2008 audit report was included in a Form 10-K filed by Baltia with the Commission on April 15, 2009. Rodgers had final responsibility for the 2008 Baltia audit.

11. Baltia reported in its Form 10-K for the year ended December 31, 2008 that since inception, Baltia had raised approximately $7.4 million in cash proceeds from

12. During the 2008 Baltia audit, Respondents became aware of information indicating that certain payments and stock issuances were being made to, or on behalf of, officers of Baltia. After becoming aware of these transactions during the audit, Respondents failed to perform sufficient procedures. Other than obtaining management representations, Respondents failed to take any steps to evaluate the nature of these transactions.

13. Despite being aware of these transactions and the lack of disclosure in the financial statements related to these transactions, Respondents failed to exercise due care and professional skepticism and failed to perform sufficient procedures. Although a portion of the compensation paid to the CEO in 2008 was disclosed, Respondents failed to evaluate additional payments and stock issuances made to or on behalf of the CEO and payments and stock issuances to other officers of Baltia. Audit of Baltia's 2009 Financial Statements

15. A Form 8-K was filed on April 6, 2011 stating that the originally filed Form 10-K for Baltia's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2009 should not be relied on due to an auditor independence violation by the predecessor auditor. Rodgers was subsequently engaged to "re-audit" the 2009 financial statements. The Firm audited Baltia's financial statements for the year ended December 31, 2009, and issued an unqualified opinion dated April 28, 2011. The 2009 audit report was included in a Form 10-K/A filed by Baltia with the Commission on May 2, 2011. Rodgers had final responsibility for the 2009 Baltia audit.

ORDER

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Patrick Rodgers, CPA, PA and Patrick E. Rodgers, CPA are hereby censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Patrick E. Rodgers, CPA is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i);

C. After two (2) years from the date of this Order, Patrick E. Rodgers, CPA may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm;

D. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Patrick Rodgers, CPA, PA is revoked;

E. After two years (2) years from the date of this Order, Patrick Rodgers, CPA, PA may reapply for registration by filing an application pursuant to PCAOB Rule 2101.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Berman W. Martinez y Asociados and Berman W. Martinez Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-003 May 6, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Berman W. Martinez y Asociados (the "Firm") and Berman W. Martinez ("Martinez"), revoking the registration of the Firm, and barring Martinez from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the Firm and Martinez (collectively, "Respondents") on the basis of its findings that: (1) Respondents violated Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and Rule 10b-5 thereunder, and PCAOB rules and auditing standards in auditing the fiscal year ("FY") 2009, 2010, and 2011 financial statements of one issuer client, and the FY 2011 restated financial statements of the same issuer client (the "Audits"); (2) the Firm violated PCAOB quality control standards and Martinez directly and substantially contributed to the Firm's violation of those standards; (3) the Firm failed to file with the Board an annual report for 2013, in violation of Section 102(d) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, and (4) the Firm violated PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, which provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board."

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Act, and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against the Firm and Martinez.

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement (collectively, "Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over them and the subject matter of these proceedings, which are admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[1/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[2/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Berman W. Martinez y Asociados is a limited liability partnership organized under the laws of the Republic of Nicaragua. The Firm operates in Managua, Nicaragua. In December 2009, the Firm registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules. At the time of the Board's first inspection of the Firm, in April 2013, the Firm had two partners, seven staff, and one issuer client, Accredited Business Consolidators Corp. ("ACDU" or the "Issuer").[3/]

2. Berman W. Martinez, age 54, of Managua, Nicaragua, is a public accountant licensed by the Nicaraguan Ministry of Education (license number 326-2006). Martinez had final responsibility for all of the audits discussed herein, and

The Board finds that Respondents' conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that such sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

authorized the issuance of all audit reports discussed herein. Martinez is, and at all relevant times was, an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' numerous and repeated violations of the Exchange Act and PCAOB rules, quality control standards, and auditing standards in connection with the audits of its sole issuer client ACDU's financial statements for the three fiscal years ended December 31, 2009 through December 31, 2011 (including the restated financial statements for FY 2011). Specifically, as detailed below, Respondents issued reports for each year containing unqualified audit opinions concerning the Issuer's financial statements and representing that the Audits had been conducted in accordance with PCAOB rules and standards. The Respondents did so under circumstances in which they knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that these representations were false. Respondents' conduct with regard to these reports violated Exchange Act Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 thereunder.

4. Respondents also failed repeatedly, among other things, to plan and perform audit work in accordance with PCAOB standards. Respondents also failed to exercise due professional care and obtain sufficient appropriate audit evidence to provide a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.

5. Furthermore, as detailed below, the Firm failed to establish and implement quality control policies and procedures sufficient to provide it with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel met all applicable professional standards, as required by PCAOB standards. At all relevant times, Martinez was responsible for the development, implementation and monitoring of the Firm's quality control policies and procedures. Despite those responsibilities, Martinez took or omitted to take action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that his acts and/or omissions would directly and substantially contribute to the Firm's violation of PCAOB quality control standards, in contravention of PCAOB Rule 3502, Responsibility Not to Knowingly or Recklessly Contribute to Violations.

6. Finally, the Firm violated Section 102(d) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 2200 by failing to file its annual report for 2013, and violated PCAOB Rule 2202 by failing to pay its annual fee to the Board in 2013.

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

C. Background

7. The Firm issued two audit reports dated April 11, 2011 expressing unqualified opinions relating to the Issuer's financial statements for FY 2009 and 2010, which the Issuer included in two separate Forms 10-K that were filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission" or "SEC") on April 15, 2011.[4/] The Firm issued an audit report dated February 9, 2012 expressing an unqualified opinion relating to the Issuer's FY 2011 financial statements, which the Issuer included in its Form 10-K filed with the Commission on March 8, 2012. Finally, the Firm issued an audit report dated January 21, 2013 relating to the Issuer's restated FY 2011 financial statements, which the Issuer included in its Form 10-K/A filed with the Commission on January 28, 2013.[5/]

8. In the Firm's three audit reports relating to the Firm's audits of ACDU's FY 2009 through 2011 financial statements, the Firm opined that the Issuer's financial statements were fairly presented "in accordance with International Generally Accepted Accounting Principles."[6/] In each report, the Firm also stated that it had conducted the audits in accordance "with the rules of the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (PCAOB) in the United States."[7/]

9. In the Firm's audit report dated January 21, 2013, relating to the Firm's audit of ACDU's restated FY 2011 financial statements, the Firm opined that the Issuer's

[5/] The Form 10-K/A filing also included comparative financial statements for FY 2010 not included in the original FY 2011 Form 10-K filing. The comparative financial statements for FY 2010, however, were not restated.

[6/] The footnotes to the Issuer's financial statements for FY 2009, FY 2010, and FY 2011 stated that the financial statements had been prepared in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States ("U.S. GAAP").

[7/] PCAOB Auditing Standard No. 1 ¶ 3, References in Auditors' Reports to the Standards of the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, provides in pertinent part the following: "[I]n connection with any engagement performed in accordance with the auditing and related professional practice standards of the PCAOB, whenever the auditor is required by the interim standards to make reference in a report to generally accepted auditing standards, U.S. generally accepted auditing standards, auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America, or standards established by the AICPA, the auditor must instead refer to 'the standards of the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (United States)'."

financial statements were fairly presented "in accordance with accounting procedures generally accepted in the United States."[8/] This report also stated: "We conducted our audit in accordance with the standards of the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (PCAOB) in the United States."

10. The heading of each report listed the Firm's name. Martinez personally signed each audit report as follows: "Berman W. Martinez Martinez – Authorized Public Accountant."

11. As detailed below, at the time of the Firm's ACDU audits, Martinez had no prior experience with performing audits under PCAOB standards or education regarding U.S. GAAP.

D. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards In Connection with the Audits

12. In connection with the preparation or issuance of any audit report, PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons comply with the Board's auditing standards.[9/] An auditor may express an unqualified opinion on an issuer's financial statements only when the auditor has formed such an opinion on the basis of an audit performed in accordance with PCAOB standards.[10/] Among other things, those standards require that an auditor exercise due professional care, exercise professional skepticism, and obtain sufficient appropriate audit evidence to provide a reasonable basis for an opinion regarding the financial statements.[11/] As detailed below, Respondents failed to comply with these standards in performing the Audits.

The Issuer's common stock is registered with the Commission under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, ACDU was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

14. Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in conducting their audit of ACDU's FY 2009 financial statements. Among other things, Martinez and the Firm failed to plan the audit by failing to: develop an overall strategy for the expected conduct and scope of the audit; determine the nature, extent, and timing of the work to be performed; or prepare a written audit program setting forth the audit procedures they believed were necessary to accomplish the objectives of the audit.[12/]

15. In performing the FY 2009 audit, Martinez and the Firm also failed to exercise due care and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning significant balances and transactions in ACDU's financial statements.[13/] ACDU reported investments of $94,971, representing approximately 61% of its reported assets as of December 31, 2009. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test the existence or valuation of the investments balance.

16. ACDU reported accounts receivable of $39,960 and cash of $19,922 representing approximately 26% and 13%, respectively, of its total reported assets as of December 31, 2009. Respondents failed to perform any audit procedures to test the existence or valuation of ACDU's accounts receivable and cash balances during the FY 2009 audit.

17. ACDU reported a related-party loan from its majority shareholder in the amount of $165,426 as of December 31, 2009, representing approximately 91% of ACDU's total reported liabilities at year-end 2009. Nevertheless, Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test the existence or valuation of the reported loan balance.

18. Finally, for the FY 2009 audit, Respondents performed no procedures to test the existence or valuation of the $30,757 that ACDU reported as expenses.

The FY 2010 Audit

19. Respondents violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in conducting their audit of ACDU's FY 2010 financial statements. Respondents again failed to plan the audit, including by failing to: develop an overall strategy for the expected conduct and scope of the audit; determine the nature, extent and timing of the work to be performed; and prepare a written audit program setting forth the audit procedures they believed were necessary to accomplish the objectives of the audit.[14/]

20. In performing the FY 2010 audit, Martinez and the Firm also failed to exercise due care and obtain sufficient competent evidential matter concerning significant balances and transactions in ACDU's financial statements.[15/] ACDU reported investments of $90,030, representing approximately 61% of its reported assets as of December 31, 2010. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test the existence or valuation of the investments balance.

21. ACDU reported accounts receivable of $47,638 representing approximately 32% of its total reported assets as of December 31, 2010. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test the existence or valuation of ACDU's accounts receivable at year-end.

22. ACDU reported a related-party loan and accrued interest from its majority shareholder of $201,297 as of December 31, 2010, representing 100% of ACDU's total reported liabilities at year-end 2010. Nevertheless, Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test the existence or valuation of the reported loan and accrued interest balances.

23. Further, for FY 2010 ACDU reported a sale of stock assets of $102,837 as revenue and a related cost of the stock assets sold of $123,348. Respondents failed to perform any procedures to test the existence, valuation, presentation and disclosure of these transactions.

29. Finally, for the FY 2011 audit, Respondents performed no procedures to test the existence or valuation of the $27,060 that ACDU reported as expenses in its FY 2011 financial statements.

The FY 2011 Restatement

30. On January 28, 2013, ACDU filed a Form 10-K/A with the Commission that amended and restated ACDU's financial statements and related disclosures for the period ended December 31, 2011.[21/] The Firm issued an unqualified audit report dated January 21, 2013 relating to ACDU's FY 2010 and restated FY 2011 financial statements which was included in the Issuer's FY 2011 Form 10-K/A. ACDU's restated FY 2011 financial statements reported impairment charges totaling $20,599 relating to its investments, decreasing the reported investments balance from $90,255 to $64,095, or 29%, and increasing reported net loss for the year from $26,742 to $47,341, or 77%. Respondents failed to perform any audit procedures concerning ACDU's FY 2011 restated financial statements before issuing and authorizing the use of their revised unqualified audit opinion concerning those financial statements.

34. Respondents performed the Audits despite having no understanding of U.S. GAAP. Additionally, neither Martinez nor Firm staff had training or prior experience in auditing the financial statements of a public company in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards. Respondents knew, or were reckless in not knowing, that few if any substantive audit procedures were performed prior to the issuance of the Firm's audit opinions. As detailed in Part III.D. of this Order, above, Respondents did not plan or perform audit procedures in accordance with PCAOB standards so as to provide support for their unqualified opinions that the Issuer's financial statements were fairly presented in accordance with U.S. GAAP. Therefore, the Respondents violated Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 thereunder by issuing audit reports in connection with ACDU's FY 2009 through 2011 financial statements and FY 2011 restated financial statements falsely stating that they had conducted the Audits in accordance with PCAOB "rules" or PCAOB "standards."

F. The Firm Violated PCAOB Rules and Quality Control Standards and Martinez Knowingly or Recklessly Contributed to Those Violations

35. PCAOB rules require that a registered public accounting firm comply with certain quality control standards.[29/] Under PCAOB quality control standards, a firm should establish policies and procedures that "provide the firm with reasonable assurance that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality."[30/] Those procedures should encompass "all phases of the design and execution of the engagement," including "planning, performing, supervising, reviewing, documenting, and communicating the results of each engagement."[31/] A firm's policies and procedures should provide reasonable assurance that the firm "[u]ndertakes only those engagements that the firm can reasonably expect to be completed with professional competence."[32/] Policies and procedures, as well, should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that work "is assigned to personnel having the degree of technical training and proficiency required in the circumstances."[33/] One element of quality control is monitoring, and the firm should implement monitoring procedures to provide a firm with reasonable assurance that "its system of quality control is effective."[34/] The Firm failed to comply with these PCAOB quality control standards in connection with the Audits.

36. At all relevant times, the Firm failed to put policies and procedures in place to ensure that engagement personnel performed audit procedures necessary to comply with all PCAOB standards.[35/] As a result, the Firm's personnel failed to complete necessary audit work before the Firm released its audit opinions for the Audits.

37. At the time the Firm completed each of the ACDU audits, Martinez, who acted as the auditor with final responsibility or engagement partner, had no training in PCAOB standards or U.S. GAAP. In addition, the Firm did not require its personnel to participate in continuing professional education or professional development activities to ensure that its personnel understood PCAOB standards, U.S. GAAP, and applicable SEC reporting requirements.

38. PCAOB Rule 3502 prohibits an associated person of a registered public accounting firm from taking or omitting to take an action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that the act or omission would directly and substantially contribute to a violation of Board standards by that firm. Respondent Martinez, the principal partner of the Firm, was responsible for designing, implementing, and monitoring the Firm's system of quality control.[36/] Accordingly, Martinez had overall responsibility for ensuring that the Firm complied with PCAOB rules and standards. All of the Firm's conduct described above was either conduct of Martinez or omissions to act for which Martinez was responsible. With respect to all such acts and omissions, Martinez knew, or was reckless in not knowing, that his acts and omissions would directly and substantially contribute to the Firm's quality control violations described above. Martinez thereby violated PCAOB Rule 3502.

G. The Firm Violated PCAOB Rule 2200

39. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200 provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, the Firm failed to file an annual report for 2013.

H. The Firm Violated PCAOB Rule 2202

40. Pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202 provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31…." In violation of Rule 2202, the Firm failed to pay its annual fee for 2013.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Berman W. Martinez y Asociados and Berman W. Martinez are hereby censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Berman W. Martinez y Asociados is revoked; and

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Berman W. Martinez is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Henry Mendoza, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-004 May 6, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Henry Mendoza, CPA ("Mendoza") and barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Mendoza's noncooperation with a Board inspection and a Board investigation, in violation of PCAOB rules and auditing standards, by directing the improper alteration of, addition to, and backdating of audit documentation. These actions violated his duties to cooperate with Board inspections and investigations, and Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS3").

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), and PCAOB Rules 5200(a)(1) and (a)(3) against Mendoza.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Mendoza has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other

[1/] Mendoza may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after five (5) years from the date of this Order.

proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Mendoza and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Mendoza consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[2/]

III.

On the basis of Mendoza's Offer, the Board finds[3/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Henry Mendoza, age 55, of San Clemente, California, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the states of California (license no. 49798) and Illinois (license no. 86835). At all relevant times, Mendoza was the managing partner of the registered public accounting firm of Mendoza, Berger & Company, LLP ("MBC" or the "Firm"), and was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). In 2012, MBC ceased its operations and filed for a liquidation bankruptcy.[4/] Mendoza is currently a partner of the registered public accounting firm of Link Murrel & Company, LLP.

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to Mendoza's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[3/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Mendoza in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Mendoza's conduct described in this Order meets the condition set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

[4/] See In re Mendoza Berger & Company, LLP, No. 8:12-bk-17188 (Bankr. C.D. Cal.). On November 2, 2012, MBC filed a Form 1-WD, Request for Withdrawal From Registration, with the Board. The Firm's withdrawal from registration with the Board became effective on April 29, 2014.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

B. Summary

2. This matter concerns Mendoza's: (a) failure to cooperate with a Board inspection; (b) noncooperation with a formal investigation of the Board; and (c) failure to comply with PCAOB auditing standards related to audit documentation.

3. Mendoza repeatedly violated PCAOB Rule 4006, Duty to Cooperate with Inspectors, when Mendoza, and others acting at his direction, improperly altered, added to, and backdated work papers in advance of a Board inspection, and provided these misleading work papers to the Board's inspectors.

4. Mendoza failed to cooperate with a Board investigation, within the meaning of PCAOB Rule 5110, Noncooperation with an Investigation, when Mendoza, and others acting at his direction, provided false and misleading work papers to the staff of the Board's Division of Enforcement and Investigations ("Division"). These work papers contained false material declarations, and Mendoza knowingly directed MBC to produce these documents to the Division in the course of a Board investigation.

5. Finally, Mendoza repeatedly violated AS3. The misleading work papers that were produced to the Board's inspectors and to the Division did not indicate the dates that information was added to the work papers, the names of the persons who prepared the additional documentation, and the reasons for adding the additional documentation to the work papers months after the relevant documentation completion dates.

C. Mendoza Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

6. PCAOB rules require that an associated person of a registered public accounting firm "shall cooperate with the Board in the performance of any Board inspection."[5/] This cooperation obligation includes an obligation not to provide misleading documents or information in connection with the Board's inspection processes.[6/] PCAOB rules also require that associated persons of registered public accounting firms comply with the Board's auditing standards.[7/] Among other things, PCAOB auditing standards require that an auditor make certain written disclosures if the auditor adds information to the work papers after the documentation completion date.[8/] As described below, Mendoza violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the Board's inspection of MBC's audits of the 2008 financial statements of Issuers A and B, as defined below in paragraphs 8 and 9, respectively.

7. Additionally, the Act authorizes the Board to impose disciplinary sanctions for noncooperation with a Board investigation.[9/] PCAOB rules include procedures for implementing that authority.[10/] Noncooperation with a Board investigation includes knowingly making any false material declaration or making or using any other information, including any book, paper, document, record, recording, or other material, knowing the same to contain any false material declaration.[11/] As described below, Mendoza failed to cooperate with a Board investigation by submitting work papers to the Division that Mendoza knew to contain false material declarations.

Background Regarding the Audits

8. Issuer A is an issuer as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). MBC audited the December 31, 2008 and 2009 financial statements of Issuer A (the "Issuer A audits"). Mendoza was the engagement partner for the Issuer A audits. MBC's audit reports for the Issuer A audits expressed unqualified opinions, and stated that the audits were conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. Each audit report stated that Issuer A's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP"). The audit reports were included in Issuer A's annual reports filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission").

9. Issuer B is an issuer as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). MBC audited the December 31, 2008 financial statements of Issuer B (the "Issuer B audit"). MBC's audit report for the Issuer B audit expressed an unqualified opinion, and stated that the audit was conducted in accordance with PCAOB standards. The audit report stated that Issuer B's financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the company's financial position, results of operations, and cash flows in conformity with GAAP. The audit report was included in Issuer B's annual report filed with the Commission.

10. The report release dates for the 2008 audit of Issuer A, and the 2008 audit of Issuer B, were prior to April 1, 2009.[12/] Therefore, the documentation completion dates for the 2008 audits of Issuers A and B were prior to May 16, 2009.[13/] While information may be added to the work papers after the documentation completion date, the new documentation must disclose the date the information was added, the person preparing the additional documentation, and the reason for adding the information to the work papers after the documentation completion date.[14/]

11. The report release date for the 2009 audit of Issuer A was prior to April 1, 2010. The documentation completion date for that audit was prior to May 16, 2010.

The Board's Inspection

12. On May 22, 2009, the Board notified Mendoza that MBC was going to be inspected. Inspection fieldwork was scheduled to begin on September 21, 2009.

13. On September 11, 2009, the Board notified Mendoza that the 2008 audits of the financial statements of Issuers A and B had been selected for inspection.

[12/] See AS3 ¶ 14 (defining report release date as "date the auditor grants permission to use the auditor's report in connection with the issuance of the company's financial statements").

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

14. After receiving notice of the inspection, Mendoza announced in a Firm-wide meeting that the work papers for the Firm's issuer audits needed to be "cleaned up" prior to the arrival of the Board's inspectors. Mendoza met with the engagement team for the 2008 audit of Issuer A, and directed the staff to make several changes to the audit documentation. Among other things, Mendoza directed the staff to fill out several audit programs that had not been completed at the time of the audit. Mendoza sat beside one engagement team member while that person made several changes to the work papers at Mendoza's direction. Mendoza also directed a staff member to backdate changes to the work papers to the time of the audit.

15. Mendoza also directed the engagement team for the 2008 audit of Issuer B to ensure that the audit documentation for that audit was complete. During the week leading up to the arrival of the Board's inspectors at MBC, members of the 2008 Issuer B engagement team modified the work papers for that audit. Among other things, the engagement team altered and added information to MBC's written analyses in several of the work papers. The engagement team backdated these changes to the work papers to the time of the audit. Before the Board's inspectors arrived at MBC, Mendoza confirmed with one of the staff that the alterations to the documentation for the 2008 audit of Issuer B were complete.

16. These changes and additions to the work papers for the 2008 audits of Issuers A and B were made after the relevant documentation completion dates. The work papers did not indicate the dates of the changes and additions, the identity of the persons making the changes and additions, or the reasons for making the changes and additions.

17. Field work for the Board's inspection began on September 21, 2009. During field work, Mendoza made available to the Board's inspectors the misleading work papers for the 2008 audits of Issuers A and B. At no time did Mendoza advise the inspectors that the work papers had been altered after the relevant documentation completion dates, and in anticipation of the Board's inspection. In fact, Mendoza expressly instructed MBC staff to conceal from the Board's inspectors that changes had been made to the audit documentation.

18. As a result of the conduct described above, Mendoza violated PCAOB Rule 4006 and AS3.

The Board's Investigation

19. On November 18, 2010, as part of an informal inquiry, the Division requested that MBC produce the work papers for the 2008 audits of Issuers A and B, and the 2009 audit of Issuer A (the "Document Request").

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

20. After receipt of the Document Request, Mendoza met with two members of the engagement team for the 2009 audit of Issuer A. At Mendoza's direction, a member of the engagement team modified and added to the work papers for the 2009 audit of Issuer A. Among other things, this engagement team member completed several audit programs that were not completed during the audit. The engagement team member backdated these changes and additions to the work papers, pursuant to Mendoza's instructions.

21. The changes and additions to the work papers for the 2009 audit of Issuer A were made after the documentation completion date. The work papers did not indicate the dates of the changes and additions, the identity of the person making the changes and additions, or the reasons for making these changes and additions.

22. At Mendoza's direction, on or about December 26, 2010 MBC produced to the Division the work papers for the 2008 audits of Issuers A and B, and the 2009 Audit of Issuer A. Mendoza knew that the production included the misleading work papers for the 2008 audits of Issuers A and B. As stated above, Mendoza was aware that MBC staff had altered those documents in advance of a Board inspection. Mendoza also knew that the production to the Division included the misleading work papers for the 2009 audit of Issuer A, which Mendoza directed to be altered after receiving the Document Request. At no time did Mendoza advise the Division of the misleading nature of the work papers produced in response to the Document Request.

23. On February 9, 2011, as part of a formal investigation of the Board, the Division issued an Accounting Board Demand (the "Demand") to MBC for, among other things, the same work papers that were previously sought pursuant to the Document Request. In response to the Demand, and at Mendoza's direction, MBC produced to the Division the same misleading work papers that MBC had produced to the Division in response to the Document Request. At no time did Mendoza advise the Division of the misleading nature of the work papers produced in response to the Demand.

24. As a result of the conduct described above, Mendoza failed to cooperate with a Board investigation, within the meaning of PCAOB Rule 5110, and failed to comply with AS3.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Mendoza's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Henry Mendoza, CPA is hereby censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Henry Mendoza, CPA is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i); and

C. After five (5) years from the date of this Order, Henry Mendoza, CPA may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Jeffrey & Company and Robert G. Jeffrey, CPA, Respondents.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-005 May 6, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring the registered public accounting firm Jeffrey & Company[1/] ("J&C" or the "Firm"), and revoking the Firm's registration;[2/] and censuring Robert G. Jeffrey, CPA ("Jeffrey") and barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[3/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that the Firm and Jeffrey (collectively, "Respondents") repeatedly violated Section 10A(j) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act"), Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, and PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the Firm's audits for three issuer clients.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondents.

[1/] Jeffrey & Company originally registered with the Board and issued audit reports under the name "Robert G. Jeffrey, CPA."

[2/] The Firm may reapply for registration after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

[3/] Jeffrey may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondents have each submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offers") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondents and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondents consent to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[4/]

III.

On the basis of Respondents' Offers, the Board finds[5/] that:

A. Respondents

1. Jeffrey & Company is, and at all relevant times was, a sole proprietorship organized under the laws of the state of New Jersey, and headquartered in Wayne, New Jersey. J&C is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and PCAOB rules. J&C is licensed to practice public accountancy by the New Jersey State Board of Accountancy (license no. 20CB00477200). At all relevant times, the Firm was the external auditor for each of the issuers identified below.

The Board finds that each Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

B. Summary

3. This matter concerns Respondents' repeated violations of Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, and PCAOB rules and auditing standards that require a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons be independent of the firm's audit client throughout the audit and professional engagement period.[6/] As detailed below, Respondents were not independent with respect to two issuer clients because Jeffrey served as the lead audit partner for more than five consecutive years during the audits of the 2008-2009 financial statements of Asia Electrical Power International Group, Inc. ("AEP") and the 2010-2011 financial statements of Amanasu Techno Holdings Corp. ("Amanasu Techno"). In addition, Respondents were not independent with regard to another issuer client because Jeffrey served as the lead audit partner during the audits of the 2010 financial statements of Amanasu Environment Corp. ("Amanasu Environment") within the five consecutive year period following the performance of services as the lead audit partner for the maximum permitted period, and then Jeffrey continued to serve as the lead audit partner on Amanasu Environment's 2011 financial statements.

C. Respondents Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards, Independence Standards and the Exchange Act

4. PCAOB rules and standards require that a registered public accounting firm and its associated persons be independent of the firm's audit client throughout the audit and professional engagement period.[7/] "[A] registered public accounting firm or associated person's independence obligation with respect to an audit client that is an issuer encompasses not only an obligation to satisfy the independence criteria set out in the rules and standards of the PCAOB, but also an obligation to satisfy all other independence criteria applicable to the engagement, including the independence criteria set out in the rules and regulations of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") under the federal securities laws."[8/]

5. Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act provides, "[i]t shall be unlawful for a registered public accounting firm to provide audit services to an issuer if the lead (or coordinating) audit partner (having primary responsibility for the audit), or the audit partner responsible for reviewing the audit, has performed audit services for that issuer in each of the 5 previous fiscal years of that issuer."[9/]

6. Exchange Act Rule 10A-2 provides that it shall be unlawful for an auditor not to be independent with respect to, among other requirements, the partner rotation requirements of the Commission Regulation S-X.[10/]

7. Rule 2-01 of Commission Regulation S-X provides that an accountant is not independent of an audit client when an audit partner performs the services of lead or concurring audit partner for the same issuer for more than five consecutive years or within the five consecutive year period following the performance of services for the maximum period permitted.[11/]

8. In addition, PCAOB rules prohibit an associated person of a registered public accounting firm from "tak[ing] or omit[ting] to take an action knowing, or recklessly not knowing, that the act or omission would directly and substantially contribute to a violation by that registered public accounting firm of the Act, Rules of the Board, the provisions of the securities laws relating to the preparation and issuance of audit reports and the obligations and liabilities of accountants with respect thereto, including the rules of the Commission issued under the Act, or professional standards."[12/]

9. As described below, Respondents failed to comply with Exchange Act Rule 10A-2 and PCAOB rules and standards, the Firm failed to comply with Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, and Jeffrey directly and substantially contributed to the Firm's violations of Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act.

10. At all relevant times, AEP was a Nevada corporation headquartered in the People's Republic of China. AEP's public filings disclose that it was engaged in the business of designing, manufacturing and marketing electrical switchgears, circuit breakers and branch cabinets. Its common stock was registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, AEP was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). On October 20, 2010, following a 1-for-500 reverse stock split, AEP terminated the registration of its securities. The Firm was engaged as AEP's external auditor in 2004.

11. The Firm audited AEP's 2002 through 2007 financial statements over a period of five consecutive fiscal years,[13/] and issued audit reports, which were included in Forms SB-2, SB-2/A, 10KSB and 10-K filed with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on those financial statements. Jeffrey served as the lead audit partner on each of the AEP audit engagements and authorized the issuance of all audit reports during this five year period.

12. After serving as lead audit partner for the aforementioned five year period, Jeffrey continued to serve as the lead audit partner on the audit of AEP's 2008 financial statements in violation of Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, PCAOB Rule 3520 and AU § 220. Jeffrey also authorized the issuance of an audit report that was included in a Form 10-K filed with the Commission, expressing an unqualified opinion on the 2008 financial statements, even though the Firm and Jeffrey were not independent of the client.

13. The Firm continued to be the external auditor for AEP during the audit of its 2009 financial statements. While the Firm designated another auditor from outside the Firm (the "contract partner") as the "lead audit partner" for AEP, Jeffrey continued to perform the services of lead audit partner. Although he knew he was precluded from serving as the lead audit partner on the 2009 audit, Jeffrey: (1) participated in the planning of the audit, (2) travelled to China to supervise assistants performing the fieldwork, (3) performed in-depth reviews of the audit work papers, and (4) provided detailed review notes on that work to the assistants.

14. As a result of Jeffrey's services as described above, the Firm and Jeffrey were not independent during the audit of AEP's 2009 financial statements, in violation of Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, PCAOB Rule 3520 and AU § 220. Although Jeffrey knew he was not permitted to serve as the lead audit partner on that audit, Jeffrey also authorized the issuance of an audit report that was included in a Form 10-K filed with the Commission, expressing an unqualified opinion on the 2009 financial statements, even though the Firm and Jeffrey were not independent of the client.

Audits of Amanasu Techno's Financial Statements

15. At all relevant times, Amanasu Techno was a Nevada corporation headquartered in New York, New York. Amanasu Techno's public filings disclose that it was a development stage company engaged in obtaining licenses to various environmental and other technologies and conducting preliminary marketing efforts. Its common stock is registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, Amanasu Techno was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). The Firm was engaged as Amanasu Techno's external auditor in 2002.

16. The Firm audited Amanasu Techno's 2005 through 2009 financial statements over a period of five consecutive years, and issued audit reports, which were included in Forms 10KSB and 10-K filed with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on those financial statements. Jeffrey served as the lead audit partner for each of the Amanasu Techno engagements and authorized the issuance of all audit reports during this five year period.

17. After serving as the lead audit partner for the aforementioned five year period, Jeffrey continued to serve as the lead audit partner on the audits of Amanasu Techno's 2010 and 2011 financial statements in violation of Section 10A(j) of the Exchange Act, Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, PCAOB Rule 3520 and AU § 220. Jeffrey was aware, prior to performing the audits of the 2010 and 2011 financial statements, that he had already served as the lead audit partner for Amanasu Techno for the maximum five consecutive year period by the conclusion of the 2009 audit. Nevertheless, Jeffrey authorized the issuance of audit reports on the 2010 and 2011 financial statements that were included in Forms 10-K and 10-K/A that Amanasu Techno filed with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on those financial statements, even though the Firm and Jeffrey were not independent of the client.

technology. Its common stock is registered under Section 12(g) of the Exchange Act and is quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board. At all relevant times, Amanasu Environment was an issuer as that term is defined by Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii). The Firm was engaged as Amanasu Environment's external auditor in 2001.

19. The Firm audited Amanasu Environment's 2001 through 2005 financial statements over a period of five consecutive years, and issued audit reports, which were filed in Forms 10KSB with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on those financial statements. Jeffrey served as the lead audit partner for each of the Amanasu Environment engagements and authorized the issuance of all audit reports during this five year period.

20. After Jeffrey served as the lead audit partner for the aforementioned five year period, the Firm designated the contract partner to be the lead audit partner on the audits of Amanasu Environment's 2006 through 2009 financial statements. The Firm issued audit reports on the 2006 through 2009 financial statements, which were included in Forms 10KSB, 10-K and 10-K/A filed with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on those financial statements. In violation of Exchange Act Rule 10A-2, PCAOB Rule 3520 and AU § 220, Jeffrey resumed the role of lead audit partner on the audits of Amanasu Environment's 2010 financial statements within the five consecutive year period following the performance of services as lead audit partner for the maximum permitted period, and then continued to serve as the lead audit partner on the audit of the 2011 financial statements. Jeffrey was aware, prior to performing the audits of the 2010 and 2011 financial statements, that he had not rotated off of the Amanasu Environment audits for the required five consecutive year period prior to resuming the lead audit partner role on those audits. Nevertheless, Jeffrey authorized the issuance of audit reports on the 2010 and 2011 financial statements that were included in Forms 10-K and 10-K/A that Amanasu Environment filed with the Commission, expressing unqualified opinions on those financial statements, even though the Firm and Jeffrey were not independent of the client.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondents' Offers. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Paul W. Marchant, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-006 May 6, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Paul W. Marchant, CPA ("Respondent") and barring him from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm.[1/] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that Respondent violated PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with the improper addition, alteration, and backdating of audit documentation in connection with a Board investigation.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended (the "Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) and (a)(3) against Respondent.

[1/] Marchant may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

II.

In anticipation of institution of these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings, Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[2/]

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[3/] that:

A. Respondent

1. Paul W. Marchant, 68, of Wayne, New Jersey, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of the state of New Jersey (license no. 20CC00588000). At all relevant times, Respondent served as an engagement team member on audits and reviews of issuer financial statements performed by the registered public accounting firm, Jeffrey & Company ("J&C" or the "Firm"), including each audit and review discussed in this Order. For several of those audits and reviews, Respondent served as the sole staff member on the engagement team, reporting directly to the engagement partner. Respondent was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and

---

[2/] The findings herein are made pursuant to the Respondent's Offer and is not binding on any other persons or entities in this or any other proceeding.

[3/] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondent in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

ORDER

PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). During his tenure at the Firm, Respondent was supervised by a partner at the Firm (the "Firm Partner").

B. Summary

2. The Act authorizes the Board to impose disciplinary sanctions for a registered firm's or associated person's noncooperation with a Board investigation.[4/] Board rules include procedures for implementing that authority.[5/] As described below, Respondent altered and created audit documentation related to certain of the Firm's audits prior to providing that documentation to the staff of the Division of Enforcement and Investigations ("Division") during the course of a Board investigation. Respondent also falsely testified in the Board investigation that specific work papers in the audit documentation produced to the Division were created at the time of the relevant audit and prior to the issuance of the relevant audit report, when he knew they were not. In addition, Respondent violated Auditing Standard No. 3, Audit Documentation ("AS3"), by adding documents to the audit documentation after the documentation completion date, without indicating the date the information was added to the work papers, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason for adding it.

C. Respondent Failed to Cooperate with a PCAOB Investigation and Violated PCAOB Rules and Auditing Standards

3. Noncooperation with a Board investigation includes knowingly making any false material declaration or making or using any other information, including any book, paper, document, record, recording, or other material, knowing the same to contain any false material declaration.[6/]

4. PCAOB rules require that registered public accounting firms and their associated persons comply with the Board's auditing and related professional practice standards.[7/] PCAOB standards require that auditors prepare audit documentation in connection with each engagement conducted under PCAOB standards.[8/] Among other things, audit documentation must contain sufficient information to enable an experienced auditor, having no previous connection with the engagement, to "determine who performed the work and the date such work was completed as well as the person who reviewed the work and the date of such review."[9/]

5. PCAOB auditing standards also require that certain written disclosures be included if the auditor adds to the audit documentation after the documentation completion date.[10/] The report release date for an audit is defined as "the date the auditor grants permission to use the auditor's report in connection with the issuance of the company's financial statements."[11/] The documentation completion date is defined as a date not more than 45 days after the report release date.[12/] Audit documentation must not be deleted or discarded after the documentation completion date; however, information may be added.[13/] Any information added must indicate the date the information was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional information, and the reason for adding it.[14/]

6. As detailed below, Respondent failed to cooperate with a Board investigation and violated PCAOB rules and standards when he: (1) improperly altered, created, backdated and added to audit work papers; (2) assisted the Firm in producing these false work papers to the Division; and (3) falsely testified in connection with a Board investigation that these documents represented the Firm's work papers completed during the audit, when he knew they did not.

ORDER

The Audits

7. At all relevant times, "Issuer A" and "Issuer B" were each an "issuer" as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

8. J&C performed the audits of both Issuer A's and Issuer B's financial statements, for the years ended December 31, 2009, 2010, and 2011, and reviews of the quarters ended therein. The Firm's audit reports stated that each of Issuer A's and Issuer B's December 31, 2009, 2010 and 2011 financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the issuer's financial position, results of operations and cash flows in conformity with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles. Each of the audit reports included an unqualified opinion, and was included in a Form 10-K and/or Form 10-K/A filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission").

9. By mid-April 2012, the Firm had released one or more audit reports related to each of Issuer A's and Issuer B's 2009 through 2011 financial statements, and those reports were included in the issuers' Form 10-Ks and Form 10-K/As filed with the Commission. Therefore, the documentation completion date for each of these audits and preceding reviews had occurred by the end of May 2012.

Noncooperation with the Board's Investigation

10. On June 12, 2012, as part of an informal inquiry, the Division requested the production of certain work papers and information concerning certain of the Firm's issuer audit engagements (the "Document Request"), including the Firm's audit documentation for the audits and reviews it performed for the 2009 through 2011 financial statements of Issuer A and Issuer B.

11. On August 13, 2012 and September 12, 2012, as part of a formal investigation, the Division issued Accounting Board Demands ("ABDs") to the Firm and Respondent, respectively. The ABDs requested, among other things, the same audit documentation that was the subject of the Document Request. In response, the Firm referred the Division to the documents it previously produced in response to the Document Request concerning Issuer A.

Respondent's Conduct in the Document Productions

12. Respondent had served as an engagement team member on the audits and reviews of Issuer A's and Issuer B's 2009-2011 financial statements. In the summer of 2012, shortly after receiving the Document Request, the Firm Partner instructed Respondent to review the audit documentation for the Firm's audit of Issuer A's 2009 financial statements, before it was produced to the Division. The Firm Partner directed Respondent to identify any audit work papers that were missing, inaccurate, or that contained the Firm Partner's handwriting.

13. In the course of his review, Respondent showed the Firm Partner several hard copy work papers that the Firm Partner had completed for the audit of Issuer A's 2009 financial statements, including the "Engagement Completion Document," the "Client Information and Business Risk Form," the "Understanding of Internal Control Documentation Form," and the "Fraud Risk Information Form." Each of these documents was originally completed by the Firm Partner and contained the Firm Partner's handwriting. The audit report release date for that audit was prior to June 30, 2010. The documentation completion date, therefore, was prior to August 14, 2010.

14. After Respondent showed the Firm Partner the aforementioned work papers, Respondent made several changes to those work papers to indicate that Respondent, rather than the Firm Partner, had completed that audit work and documentation. Specifically, Respondent erased parts of three of the foregoing documents that the Firm Partner had previously handwritten. Respondent then rewrote the erased portions of these work papers in his own handwriting, and changed the "Completed by" information on each of the work papers to indicate that he had completed the work on a date during the audit, instead of the Firm Partner. For the fourth document, Respondent created a new version, in his own handwriting, to replace the original created by the Firm Partner. On that document as well, Respondent wrote his own name in the "Completed by" section of the work paper, and backdated it to a date during the audit. Respondent added these altered and newly created documents to the audit documentation. However, Respondent did not indicate the date that the work papers were altered or added to the audit documentation, or the reason they were altered or added after the relevant documentation completion date.

15. In July 2012, Respondent also created and added a new trial balance tie-out work paper to the audit documentation for the audit of Issuer A's 2009 financial statements. In doing so, Respondent backdated the new work paper to a date prior to the date of the audit report, and failed to document the reason that he added that work paper to the audit documentation after the relevant documentation completion date.

16. Also in late June 2012 and late October of 2012, the Firm Partner directed Respondent to review the audit documentation for any missing documents in the Firm's work papers for its reviews of Issuer A's and Issuer B's quarterly financial statements conducted in 2009, 2010 and 2011, before that documentation was produced to the Division. Respondent then identified missing audit documentation from those review work papers, and created audit documentation for those reviews. In doing so, Respondent backdated the new audit documentation to dates between 2009 and 2011. These documents were inserted into the work papers prior to their production to the Division. However, Respondent did not indicate the date the new documentation was added, the name of the person who prepared the additional documentation, and the reason that the new documentation was added after the relevant documentation completion dates.

Respondent's Testimony

17. As a result of the foregoing conduct, Respondent knew that the audit documentation related to Issuer A and Issuer B that the Firm produced to the Division in connection with the Board's investigation included altered and newly created audit documentation. Respondent also knew that the altered and newly created documentation was being produced as though it had been part of the original audit documentation, created during the relevant audits and reviews and before the relevant documentation completion dates.

18. In November 2012 investigative testimony before the Division, when asked whether he had made changes to specific work papers in the audit documentation for the audit of Issuer A's 2009 financial statements, Respondent denied making changes to those documents after being made aware of the investigation. Two months later, in investigative testimony before the Division, Respondent admitted that he had altered and added those work papers, as described above, before they were produced to the Division.

19. As a result of the conduct described above, Respondent failed to cooperate with a Board investigation, and Respondent violated AS3, Audit Documentation.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Paul W. Marchant is hereby censured; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(B) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(2), Paul W. Marchant, is barred from being an associated person of a registered public accounting firm, as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i).

ORDER

C. After three (3) years from the date of this Order, Respondent may file a petition, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5302(b), for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Randall A. Stone, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-007 July 7, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is (1) censuring Randall A. Stone, CPA ("Stone"); (2) imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $50,000; and (3) barring Stone from being associated with a registered public accounting firm.[1] The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Stone's violations of PCAOB rules and auditing standards in connection with (1) the audit of the consolidated financial statements of ArthroCare Corporation ("ArthroCare" or "Company") for the fiscal year ended December 31, 2007, and (2) the consent to incorporate by reference the fiscal year 2007 audit report in a Form S-8 Registration Statement filed by ArthroCare with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission" or "SEC") in June 2008.

I.

On December 19, 2012, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings against Stone pursuant to Section 105 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1). These proceedings were not public pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203. The Board determined, under Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public, and the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, Stone did not consent to make the hearing in this proceeding public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Stone has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of this proceeding and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except to the Board's jurisdiction over him, which is admitted, Stone consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[2]

[1] Stone may file a petition for Board consent to associate with a registered public accounting firm after three (3) years from the date of this Order.

III.

On the basis of Stone's Offer, the Board finds that:[3]

A. Respondent

1. Randall A. Stone, age 51, of Austin, Texas, is a certified public accountant licensed under the laws of Texas (license no. 047916). At all relevant times, Stone was a partner in the Austin, Texas office of PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP ("PwC"), a registered public accounting firm, and was an associated person of a registered public accounting firm as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(9) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i). Stone retired from PwC effective June 30, 2014.

B. Summary

2. This matter concerns Stone's failures to comply with PCAOB rules and standards in auditing revenue recognized by ArthroCare and reported in its 2007 financial statements. As the PwC partner in charge of the 2007 ArthroCare audit, Stone ignored or failed to properly evaluate numerous indicators—known to him during the audit—that should have alerted him to the possibility that ArthroCare may have been engaging in fraudulent financial reporting by improperly recognizing revenue on sales to DiscoCare, Inc. ("DiscoCare"), one of its largest distributors. By the time he authorized issuance of PwC's 2007 audit report, Stone was aware of considerable information that individually and collectively should have called into question whether ArthroCare's

[2] The findings herein are made pursuant to Stone's Offer and are not binding on any other persons or entities in this or any other proceeding.

[3] The Board finds that Stone's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of (1) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (2) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

revenue from DiscoCare sales was realized or realizable, and earned, in accordance with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP"), including whether collectibility was reasonably assured. For example, despite appropriately identifying specific fraud risks relating to revenue recognition, Stone ignored repeated indications that DiscoCare may have relied on service fee payments received from ArthroCare to fund its purchases. Nevertheless, he failed to properly test or otherwise assess whether ArthroCare's revenue recognition complied with GAAP. Stone also failed to properly evaluate, using all of the information at his disposal, the business rationale for ArthroCare's significant and unusual sales transactions with DiscoCare. He repeatedly accepted management representations without applying the necessary auditing procedures, evaluating contradictory audit evidence, obtaining sufficient competent audit evidence, and exercising the requisite due care and professional skepticism.

3. This matter also concerns Stone's failure to comply with PCAOB rules and standards in auditing ArthroCare's accounting for its acquisition of DiscoCare on December 31, 2007. Stone failed to exercise due professional care and skepticism by agreeing with the Company's proposed accounting for the acquisition without adequately assessing whether such accounting treatment complied with GAAP. Stone also failed to properly audit management's assertions regarding the existence or occurrence, rights and obligations, and the fair market valuation of the accounts receivable acquired from DiscoCare.

4. Finally, this matter involves Stone's improper authorization of PwC's consent to include the 2007 audit report in ArthroCare's Form S-8 Registration Statement filed with the SEC on June 6, 2008, which registered shares for the Company's employee incentive stock plan. On May 30, 2008, PwC's Office of General Counsel received two anonymous faxes that included allegations of material errors in ArthroCare's current and past financial statements, and forwarded the faxes to Stone. Although many of the allegations were similar to those Stone had learned about during the 2007 audit, the faxes also contained new and more detailed allegations. Stone knew that ArthroCare was assessing these most recent allegations and was in the process of preparing a detailed written response to the allegations for PwC. Before he received ArthroCare's written response or completed a reasonable subsequent facts investigation, Stone improperly authorized PwC's consent to incorporate by reference the 2007 audit report in ArthroCare's Form S-8 filing.

C. Background

5. Stone was the engagement partner on PwC's audits of the consolidated financial statements of ArthroCare for the fiscal years ended December 31, 2005 through 2009. At all relevant times, ArthroCare was a medical device company that developed, manufactured and marketed disposable devices for minimally invasive surgeries, including a device called the SpineWand. At all relevant times, ArthroCare's common stock was registered under Section 12(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and was quoted on the NASDAQ Stock Market. At all relevant times, ArthroCare was an issuer as that term is defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

6. On February 29, 2008, Stone authorized PwC's issuance of a standard audit report expressing an unqualified opinion on ArthroCare's financial statements and internal control over financial reporting for the year ended December 31, 2007. A few months later, on June 6, 2008, he authorized PwC's consent to incorporate by reference that audit report in a Form S-8 Registration Statement filed by ArthroCare with the Commission.

7. On July 21, 2008, as a result of an internal reassessment, ArthroCare filed a Form 8-K with the SEC announcing that it would restate its financial statements for several periods, including the year ended December 31, 2007. The Company disclosed that "[t]he restatement follows a recommendation by management that revenue in these previously issued financial statements should be adjusted because: [among other things,] the relationship between the Company and DiscoCare, Inc. during the periods being restated was a sales agent relationship, rather than that of a traditional distributor…. The Company will therefore account for sales by ArthroCare of products to [DiscoCare] from the third quarter of 2006 to March 31, 2008, under a sell-through revenue recognition method …, as opposed to a sell-in method." The Company also disclosed that "[m]anagement's reassessment of its prior accounting for sales to distributors resulted from discussions initiated by PwC." ArthroCare's common stock closed at $23.21 per share that day, down 42 percent from its Friday, July 18, 2008 closing price of $40.03.

8. On November 18, 2009, following a detailed Audit Committee Review, ArthroCare filed a Form 10-K restating its financial statements for 2007 and other periods. The Review focused on two areas: (1) accounting issues and internal controls and (2) insurance billing and healthcare compliance issues. As disclosed in that Form 10-K: "The Review identified facts indicating that the Company's sales management and certain other senior managers maintained a significant focus on achieving particular revenue growth objectives over time." Further, "a substantial number of the transactions that were … corrected as a result of the restatement were quarter-end transactions and were frequently structured by the Company's sales management to result in revenue being recognized in a particular quarter in order to meet revenue forecasts." ArthroCare also disclosed that "[i]n a majority of the transactions reviewed, sales personnel involved in the transactions at issue, including a former executive officer, did not communicate information and practices bearing on revenue recognition and related matters to the Company's finance personnel, and as a consequence, it appears that the information was not conveyed to the Company's independent registered public accounting firm."

9. The auditing matters at issue in this proceeding concern ArthroCare's transactions with DiscoCare, a privately-held Florida company that was ArthroCare's largest distributor in 2007.

The DiscoCare Agreement

10. Effective November 1, 2006, ArthroCare and DiscoCare entered into a five-year "Consulting, Services and Purchasing Agreement" ("2006 Agreement"), which superseded a 2005 purchasing agreement between the parties. The 2006 Agreement designated DiscoCare as ArthroCare's "exclusive consultant" in the U.S. for collection from third-party payors for surgical procedures using the SpineWand. The then-audit manager sent Stone an email about the new agreement on October 31, 2006, describing it as "a new type of revenue deal for [ArthroCare]."

11. Under the 2006 Agreement, DiscoCare was obligated to pay ArthroCare for SpineWands at varying prices and payment terms depending on case-type. Under the agreement's original terms, the price was $5,750 per unit for personal injury cases; $6,500 for workers compensation cases; $3,000 for private health insurance cases with a "carve out"; and $1,400 per unit for cases with no "carve out."[4] Payment terms were 360 days for personal injury cases and 180 days for all others. Stone understood that these prices were substantially higher than those charged to ArthroCare's other customers, and he knew, or should have known, that these extended payment terms were substantially longer than those offered to ArthroCare's other customers.

12. Stone also knew that the 2006 Agreement obligated ArthroCare to pay a monthly service fee to DiscoCare, purportedly for consulting services, the nature of which was not specified in the agreement. The service fee amounts were based on sales volume and average selling price. Payable within 20 days of each month-end (well in advance of DiscoCare's 180-360 day payment obligations), the service fee was calculated using a formula based on total monthly SpineWand sales to DiscoCare and the average price of SpineWands sold that month. During 2007, the service fee approximated 50 percent of the amounts invoiced to DiscoCare for SpineWands each month. Stone knew that half of the monthly service fee was being applied against the [4] Although not clearly defined in the 2006 Agreement, "carve out" appears to relate to the process for how the products will be reimbursed.

accounts receivable owed by DiscoCare and the other half was being paid to DiscoCare in cash. None of ArthroCare's other distributors had a similar arrangement.

13. Stone understood that under the 2006 Agreement's original terms, (1) ArthroCare would "drop-ship" SpineWands directly to customers (e.g., hospitals, surgical centers, and surgeons) for use in approved surgical procedures; (2) DiscoCare would be invoiced for the products, would be responsible for paying ArthroCare for those products per the terms of the Agreement, and would be assigned the right to collect payments from third-party payors (e.g., from private health insurance providers, workers compensation insurers, and personal injury recoveries) for the products; and (3) DiscoCare would not hold SpineWand inventory or resell SpineWands purchased from ArthroCare.

14. For the 2006 Agreement, ArthroCare management concluded that "revenue will be recorded when the product is shipped to the customer and monthly the service fee paid to DiscoCare will be recorded in operating expenses." Stone concurred in both aspects of the Company's accounting treatment. Management discussed the principal terms of, and the accounting for, the 2006 Agreement with the Audit Committee. A Company-prepared memorandum provided to PwC and the Audit Committee in December 2006 justified expensing the monthly service fee (as opposed to recording it as a reduction in revenue, which GAAP generally requires for consideration given to a customer) based on its conclusion that DiscoCare was not acting in the capacity of a reseller of ArthroCare's products, and therefore not a customer. PwC's work papers concluded that expensing the monthly service fee was appropriate because "an entity cannot be both an agent … and a reseller … in respect to the same transaction."

15. The 2006 Agreement was amended in March 2007 to allow DiscoCare to maintain SpineWand inventory, in lieu of ArthroCare drop-shipping directly to customers. Concurrently, ArthroCare and DiscoCare entered into a bill and hold arrangement by which SpineWands were segregated in a dedicated location in ArthroCare's warehouse facilities, and later shipped on to customers. Stone concurred with ArthroCare recognizing revenue when SpineWands were segregated in ArthroCare's facilities. And when the bill and hold arrangement ended in or about July 2007, Stone also concurred with ArthroCare recognizing revenue when ArthroCare shipped SpineWands to DiscoCare's new warehouse location in Florida.

16. Although DiscoCare was then holding inventory like a reseller, ArthroCare continued to record the service fees as operating expenses (and not as a reduction in revenue), based on the Company's reassessment and renewed conclusion DiscoCare was not acting in the capacity of a reseller. Stone concurred in this accounting treatment.

Surge in DiscoCare-Related Revenue and Receivables in 2007

17. Following the 2006 Agreement, ArthroCare's sales to DiscoCare, and the related receivables, grew rapidly. Sales to DiscoCare represented almost 10 percent of ArthroCare's total reported revenue in 2007, up from 2 percent in 2006. As of December 31, 2007, the accounts receivable from DiscoCare had grown to $26.2 million, or 29 percent of ArthroCare's gross trade accounts receivable balance, compared to only 7 percent at December 31, 2006. Stone knew of these increases through, among other things, his periodic receipt of client-prepared schedules showing DiscoCare's monthly purchases and payments.

ArthroCare's 2007 Public Disclosures Regarding Its Revenue and Earnings Targets

18. Throughout 2007, ArthroCare's press releases routinely included revenue, earnings and other forecasts, and touted the Company's achievement of management and analyst expectations. It was the general practice of Stone and his engagement team to review press releases and other communications made by the Company to the investing public and analysts.

19. At the outset of 2007, for example, ArthroCare publicly disclosed its earnings and performance expectations for the full year. In a February 15, 2007 press release, the Company said it expected "total revenue growth of 20 percent" in 2007, noting that "[s]pine business unit revenue growth is anticipated to be at least 50 percent." The Company also disclosed that its GAAP diluted earnings per share ("EPS") for 2007 was expected to be in the range of $1.40 to $1.50. In addition, ArthroCare disclosed that it "expects further improvement in both product and operating margins and for earnings to continue to grow faster than revenue." Subsequent quarterly earnings releases in 2007 emphasized the Company's strong sales growth, in each instance highlighting increased sales in its spine business unit, which primarily resulted from the increased SpineWand sales to DiscoCare.

20. As disclosed in a press release dated February 19, 2008, ArthroCare met or exceeded the 2007 full-year results it forecast a year earlier. Specifically, full-year revenue increased 21 percent (20 percent was forecast); GAAP diluted EPS was $1.50 (the Company's original $1.40-$1.50 forecast was revised upward to $1.48-$1.50 in October 2007); and spine sales increased 68 percent (at least 50 percent was forecast). The Company also announced that its full-year product margin increased 3 points (from 70 to 73 percent) over 2006. ArthroCare further disclosed that its 2007 fourth quarter revenue grew 25 percent, "exceed[ing] consensus estimates," and its fourth quarter EPS was $0.50, which met its revised fourth quarter guidance of $0.48-$0.50.

ArthroCare Acquired DiscoCare at the End of 2007

21. As of December 31, 2007—the last day of its fiscal year—ArthroCare acquired DiscoCare in a stock purchase transaction. As a result of the acquisition, the 2006 Agreement ended. Through the post-acquisition consolidation of DiscoCare, the acquisition also eliminated the $26.2 million receivable that DiscoCare owed ArthroCare for purchases through December 31, 2007, but not the 2007 revenue recognized by ArthroCare on its pre-acquisition sales to DiscoCare.

Stone Failed to Properly Audit Revenue Recognized from Sales to DiscoCare

28. Stone knew that ArthroCare's recognition of revenue from sales to DiscoCare was material to ArthroCare's 2007 financial statements. The increased sales to DiscoCare helped ArthroCare meet its 2007 revenue forecasts.

29. As disclosed in its public filings, ArthroCare recognized revenue in accordance with SEC Staff Accounting Bulletin No. 104, Revenue Recognition in Financial Statements ("SAB 104").[20] SAB 104 establishes that "revenue should not be recognized until it is realized or realizable and earned," which occurs when all of the following criteria are met: (1) "Persuasive evidence of an arrangement exists," (2) "Delivery has occurred or services have been rendered," (3) "The seller's price to the buyer is fixed or determinable," and (4) "Collectibility is reasonably assured."[21] ArthroCare disclosed that "[g]enerally, the [SAB 104] criteria are met upon shipment of the Company's products."[22]

30. In planning the 2007 audit, Stone and his engagement team identified the following "key risk" relating to revenue recognition: "The Company has undergone a period of rapid sales growth in the last two fiscal years, indicating a risk of improper revenue recognition in order to spur sales and meet performance objectives." In the 2007 audit's fraud risk assessment, Stone and his team identified as a risk of "fraudulent financial reporting … that possibly could result in a material misstatement: Improper recognition of revenue due to fictitious sales recorded by the Company in order to increase net sales…."[23] They also identified the following "specific fraud risks" related to ArthroCare's revenue recognition:

> 3.) Revenues recognized in improper period.

31. To address the identified risks, Stone and his team planned to perform substantive tests of details relating to ArthroCare's revenue recognition during the 2007 audit. A preliminary audit planning work paper reviewed by Stone identified the following tests of details that his team planned to perform in the revenue area: (1) "Revenue – Agree comparative summary totals to the general ledger"; (2) "Evaluate the accounting policy for revenue recognition"; (3) "Test sales/revenue transactions for proper revenue recognition"; and (4) "DiscoCare CM [i.e., Critical Matter[24]] – evaluate revenue recognition and assess collectibility of receivable."

32. In the final version of the same audit work paper, which was also reviewed by Stone, the team added a Critical Matter regarding ArthroCare's accounting and disclosures for the DiscoCare acquisition, but eliminated the DiscoCare Critical Matter on revenue recognition and collectibility. Stone and his team completed the Critical Matter regarding the DiscoCare acquisition, but did not complete a DiscoCare Critical Matter on revenue recognition and collectibility. Nor did they perform any of the planned detailed testing of sales/revenue transactions for proper revenue recognition during the 2007 year-end audit. Instead, PwC's year-end work papers stated that the "engagement team has determined that no detailed testing of Revenue is necessary due to high controls reliance and the rigor of our substantive analytical procedures."

33. Although Stone's engagement team performed sales cut-off testing during the 2007 first and second quarter reviews and certain analytical procedures, these PwC's internal guidance also stated: "Critical matters require appropriate documentation and resolution by the engagement team, timely review and clearance by the engagement leader, and timely review by the quality review partner." procedures were not sufficient to test whether revenue recognized from DiscoCare sales met all SAB 104 criteria. Other than a limited assessment of bill and hold criteria during the 2007 first-quarter review, no other substantive procedures were performed to test or otherwise assess whether revenue recognized by ArthroCare on DiscoCare sales was realized or realizable, and earned in accordance with SAB 104, including whether ArthroCare was reasonably assured of collecting on the sales when revenue was recognized. None of the cut-off testing, the analytical procedures, the controls testing, or any of the other audit procedures provided sufficient competent evidence that ArthroCare had complied with SAB 104 in recognizing revenue on its 2007 sales to DiscoCare.

Indicators of Possible Improper Revenue Recognition Concerning DiscoCare Sales

34. Stone knew or should have known of numerous indicators concerning ArthroCare's arrangement with DiscoCare that highlighted the significant and unusual nature of ArthroCare's transactions with DiscoCare and that should have alerted him to the possibility that ArthroCare may have been improperly recognizing revenue on sales to DiscoCare throughout 2007. Indeed, as described below, beginning in late 2006 and continuing until ArthroCare filed its 2007 Form 10-K, there was an accumulation of evidence indicating possible improper revenue recognition for DiscoCare sales, which was or should have been known to Stone when he authorized issuance of PwC's 2007 audit report.

35. Many of these indicators were evidenced in periodic, client-prepared schedules of activity in ArthroCare's accounts receivable from DiscoCare ("DiscoCare Rollforwards"), which Stone requested and received quarterly beginning in July 2007. All of the DiscoCare Rollforwards included, among other things, monthly totals of invoices issued, payment terms, payments remitted by DiscoCare, and service fee amounts deducted from the DiscoCare accounts receivable balance.

DiscoCare's Past-Due Receivable

36. When the 2006 Agreement was executed, ArthroCare had an unpaid receivable from DiscoCare for earlier SpineWand purchases under the parties' prior agreement, more than half of which was past due. In fact, the 2006 Agreement, which Stone received, specifically referenced DiscoCare's unpaid receivable and permitted

ORDER

ArthroCare to deduct one-half of the service fees due to DiscoCare against it.[25] The DiscoCare Rollforwards that Stone reviewed during the 2007 quarterly reviews and the 2007 audit showed that the amount past due at the inception of the 2006 Agreement was at least $975,000. They also showed that, after May 2006, DiscoCare made no cash payments to ArthroCare for SpineWand purchases until DiscoCare began receiving service fee payments from ArthroCare.

37. Despite this knowledge, Stone failed to properly evaluate DiscoCare's previous inability to timely pay its obligations in concluding that the Company had properly recognized revenue on sales to DiscoCare in 2007.

DiscoCare Was Charged Substantially Higher Prices for SpineWands

38. Stone knew that the prices at which ArthroCare was selling SpineWands to DiscoCare under the 2006 Agreement were up to five times higher than those charged to other customers, and that those prices varied based on the case-type (i.e., private health insurance, personal injury, and workers compensation, respectively) for which the product would be used.[26] Stone reviewed work papers documenting that the prices charged DiscoCare for SpineWands ranged from $3,000 to $7,500 per unit, compared to $1,400 per unit for other distributors. The work papers also described management representations that "ArthroCare's beneficial pricing arrangement is feasible due to several factors," including, among other things, "selective distribution of products to healthcare professionals who can code cases using [ArthroCare] products … which in turn provides physicians with a near 100% level of success in obtaining reimbursement from insurers."

39. Stone improperly relied on management's representations about this purportedly "beneficial pricing arrangement," which the work papers also noted was unique to ArthroCare's agreement with DiscoCare. He failed to apply the necessary auditing procedures, and to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter, to reasonably conclude that ArthroCare had properly recognized revenue in 2007 on sales to [25] Stone was aware that ArthroCare's practice of deducting one-half of the service fee from the DiscoCare outstanding receivable balance continued throughout 2007.

ORDER

DiscoCare at varying prices substantially higher than those charged to other SpineWand purchasers.

Substantially Extended Payment Terms Based on Time Required for DiscoCare to Collect from Third Parties

40. The 2006 Agreement provided DiscoCare with extended payment terms ranging from 180 to 360 days, which were up to three times longer than the 120-day terms for DiscoCare's previous SpineWand purchases, and up to twelve times longer than ArthroCare's standard 30-day terms. Stone was aware of DiscoCare's extended payment terms under the 2006 Agreement. In addition, he knew that the overwhelming majority (72 percent) of DiscoCare SpineWand sales under the 2006 Agreement were at the longest (i.e., 360 days) of these extended payment terms.

41. As reflected in the 2007 work papers, ArthroCare's management told Stone and his team that the "collection risk [on DiscoCare's accounts receivable] is low" because (1) a sale is booked when a surgery has already been approved, (2) the extended payment terms are based on the time required for DiscoCare to collect payment, (3) DiscoCare has been paying ahead of schedule, and (4) ArthroCare would be renegotiating with DiscoCare to shorten the payment terms in hopes of lowering DiscoCare's percent of the accounts receivable balance.

42. Thus, Stone knew from management that the extended payment terms were based on "the time required for DiscoCare to collect payment from the insurance companies." Despite this knowledge, Stone failed to properly evaluate whether DiscoCare's ability to meet its obligations to ArthroCare was contingent on its ability to collect reimbursement from third-party payors. Instead, Stone relied on management's representations concerning the purportedly low collection risk, without applying the necessary auditing procedures, and obtaining sufficient competent evidential matter, to conclude that ArthroCare's sales to DiscoCare were reasonably assured of collection at the time revenue was recognized.

DiscoCare Bill and Hold Arrangement and the Change to Recognizing Revenue on Shipment to DiscoCare

43. ArthroCare's original accounting for the 2006 Agreement was, in part, premised on SpineWands being drop-shipped by ArthroCare directly to customers and DiscoCare not holding inventory or reselling products. Stone knew that a March 2007 amendment to the 2006 Agreement changed this arrangement to allow DiscoCare to regularly purchase SpineWands for inventory in advance of approved surgeries. He further knew that ArthroCare and DiscoCare had simultaneously entered into a bill and hold arrangement by which, according to a work paper reviewed by Stone, "ArthroCare has agreed to temporarily allow DiscoCare the use of [ArthroCare's] warehousing facilities, under an inventory segregation system," which would permit ArthroCare to recognize revenue upon segregation.

44. As explained in a client-provided memo reviewed by Stone, DiscoCare was negotiating a contract with a third party to provide it with warehousing and shipping services, purportedly to ensure that it had a constant supply of SpineWands. The memo stated that, given the time needed to finalize this arrangement, "DiscoCare has approached ArthroCare about storing their products temporarily in ArthroCare's [warehouse] space." A presentation Stone gave to the Audit Committee showed that ArthroCare's first quarter revenue from bill and hold transactions was $2.9 million. Work papers reviewed by Stone evidenced that this revenue was all recorded in the last 12 days of the first quarter.

45. Stone knew that the bill and hold arrangement remained in place at the end of the 2007 second quarter, at which time ArthroCare still had approximately $2.5 million of segregated DiscoCare bill and hold inventory. He further knew that the bill and hold arrangement ended shortly after the close of the 2007 second quarter, when DiscoCare had established its own warehouse space in Florida to which the remaining bill and hold inventory was shipped and where it then maintained SpineWand inventory. Stone and the engagement team performed substantive testing related to the bill and hold arrangement as part of the first quarter interim review.

46. SAB 104 provides that, in order to recognize revenue from bill and hold transactions, "[t]he buyer must have a substantial business purpose for ordering the goods on a bill and hold basis."[27] PwC's bill and hold work papers document management's representation that DiscoCare had requested the bill and hold to avoid SpineWand supply disruptions. Other work papers also document that ArthroCare's production facility had a one-week holiday shutdown in January 2007 and did not reach full production until the end of that month, but neither set of work papers documented that DiscoCare was aware of the shutdown or that the shutdown had affected supply of SpineWands to DiscoCare. Stone relied on management's representation, without applying the necessary auditing procedures and obtaining sufficient competent evidence at year end to reasonably conclude that recognizing revenue under the arrangement complied with SAB 104. Nor did he properly evaluate whether the business rationale for the bill and hold arrangement suggested that the arrangement may have been entered into to engage in fraudulent financial reporting.

47. Stone knew about, and concurred in, ArthroCare's decision to recognize revenue on bill and hold sales when the products were transferred to a segregated area of ArthroCare's warehouse facilities, as opposed to when drop-shipped by ArthroCare to customers. After the bill and hold ended, Stone knew about, and concurred in, ArthroCare's decision to similarly recognize revenue when SpineWands were shipped to DiscoCare's Florida warehouse. Other than an assessment of the bill and hold criteria, ArthroCare provided no analysis supporting its revenue recognition conclusions, and Stone and his engagement team did not obtain sufficient competent evidence to support, or independently assess, such conclusions.

ArthroCare's Contradictory Treatment of DiscoCare as a Reseller for Revenue Recognition Purposes, But as an Agent for Purposes of Service Fee Accounting

48. In October 2006, shortly before the 2006 Agreement became effective, ArthroCare provided Stone and the engagement team with a draft memo analyzing the service fee arrangement under EITF 01-09, Accounting for Consideration Given by a Vendor to a Customer (Including a Reseller of the Vendor's Products), and concluding that the service fees to be paid to DiscoCare should be recorded as operating expenses, and not as reductions to revenue. After independently researching the issue, Stone and the engagement team concluded that if DiscoCare were a net-reporting entity under EITF 99-19, Reporting Revenue Gross as a Principal versus Net as an Agent, then DiscoCare would not be acting as a reseller; thus, the service fee arrangement would be outside the scope of EITF 01-09, and the service fees should be treated as an expense. After Stone and the engagement team discussed this with management, ArthroCare updated its memo in November 2006 to include an analysis under EITF 99-19, which determined that DiscoCare was a net-reporting entity and, therefore, not a reseller of ArthroCare's products (i.e., DiscoCare was effectively ArthroCare's agent), and concluded that "revenue will be recorded when the product is shipped to the customer and monthly the service fee paid to DiscoCare will be recorded in operating expenses." Stone and the engagement team concurred in that conclusion.

49. Under the 2006 Agreement's original terms, DiscoCare did not hold inventory, DiscoCare was precluded from reselling products bought from ArthroCare, and ArthroCare recognized revenue when SpineWands were drop-shipped directly to end-user customers for use in surgical procedures. That arrangement changed when the 2006 Agreement was amended beginning in March 2007. From that point on, DiscoCare began holding inventory like a reseller, and instead of recognizing revenue upon drop-shipment to a customer, ArthroCare recognized revenue when SpineWands were segregated in ArthroCare's warehouse facilities during the bill and hold arrangement, and when SpineWands were shipped to DiscoCare's warehouse after the bill and hold ended. ArthroCare re-assessed its analysis of the service fee arrangement in light of the 2007 amendments, and determined that DiscoCare's decision to hold inventory did not affect the conclusion that DiscoCare was a net-reporting entity under EITF 99-19, and therefore, "not acting in the capacity of a reseller," and that the service fees should continue to be recorded in operating expenses. Stone and the engagement team reviewed and concurred with these accounting decisions.

50. The practical impact of this accounting treatment was that ArthroCare recognized revenue at the earliest possible time (when product was shipped to DiscoCare or segregated in ArthroCare's warehouse) and at the maximum possible amount (at full invoice price with no reduction in revenue for the service fees). Stone concurred with ArthroCare's accounting conclusions without adequately evaluating or reconciling these accounting conclusions for elements in the same arrangement (i.e., how ArthroCare could simultaneously (1) recognize revenue under SAB 104 as if DiscoCare was a reseller, and (2) account for ArthroCare's service fee payments based on management's conclusion that DiscoCare was an agent for the same transactions).

ArthroCare's Involvement in Determining the Quantity and Price/Type of Products to be Ordered by DiscoCare

51. During the 2007 second quarter field work, Stone and members of his engagement team met with ArthroCare's account manager for DiscoCare (the "ArthroCare Account Manager") and other Company personnel "to follow up on any changes with the Company's DiscoCare procedures as well as [to] formally document[] the ordering and recording process." A memo summarizing the meeting, which was included in work papers reviewed by Stone, noted, among other things, that (1) the ArthroCare Account Manager had "access to review" a DiscoCare-maintained database of patient candidates for surgery (known as "Case Tracker"); (2) DiscoCare contacted insurance companies and pre-approved surgeries based on the patients in the database; (3) the database was updated once surgeries were approved; (4) the ArthroCare Account Manager used a formula based on approved surgeries to calculate how many products DiscoCare needed to order, and at what prices (depending on case-type); and (5) the ArthroCare Account Manager would send that calculation to DiscoCare "who in turn places an order with ArthroCare."

52. Because DiscoCare's monthly purchases purportedly were based on data found in Case Tracker, access to the database by the ArthroCare Account Manager or other ArthroCare employees gave rise to a risk of fraud. By manipulating data in Case Tracker, for example, ArthroCare could have caused DiscoCare to improperly increase its monthly SpineWand purchases to meet ArthroCare's revenue forecasts (a fraud risk identified by Stone). Despite this risk of fraud, Stone never properly assessed the ArthroCare Account Manager's or other ArthroCare employees' access to Case Tracker, or what internal controls, if any, ArthroCare had in place to mitigate this fraud risk.

ORDER

Although Stone identified specific fraud risks concerning revenue recognition in improper periods and management pressure to meet internal and analyst expectations, he failed to properly evaluate ArthroCare's involvement in DiscoCare's product ordering process.

Pattern of Quarter-End Spikes in DiscoCare Sales

53. Stone knew about significant spikes in sales to DiscoCare at or near the end of fiscal quarters. For example, a second quarter work paper reviewed by Stone observed that "PwC … noted a spike in [DiscoCare] sales at the end of each quarter (Q1 and Q2 '07)." DiscoCare Rollforwards seen by Stone during 2007 quarterly reviews showed a clear pattern of spikes in DiscoCare sales in the last month of fiscal quarters, a pattern that began even before the 2006 Agreement. From the adoption of the 2006 Agreement through the end of the third quarter of 2007, these schedules showed that sales in quarter-end months averaged $3.3 million, while sales in non-quarter-end months averaged $900,000.

54. Moreover, Stone was aware of the substantially increased volume of SpineWand shipments to DiscoCare near year-end 2007, shortly before ArthroCare acquired DiscoCare. Based on a DiscoCare Rollforward sent to Stone during the 2007 audit, fourth quarter SpineWand sales to DiscoCare totaled nearly $6.5 million, with $4.4 million occurring in December 2007 alone. This year-end spike, along with previous quarter-end spikes, raised a question of whether ArthroCare was using end-of-period DiscoCare sales to meet its revenue forecasts (a fraud risk factor identified by Stone).

55. Stone and his engagement team attributed the sales spike at the end of the first quarter to the "start of the bill and hold agreement," and later accepted certain representations from management about the spike at the end of the second quarter. Although they monitored the monthly and quarterly sales thereafter, Stone and his team failed to properly evaluate the impact of quarter-end sales spikes in concluding that the Company had properly recognized revenue on sales to DiscoCare in 2007.

Evidence Suggesting That ArthroCare Was Funding DiscoCare's SpineWand Purchases through the Service Fees

56. The first DiscoCare Rollforward, received and reviewed by Stone in July 2007, showed that from the inception of the 2006 Agreement in November 2006 through June 2007, DiscoCare paid ArthroCare a total of $1.6 million for SpineWand purchases. The schedule also showed that ArthroCare deducted a total of $2.1 million in service fees from the DiscoCare accounts receivable balance during that same period. As Stone knew from the terms of the 2006 Agreement, however, that $2.1 million

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

represented just half of the monthly service fee; the other half (another $2.1 million) was paid in cash directly to DiscoCare. Thus, the schedule provided information indicating that the cash half of the service fees paid to DiscoCare was $500,000 more than ArthroCare received back as payment against the DiscoCare receivable for sales under the 2006 Agreement. A later DiscoCare Rollforward showing activity through the end of September likewise indicated that the cash half of the service fees paid to DiscoCare was more than ArthroCare received back as payment against its receivables for sales under the 2006 Agreement.

57. During the year-end audit, Stone reviewed another DiscoCare Rollforward reflecting activity through December 2007. This schedule provided information indicating that DiscoCare's payments to ArthroCare exceeded the service fee cash payments it received from ArthroCare through year-end. However, Stone knew that, under the terms of the December 31, 2007 DiscoCare acquisition, ArthroCare was required to make a final service fee payment of $2.2 million related to the $4.4 million of SpineWands purchased by DiscoCare in December. As a result, during the audit, Stone possessed information indicating that the cumulative amount of service fees paid in cash by ArthroCare exceeded the total payments made in cash by DiscoCare for SpineWand purchases under both the 2006 Agreement and the parties' earlier agreement.

58. In addition, during the audit, Stone reviewed PwC work papers relating to the DiscoCare acquisition, which showed that, on average, DiscoCare had collected less in third-party reimbursement for the SpineWands than the invoice amounts charged it by ArthroCare. Thus, DiscoCare's history of collections suggested that it lost money on the SpineWands it purchased and resold, and relied on the service fee payments to earn a profit under the 2006 Agreement.[28]

59. This evidence suggested that the service fees ArthroCare paid to DiscoCare—in the form of both direct cash payments and amounts deducted from DiscoCare's receivables balance—may have been funding DiscoCare's obligations to ArthroCare. This evidence—together with other evidence Stone possessed—highlighted the significant and unusual nature of ArthroCare's 2007 selling arrangement with DiscoCare. In light of such evidence, Stone was required to gain an understanding of the business rationale for this arrangement and "whether that rationale (or the lack thereof) suggest[ed] that the [arrangement] may have been entered into to engage in fraudulent financial reporting."[29]

60. Stone failed to reasonably evaluate that business rationale as required by PCAOB standards. Among other things, he failed to properly consider whether DiscoCare had "the substance or the financial strength to support the transaction[s] without [ArthroCare's] assistance," and whether the accounting for the selling arrangement reflected its underlying economic substance.[30] In addition, Stone relied on management representations instead of applying the procedures necessary to properly evaluate the nature of the consulting services that DiscoCare purportedly provided to ArthroCare in exchange for the service fees, and the value received by ArthroCare for such services.

Allegations by Short Sellers and ArthroCare's Chief Medical Officer Concerning DiscoCare

61. Stone learned no later than early December 2007 that allegations of potential wrongdoing were being made against ArthroCare by short sellers, which focused on the Company's relationship with DiscoCare. These allegations intensified after ArthroCare's acquisition of DiscoCare became public in early January 2008.

62. In response, Stone's engagement team obtained representations that ArthroCare's management had "reviewed the relationships and is confident that their relationships with the doctors[’] offices are legal and that these allegations are without merit" and that management was "not aware of any illegal activity." After speaking during the 2007 audit with PwC's local Regional Risk Management Partner about the "short-attack on ArthroCare," Stone told the Quality Review Partner on the engagement that there were "no further actions for our team to take at the present." In connection with the 2007 audit, Stone accepted management's representations regarding the short seller allegations, ultimately concluding that they did not appear to have merit. Neither Stone nor his team performed any additional procedures to specifically respond to the short seller allegations, and, at the completion of the audit, they concluded that "[n]o additional procedures are necessary based on the accumulated results of our auditing procedures."

ORDER

63. On the day before the 2007 audit opinion was issued, Stone became aware that ArthroCare's Chief Medical Officer ("CMO") had resigned because of his "serious concerns about the potential risks posed by the company's growing association with DiscoCare," and because "the DiscoCare model, and the company's increasing reliance on that model, present serious opportunities for abuse by unethical or uninformed individuals." The CMO further stated: "Should such abuse occur, [ArthroCare] could find itself faced with potentially serious allegations of insurance or other fraud."

64. In response to the short seller and CMO allegations, Stone got certain representations from ArthroCare's management, the Audit Committee chair, and outside counsel. But he failed to apply the necessary auditing procedures, and failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter, to provide reasonable assurance that the 2007 DiscoCare-related revenue was recognized in compliance with SAB 104.

Stone Failed to Perform Sufficient Audit Procedures Concerning ArthroCare's Accounting for the DiscoCare Acquisition

65. ArthroCare acquired DiscoCare in a stock purchase transaction that closed as of December 31, 2007. Under the acquisition terms, ArthroCare purchased all of the outstanding common stock of DiscoCare for $25 million in cash, plus potential future earn out payments.

Accounting for Settlement of the Pre-Existing Arrangement

66. ArthroCare evaluated the DiscoCare acquisition under EITF 04-01, Accounting for Preexisting Relationships Between the Parties to a Business Combination, and concluded that it was not required to record any gain or loss for settlement of the 2006 Agreement. The Company therefore allocated the entire purchase price first to the purported fair market value of the acquired net assets, with the remainder recorded as goodwill.

67. To support its accounting conclusion, ArthroCare prepared a February 2008 memo stating that there was no direct evidence of an "off-market component" related to the 2006 Agreement and that all "indirect evidence" pointed toward the contract being at market value. The indirect evidence cited by the Company included management's belief that, if the 2006 Agreement were up for renewal at the time of the acquisition, "the prices and other significant terms would remain unmodified from the terms of the current contract." However, this representation was contradicted by an earlier management representation that ArthroCare "will be renegotiating with DiscoCare to lower the timing of the payment terms in hopes of lowering DiscoCare's [accounts receivable balance]," which was included in 2007 second and third quarter work papers that Stone reviewed. Further, Stone reviewed other PwC work papers concerning the DiscoCare acquisition that showed that DiscoCare was collecting, on average, less than what ArthroCare was charging DiscoCare for each SpineWand, which should have caused Stone to question management's representation that there was no direct evidence of an off-market component in the 2006 Agreement.

Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

68. Stone knew that the 2006 Agreement contained a provision requiring ArthroCare to pay DiscoCare $25 million upon early termination—the same amount as the up-front $25 million cash portion of the acquisition fee. Despite his knowledge of the early-termination fee and evidence that should have caused him to question management representations regarding settlement of the 2006 Agreement, Stone agreed with the Company's decision not to record any gain or loss for settlement of the 2006 Agreement, without adequately assessing whether such accounting treatment complied with GAAP.

Receivables Acquired From DiscoCare

69. Based on the fair values estimated by management, one of the most significant tangible assets acquired by ArthroCare was DiscoCare's accounts receivable, which represented DiscoCare's claims for reimbursement from third party payors for SpineWands used in surgical procedures. ArthroCare valued the acquired receivables at $10.9 million. In auditing the acquired receivables, Stone and his engagement team concluded that confirmations would be ineffective because DiscoCare's receivables were primarily owed by insurance companies. Instead, Stone's team decided to test, based on PwC's sampling guidance, a sample of 19 receivables in an effort "[t]o gain comfort over the existence/occurrence and rights/obligations of DiscoCare's [a]ccounts [r]eceivable balance at year end." Through this testing, Stone and his team sought to validate not only that medical procedures took place, but also that the "company's supporting documentation used to submit collections from the insurance companies is adequate to support the balance."

70. At Stone's request, his then-audit manager sought the assistance of a PwC subject-matter expert "with healthcare compliance expertise to assist the audit team in the review of [DiscoCare] receivables files." A director in PwC's healthcare advisory practice, who "specialize[d] in health care and insurance collections" ("HC Specialist"), was selected to assist Stone and his team in validating the supporting documents for insurance collection, because the "engagement team did not have the benefit of extensive industry expertise" to do so. The HC Specialist's assistance was also sought because "[t]here ha[d] been some recent scrutiny by certain analysts into the company's practices that we believe warrants an increased level of audit procedures on our end."

ORDER

71. The HC Specialist reviewed patient file documentation provided to him by ArthroCare for the 19 sampled receivables. In a memo provided to Stone and included in the work papers, the HC Specialist noted: "Overall, there was a lack of consistency in the documentation provided to review the accounts. The lack of consistency was also noted in many data fields that were not populated in the screen shots of the DiscoCare Case Tracker." The HC Specialist also observed that, although he was told by ArthroCare staff that pre-authorizations were required before processing cases involving commercial payors, he found no evidence that pre-authorizations had been obtained. The HC Specialist similarly noted, based on his experience in the healthcare field, that pre-authorizations were required in workers' compensation cases; however, he located no such pre-authorizations in the workers' compensation cases he reviewed. In addition, he found a patient-executed assignment of benefits in only one of the ten cases in which DiscoCare purportedly took such an assignment.

72. The HC Specialist recommended that additional efforts "be made to assess the activity associated with DiscoCare's account follow-up procedures," including that ArthroCare should determine the legal effect of the letters of protection used in connection with personal injury and some auto insurance claims; he noted, based on his experience, that liens are typically filed in the relevant courts to protect the claimant's financial exposure in such cases. The HC Specialist provided no conclusion, based on records and data available to him or otherwise, that the acquired accounts receivable were collectible.

73. After receiving the HC Specialist's memo, Stone knew that his engagement team sought to obtain operative reports evidencing that surgical procedures had, in fact, been performed for each of the 19 sampled receivables. The engagement team obtained such operative reports or alternative documentation for each.[31] The work paper summarizing the engagement team's testing, which was reviewed by Stone, noted that "[a]s a result of testing, all A/R balances selected were verified without exception." However, as Stone knew, the HC Specialist identified numerous exceptions in the documentation supporting the sampled receivables. Stone also knew, or should have known, that neither the HC Specialist's nor the engagement team's work constituted sufficient competent evidence to support the rights and [31] As Stone knew, in the four instances where such operative reports were not available, his engagement team obtained either a signed statement from a sales representative who purportedly witnessed the surgery (two instances), or a copy of the UPC code from the box that contained the SpineWand purportedly used in the procedure together with the date the procedures were performed and the names of the patients (two instances).

obligations assertions for those receivables, or to support their collectibility. Moreover, Stone knew, or should have known, that the operative reports and alternative documentation did not constitute sufficient competent evidence to support all of the financial statement assertions for those receivables, or to support their collectibility, particularly in light of the numerous exceptions noted by the HC Specialist.

74. The HC Specialist's findings also cast doubt on certain management representations made to Stone and his team. ArthroCare management told Stone and his team that Case Tracker was used by the ArthroCare Account Manager to determine the number of SpineWands to be ordered each month by DiscoCare, based on approved surgical cases that were recorded and tracked in the database. Management also represented that a SpineWand sale was booked only after a surgery had been approved. But the HC Specialist found missing Case Tracker data, missing surgery pre-authorizations, and other significant document deficiencies and inconsistencies for most of the 19 sampled receivables he reviewed. Stone did not assess the inconsistency between the HC Specialist's findings and management's representations, nor did he assess the impact of the HC Specialist's findings on ArthroCare's conclusion that revenue it recognized from sales to DiscoCare in 2007 met all SAB 104 criteria, including reasonable assurance of collectibility.

75. In estimating the fair market value of the acquired receivables, ArthroCare determined DiscoCare's average historical collection amounts by case-type of receivables and applied those amounts by case-type to calculate the fair value of the acquired receivables. Stone and his engagement team failed to consider the impact of the HC Specialist's findings on the Company's fair value determinations. Specifically, Stone and his team failed to assess whether the acquired receivables differed from the historical receivables in terms of documentation supporting collectibility, including evidence of pre-authorizations and benefit assignments.

76. Additionally, in determining historical collection amounts, management excluded unpaid receivables owed to DiscoCare by third-party payors that were older than 360 days at the time of acquisition. Although management represented that those receivables were not acquired by ArthroCare, Stone and his engagement team did not properly consider the impact, if any, of their exclusion on the fair value determinations.

E. Stone Failed to Conduct a Reasonable Subsequent Events Investigation Before Consenting to Incorporate PwC's 2007 Audit Report in ArthroCare's June 6, 2008 Form S-8 Registration Statement

77. On June 6, 2008, ArthroCare filed a Form S-8 Registration Statement with the SEC under which the Company registered 1.2 million shares of its common stock for offer and sale under its Amended and Restated 2003 Incentive Stock Plan. The Form S-8, made under the Securities Act of 1933, became effective upon its filing. ArthroCare's Form S-8 included PwC's consent to incorporate by reference PwC's February 29, 2008 audit report relating to ArthroCare's 2007 financial statements ("PwC Consent"). In his capacity as the ArthroCare engagement partner, Stone authorized issuance of the PwC Consent on June 6, 2008.

78. PCAOB standards provide that "[w]hen an independent accountant's report is included in registration statements … filed under the federal securities statutes, the accountant's responsibility, generally, is in substance no different from that involved in other types of reporting."[32] Under PCAOB standards, Stone was required to complete a "reasonable investigation" sufficient for him to have a "reasonable ground to believe" that the statements in PwC's 2007 audit report remained true.[33] Stone had to "extend his procedures with respect to subsequent events from the [February 29, 2008] date of his audit report up to the effective date [of the Form S-8] or as close thereto as is reasonable and practicable in the circumstances."[34]

79. If, while performing such subsequent event procedures (or otherwise), the auditor "becomes aware that facts may have existed at the date of his report that might have affected his report had he then been aware of those facts, he should follow the guidance in [AU §§] 560 and 561,"[35] which provides in pertinent part:

> When the auditor becomes aware of information which relates to financial statements previously reported on by him, but which was not known to him at the date of his report, and which is of such a nature and from such a source that he would have investigated it had it come to his attention during the course of his audit, he should, as soon as practicable, undertake to determine whether the information is reliable and whether the facts existed at the date of his report.[36]

ORDER

80. Stone became aware no later than May 29, 2008 of ArthroCare's intention to file the Form S-8. At the time, Stone understood that a national securities exchange inquiry concerning ArthroCare's relationship with DiscoCare had closed without action based on information provided to the exchange by ArthroCare, and that the Audit Committee had received a report from an outside health care attorney who had examined DiscoCare's business model and found nothing improper in the model. On May 30, 2008, PwC, including Stone, received two anonymous faxes ("May 30th Faxes") containing allegations similar to those Stone learned of and discussed with senior ArthroCare management during the 2007 audit; namely, allegations that DiscoCare's relationships with ArthroCare, insurance carriers, and others were improper. The May 30th Faxes also contained new allegations, including that ArthroCare had purchased DiscoCare because of the rising DiscoCare receivable and ArthroCare's belief that the receivable was not collectible, and that ArthroCare had engaged in "channel stuffing" relating to pre-acquisition sales to a European company acquired by ArthroCare in the second quarter of 2008. The next business day, Stone brought the May 30th Faxes to the attention of ArthroCare's Chief Financial Officer, General Counsel, and Audit Committee Chair.

81. On June 5, 2008, Stone learned that the sender of the May 30th Faxes had spoken by phone that day with an attorney in PwC's Office of General Counsel, and had identified himself as a short seller of ArthroCare's common stock. Also on June 5, 2008, PwC, including Stone, received a third fax from the short seller. The information in the third fax and the phone call (collectively, "June 5th Communications") contained additional details regarding the allegations, including the name of a former ArthroCare employee who allegedly had personal knowledge of certain alleged misconduct. Stone conferred on these matters with the Company's management and counsel, and his Quality Review and National Risk Management Partners, among others.

82. After he conferred regarding the Form S-8 with PwC's National Risk Management Partner, Stone authorized issuance of the PwC Consent on June 6, 2008. When he did so, he was aware of allegations concerning a potential material misstatement of ArthroCare's 2007 financial statements and he knew that management was continuing to assess the allegations. While he had spoken with the Company's management and counsel about the allegations, he was still awaiting management's detailed written response to the allegations in the May 30th Faxes, which he had requested and which he did not receive until the next day. All of this was confirmed in an email he sent to his Quality Review Partner shortly after the Form S-8 was filed, in which he articulated his awareness of the ongoing nature of the inquiries, by both ArthroCare and PwC, concerning the allegations in the May 30th Faxes and the June 5th Communications.[37] In authorizing the PwC Consent on June 6, Stone failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter, failed to exercise the requisite due professional care and professional skepticism, and failed to conduct a reasonable subsequent events investigation sufficient to give him reasonable assurance that ArthroCare's 2007 financial statements were free of misstatement.

83. On July 21, 2008, six weeks after Stone authorized issuance of the PwC Consent, ArthroCare publicly announced that its financial statements for 2007, as well as other periods, could no longer be relied upon and would be restated.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Stone's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

D. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $50,000 payable by Randall A. Stone is imposed. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Randall A. Stone shall pay this civil money

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of BeachFleischman PC, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-008 November 4, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring BeachFleischman PC ("Respondent" or "BeachFleischman") and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report in 2013 and 2014 and timely pay an annual fee in 2013 and 2014.

I.

On September 10, 2014, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") (as amended) and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, BeachFleischman did not file an answer indicating the firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1] that:

A. Respondent

1. BeachFleischman is a professional corporation located in Tucson, Arizona. BeachFleischman is licensed by the Arizona State Board of Accountancy to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. 770). The firm registered with the Board on August 16, 2011, pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, BeachFleischman failed to timely file an annual report for 2013 and 2014.

3. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, BeachFleischman failed to timely pay its annual fee in 2013 and 2014.

C. Subsequent Events

4. The Board instituted these proceedings on September 10, 2014. BeachFleischman failed to file an answer pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5421(b).

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Reginald G. Campos, CPA, P.C., Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-009 November 4, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") censuring Reginald G. Campos, CPA, P.C. ("Respondent" or "Campos") and revoking Respondent's registration. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report and timely pay an annual fee in 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014.

I.

On September 10, 2014, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") (as amended) and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, Respondent did not file an answer indicating the firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1] that:[2]

A. Respondent

1. Reginald G. Campos, CPA, P.C. is a professional corporation located in Hurricane, Utah. The firm registered with the Board on May 10, 2005, pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules. Campos was licensed by the Utah Division of Occupational and Professional Licensing to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. 5651733-2603), but such license expired on September 30, 2008. A search of public records indicates that the firm has not issued any audit reports or broker-dealer certifications since registering with the Board.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, Campos failed to timely file an annual report for 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014.

3. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, Campos failed to pay its annual fee in 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014.

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2] The Board finds that Campos' conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of (1) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (2) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

C. Subsequent Events

4. The Board instituted these proceedings on September 10, 2014.

5. On September 28, 2014, Campos filed its annual reports for 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014.

6. To date, Campos has not paid its annual fee for 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Campos is censured; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Campos is revoked.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Carney, Delplato LLC, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-010 November 4, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Carney, Delplato LLC, ("Respondent") and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $3,000. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report and timely pay an annual fee in 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014.

I.

On September 10, 2014, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") (as amended) and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, Respondent did not file an answer indicating the firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1] that:

A. Respondent

1. Carney, Delplato LLC is a limited liability corporation located in West Orange, New Jersey. The firm was licensed by the New Jersey State Board of Accountancy to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. 20CB00349900), but such license expired June 30, 2012 (under the name "Snare, Foti & Delplato LLP"). The firm registered with the Board on January 27, 2004, pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, Respondent failed to timely file an annual report for 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014.

3. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, Respondent failed to timely pay its annual fee in 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014.

C. Subsequent Events

1. The Board instituted these proceedings on September 10, 2014.

2. On September 29, 2014, Respondent paid its annual fees for 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013 and 2014.

3. On September 30, 2014, Respondent filed its annual reports for 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014.

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

4. On September 29, 2014, Respondent filed a Form 1-WD to request leave to withdraw its registration from the Board.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Respondent, Carney, Delplato LLC, is censured; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act, and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $3,000 is imposed upon Respondent. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Respondent shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer pursuant to instructions provided by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter, which identifies Carney, Delplato, LLC as Respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover letter and money order or check shall be sent to Office of the Secretary, Attention: Phoebe W. Brown, Secretary, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

V.

Upon performance by Respondent of Part IV above, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 2107, the Board shall consider Respondent's Form 1-WD and whether to grant it leave to withdraw. In doing so, the Board shall not take into consideration its findings contained in Part III herein.

ISSUED BY THE BOARD.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Appelrouth, Farah & Co., P.A., Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-011 December 8, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Appelrouth, Farah & Co., P.A. ("Respondent" or "Appelrouth"); temporarily suspending Respondent's registration for a period of one year from the date of the issuance of this Order, and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report in 2013 and 2014.

I.

On September 10, 2014, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") (as amended) and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, Appelrouth did not file an answer indicating the firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1] that:[2]

A. Respondent

1. Appelrouth is a corporation located in Coral Gables, Florida. Appelrouth is licensed by the Florida Department of Business & Professional Regulation to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. AD0016486). The firm registered with the Board on September 4, 2008, pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, Appelrouth failed to timely file an annual report for 2013 and 2014.

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondent in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

C. Subsequent Events

3. The Board instituted these proceedings on September 10, 2014.

4. On September 15, 2014, Appelrouth filed its annual report for 2013 and an amendment thereto.

5. On September 23, 2014, Appelrouth filed a second amendment to its annual report for 2013, and filed its annual report for 2014.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Appelrouth is censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(C) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), Appelrouth's registration is temporarily suspended for a period of one year from the date of the issuance of this Order; and

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act, and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000 is imposed upon Appelrouth. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Appelrouth shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer pursuant to instructions provided by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter, which identifies Appelrouth as a respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover letter and money order or check shall be sent to Office of the Secretary, Attention: Phoebe W. ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Iftikhar A. Dar, CPA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-012 December 8, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Iftikhar A. Dar, CPA ("Respondent" or "Dar") and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report in 2012, 2013 and 2014 and timely pay an annual fee in 2014.

I.

On September 10, 2014, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") (as amended) and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, Dar did not file an answer indicating the firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted,

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1] that:

A. Respondent

1. Dar is a proprietorship located in Valley Stream, New York. Dar is licensed by the New York State Education Department to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. 052646). The firm registered with the Board on May 17, 2011, pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, Dar failed to timely file an annual report for 2012, 2013 and 2014.

3. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, Dar failed to timely pay its annual fee in 2014.

C. Subsequent Events

4. The Board instituted these proceedings on September 10, 2014. Dar failed to file an answer pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5421(b).

5. On October 28, 2014, Dar paid its annual fee for 2014.

6. On October 28, 2014, Dar filed its annual reports for 2012, 2013 and 2014.

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

7. On November 3, 2014, Dar filed a Form 1-WD to request leave to withdraw its registration from the Board.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Dar is censured; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act, and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000 is imposed upon Dar. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Dar shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer pursuant to instructions provided by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter, which identifies Dar as a respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover letter and money order or check shall be sent to Office of the Secretary, Attention: Phoebe W. Brown, Secretary, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

V.

Upon performance by Dar of Part IV above, pursuant to PCAOB Rule 2107, the Board shall consider Dar's Form 1-WD and whether to grant it leave to withdraw. In doing so, the Board shall not take into consideration its findings contained in Part III herein.

ISSUED BY THE BOARD.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Riley and Company PLLC, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-013 December 8, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Riley and Company PLLC ("Respondent" or "Riley") and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report in 2013 and 2014 and timely pay an annual fee in 2013 and 2014.

I.

On September 10, 2014, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") (as amended) and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, Riley did not file an answer indicating the firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted,

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1] that:

A. Respondent

1. Riley is a corporation located in Houston, Texas. Riley is licensed by the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. C07672). The firm registered with the Board on April 5, 2005, pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, Riley failed to timely file an annual report for 2013 and 2014.

3. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, Riley failed to timely pay its annual fee in 2013 and 2014.

C. Subsequent Events

4. The Board instituted these proceedings on September 10, 2014. Riley did not file an answer pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5421(b).

5. On October 28, 2014, Riley paid its annual fee for 2013 and 2014.

6. On October 28, 2014, Riley filed its annual reports for 2013 and 2014.

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

ORDER

7. On November 3, 2014, Riley filed a Form 1-WD to request leave to withdraw its registration from the Board.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Riley is censured; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act, and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000 is imposed upon Riley. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Riley shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer pursuant to instructions provided by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter, which identifies Riley as a respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover letter and money order or check shall be sent to Office of the Secretary, Attention: Phoebe W. Brown, Secretary, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Southwest CPA, LLC, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-014 December 8, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Southwest CPA, LLC ("Respondent" or "Southwest") and revoking Respondent's registration. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report in 2012, 2013 and 2014 and failure to pay an annual fee in 2012, 2013 and 2014.

I.

On September 10, 2014, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") (as amended) and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, Southwest did not file an answer indicating the firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted,

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1] that:[2]

A. Respondent

1. Southwest is a limited liability company located in Bradenton, Florida. Southwest is licensed by the Florida Department of Business & Professional Regulation to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. AD67345). The Firm registered with the Board on January 31, 2012 pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, Southwest failed to timely file an annual report for 2012, 2013 and 2014.

3. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, Southwest failed to pay its annual fee for 2012, 2013 and 2014.

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2] The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of (1) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (2) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

C. Subsequent Events

4. The Board instituted these proceedings on September 10, 2014. Southwest failed to file an answer pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5421(b).

5. On October 6, 2014, Southwest filed its annual reports for 2012, 2013 and 2014.

6. To date, Southwest has not paid its annual fee for 2012, 2013, and 2014.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Southwest is censured; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Southwest is revoked.

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Timpson Garcia, LLP, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-015 December 8, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Timpson Garcia, LLP ("Respondent" or "Timpson"); temporarily suspending Respondent's registration for a period of one year from the date of the issuance of this Order, and imposing a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report in 2012, 2013, and 2014.

I.

On September 10, 2014, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") (as amended) and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, Timpson did not file an answer indicating the firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1] that:[2]

A. Respondent

1. Timpson is a limited liability partnership located in Oakland, California. Timpson is licensed by the California Board of Accountancy to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. PAR 5673). The firm registered with the Board on October 22, 2003, pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, Timpson failed to timely file an annual report for 2012, 2013, and 2014.

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2] The sanctions that the Board is imposing on Respondent in this Order may be imposed only if a respondent's conduct meets one of the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5). The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of: (A) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (B) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

C. Subsequent Events

3. The Board instituted these proceedings on September 10, 2014.

4. On October 30, 2014, Timpson filed its annual reports for 2012, 2013 and 2014.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Timpson is censured;

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(C) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), Timpson's registration is temporarily suspended for a period of one year from the date of the issuance of this Order; and

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act, and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty in the amount of $1,000 is imposed upon Timpson. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. Timpson shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer pursuant to instructions provided by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order, certified check, bank cashier's check or bank money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter, which identifies Timpson as a respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover letter and money order or check shall be sent to Office of the Secretary,

ORDER MAKING FINDINGS AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Walker & Associates, CPA, PA, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-016 December 8, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is censuring Walker & Associates, CPA, PA ("Respondent" or "Walker") and revoking Respondent's registration. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings concerning Respondent's failure to timely file an annual report in 2013 and 2014 and failure to pay an annual fee in 2013 and 2014.

I.

On September 10, 2014, the Board instituted disciplinary proceedings pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 ("Act") (as amended) and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(2) and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Board determined that good cause was shown to make the hearing in this proceeding public. As permitted by Section 105(c)(2) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5203, the Division of Enforcement and Investigations consented to making the hearing in this proceeding public. Prior to submitting its Offer of Settlement, Walker did not file an answer indicating the firm's consent or lack of consent to making the hearing public.

II.

In response to these proceedings, and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent has submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to entry of this Order Making Findings and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds[1] that:[2]

A. Respondent

1. Walker is a corporation located in Charlotte, North Carolina. Walker is licensed by the North Carolina Board of Accountancy to engage in the practice of public accounting (License No. 31023). The firm registered with the Board on November 16, 2010, pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Violations

2. Pursuant to Section 102(d) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2200, Annual Report, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must file with the Board an annual report on Form 2 . . . ." PCAOB Rule 2201, Time for Filing Annual Report, sets forth that the deadline for filing the annual report is June 30 of each year. In violation of Section 102(d) of the Act and Rule 2200, Walker failed to timely file an annual report for 2013 and 2014.

3. In addition, pursuant to Section 102(f) of the Act, PCAOB Rule 2202, Annual Fee, provides that "[e]ach registered public accounting firm must pay an annual fee to the Board on or before July 31 . . . ." In violation of Rule 2202, Walker failed to pay its annual fee for 2013 and 2014.

C. Subsequent Events

4. The Board instituted these proceedings on September 10, 2014.

5. On November 9, 2014, Walker filed its annual reports for 2013 and 2014.

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2] The Board finds that Respondent's conduct described in this Order meets the conditions set out in Section 105(c)(5)(A) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7215(c)(5), which provides that certain sanctions may be imposed in the event of (1) intentional or knowing conduct, including reckless conduct, that results in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard; or (2) repeated instances of negligent conduct, each resulting in a violation of the applicable statutory, regulatory, or professional standard.

ORDER

6. To date, Walker has not paid its annual fees for 2013 and 2014.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), Walker is censured; and

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(A) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(1), the registration of Walker is revoked.

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Alexander Thompson Arnold PLLC, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-017 December 8, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is (1) censuring the registered public accounting firm Alexander Thompson Arnold PLLC ("ATA," "Firm," or "Respondent"); (2) imposing upon the Firm a civil money penalty in the amount of $2,500; and (3) requiring the Firm to undertake certain remedial measures, including to establish policies and procedures, directed toward satisfying independence criteria applicable to audits of brokers and dealers. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that the Firm violated a rule of the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") as a result of having prepared financial statements that were filed with the Commission for a registered broker-dealer audit client and thus impairing its independence.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings,

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[1]

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds that:

A. Respondent

1. ATA is a registered public accounting firm with offices in ten locations in Tennessee and Kentucky. At all relevant times, the Firm was licensed by the Tennessee State Board of Accountancy (license nos. 29, 196, 358, 359, 360, 361, 472, 883, 890, 909, 2826, 3994) and the Kentucky State Board of Accountancy (license nos. 486, B 486). The Firm, formed in 1997, is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Summary

2. ATA prepared the financial statements for a broker-dealer audit client ("Broker-Dealer") for the year ended December 31, 2012. As a result, the Firm was not independent of the Broker-Dealer under auditor independence criteria established by the Commission and made applicable by Exchange Act Rule 17a-5(f)(3) to audits of brokers and dealers.[2] The Firm nevertheless audited the financial statements and issued an audit report that the Broker-Dealer included with the financial statements it filed with the Commission. In the audit report, the Firm represented that the audit had been performed in accordance with Generally Accepted Auditing Standards ("GAAS"). Because GAAS requires independence, however, that representation violated Rule 17a-

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2] Exchange Act Rule 17a-5, referenced throughout this Order as "Rule 17a-5," is found at 17 C.F.R. § 240.17a-5. The rule provisions set out herein are those in effect during, and applicable to, the relevant conduct. On July 30, 2013, the Commission adopted certain amendments to Rule 17a-5. See Broker-Dealer Reports, SEC Exchange Act Release No. 34-70073 (July 30, 2013), 78 Fed. Reg. 51910 (Aug. 21, 2013). Among other things, the amendments to Rule 17a-5 require that audits of brokers and dealers be performed in accordance with PCAOB standards, effective for audits of fiscal years ending on or after June 1, 2014. In addition, Rule 17a-5 provides that the auditor must be independent in accordance with Rule 2-01 of Commission Regulation S-X. At the time of the relevant conduct, that requirement was set out in Rule 17a-5(f)(3). It is now set out in Rule 17a-5(f)(1).

5(i), which required the audit report to state whether the audit was made in accordance with GAAS.

C. Respondent Violated a Commission Rule

3. Rule 17a-5(d)(1) requires, among other things, that "[e]very broker or dealer registered pursuant to section 15 of the [Securities Exchange] Act [of 1934] shall file annually, on a calendar or fiscal year basis, a report which shall be audited by an independent public accountant." Rule 17a-5(d)(2) states that "[t]he annual audited report" filed by a registered broker or dealer, among other things, "shall contain a Statement of Financial Condition . . . , a Statement of Income, a Statement of Cash Flows, a Statement of Changes in Stockholders' or Partners' or Sole Proprietor's Equity, and [a] Statement of Changes in Liabilities Subordinated to Claims of General Creditors."

4. Rule 17a-5(e)(1)(i) states: "An audit shall be conducted by a public accountant who shall be in fact independent as defined in paragraph (f)(3) of this section herein, and he shall give an opinion covering the statements filed pursuant to paragraph (d) . . . ." Rule 17a-5(f)(3) states: "An accountant shall be independent in accordance with the provisions of § 210.2-01(b) and (c) of this chapter."

5. Rule 17a-5(g) requires that "[t]he audit shall be made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards." Rule 17a-5(i) requires that "[t]he accountant's report shall . . . [s]tate whether the audit was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards."

6. GAAS requires auditors to maintain strict independence from their audit clients.[3] "[I]f an auditor's report states that its audit was in accordance with GAAS when the auditor was not independent, then it has violated Rule 17a-5(i)."[4]

7. Pursuant to Rule 17a-5(f)(3), certain of the Commission's auditor independence criteria described in Rules 2-01(b) and (c) of Regulation S-X apply to audits of brokers and dealers.[5] The applicable provisions include Rule 2-01(c)(4), which states in part:

> An accountant is not independent if, at any point during the audit and professional engagement period, the accountant provides the following non-audit services to an audit client:
>
> (i) Bookkeeping or other services related to the accounting records or financial statements of the audit client. Any service, unless it is reasonable to conclude that the results of these services will not be subject to audit procedures during an audit of the audit client's financial statements, including:
>
> . . .
> (B) Preparing the audit client's financial statements that are filed with the Commission or that form the basis of financial statements filed with the Commission . . . .

8. The Firm served as the auditor of the Broker-Dealer's December 31, 2012 financial statements. At all relevant times, the Broker-Dealer was a "broker" and "dealer," as defined in Section 110 of the Act and PCAOB Rules 1001(b)(iii) and 1001(d)(iii), and was not an "issuer," as defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

9. In February 2013, the Broker-Dealer filed with the Commission a Form X-17A-5 Part III for the year ended December 31, 2012. Included in that filing was an audit report signed by the Firm dated February 26, 2013. That report stated, among other things, that the Firm audited the Broker-Dealer's financial statements "in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in [the] United States of America."

[5] Not all independence criteria described in Rule 2-01(c) apply to audits of brokers and dealers. As the Commission has explained, those audits "are not subject to the partner rotation requirements or the compensation requirements of the Commission's independence rules [Rules 2-01(c)(6) and (c)(8)] because the statute mandating those requirements is limited to issuers," and they "are not subject to the audit committee pre-approval requirements or the cooling-off period requirements for employment [Rules 2-01(c)(7) and (c)(2)(iii)(B)] because those requirements only reference issuers." Firm staff added a checkmark under "Yes" alongside the pre-printed sub-item reading, "Preparation of financial statements."

11. Firm staff obtained from the Broker-Dealer in January and February 2013 various documents including a trial balance as of December 31, 2012, a "Trial Balance Worksheet," a "Grouping Schedule Report," and a Form X-17A-5 Part IIA that Firm staff understood had been filed by the Broker-Dealer with the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority ("FINRA") and that bore the header "FOCUS Report (Financial and Operational Combined Uniform Single Report)." That Form X-17A-5 Part IIA contained, among other things, three financial statements: a Statement of Financial Condition as of December 31, 2012 ("FOCUS Statement of Financial Condition"), a Statement of Income (Loss) for the period October 1, 2012 through December 31, 2012 ("FOCUS Statement of Income"), and a Statement of Changes in Ownership Equity for the period October 1, 2012 through December 31, 2012 ("FOCUS Statement of Changes in Ownership Equity").

12. Firm staff used the above documents obtained from the Broker-Dealer to prepare the Statement of Financial Condition as of December 31, 2012, as well as the Statement of Income and Statement of Changes in Stockholders' Equity for the year ended December 31, 2012, filed by the Broker-Dealer with the Commission in February 2013.

13. In preparing the Statement of Financial Condition and Statement of Income filed by the Broker-Dealer with the Commission, Firm staff aggregated line items and changed line item descriptions as compared to corresponding information in the documents obtained from the Broker-Dealer. Moreover, Firm staff added to the filed Statement of Financial Condition two asset-related captions not found in the above documents obtained from the Broker-Dealer, and classified asset line items by listing them under one or the other.

14. In preparing the Statement of Changes in Stockholders' Equity, Firm staff included information for that portion of 2012—January 1, 2012 through September 30, 2012—not reflected in the FOCUS Statement of Changes in Ownership Equity. Firm staff also included a line item amount found in each of the trial balance, the Trial Balance Worksheet, and the Grouping Schedule Report, but changed the line item description.

ORDER

15. Firm staff also prepared the Statement of Comprehensive Income and Statement of Cash Flows for the year ended December 31, 2012, as well as drafted the notes to the Broker-Dealer's financial statements, all of which were filed by the Broker-Dealer with the Commission in February 2013.

16. Firm staff provided the Broker-Dealer with a set of draft financial statements on February 26, 2013 for management approval.

17. As a result of the Firm's conduct in preparing the financial statements, including the notes thereto, the Firm was not independent of the Broker-Dealer under the independence criteria established by the Commission in Rule 2-01(c)(4) of Regulation S-X, which Rule 17a-5 made applicable to the audit of the Broker-Dealer's financial statements. As the Commission explained in adopting Rule 2-01(c)(4), providing such services for an audit client "impairs the auditor's independence because the auditor will be placed in the position of auditing the firm's work when auditing the client's financial statements. . . . In addition, keeping the books is a management function, the performance of which leads to an inappropriate mutuality of interests between the auditor and the audit client."[6]

18. The Firm violated Rule 17a-5(i) by representing in its audit report that it had performed the audit of the Broker-Dealer's December 31, 2012 financial statements in accordance with GAAS when in fact, because of the independence impairment described above, the audit had not been performed in accordance with GAAS. That violation constituted a violation of the provisions of the securities laws relating to the preparation and issuance of audit reports and the obligations and liabilities of accountants with respect thereto.

ORDER

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer.

Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), the Firm is censured.

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty of $2,500 is imposed upon the Firm. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. The Firm shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer pursuant to instructions provided by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter, which identifies the Firm as a respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover letter and money order or check shall be sent to Office of the Secretary, Attention: Phoebe W. Brown, Secretary, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006.

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(G) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(9), the Firm is required:

1. within ninety (90) days from the date of this Order, to establish policies and procedures, or revise and/or supplement existing policies and procedures, for the purpose of providing the Firm with reasonable assurance of compliance with applicable independence requirements, including those requirements of Rule 2-01 of Regulation S-X applicable to an SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement (defined to mean an engagement to provide a report—whether an audit report, an examination report, or a review report—required under paragraph (d)(1)(i)(C) of Rule 17a-5, as amended);

ORDER

2. within ninety (90) days from the date of this Order, to establish a policy of ensuring training, whether internal or external, on an annual or more frequent regular basis, concerning applicable independence requirements, including those requirements of Rule 2-01 of Regulation S-X applicable to an SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement, of any Firm audit personnel who participate in any way in the planning or performing of any SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement;

3. within ninety (90) days from the date of this Order and before the Firm's commencement of any SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement (or, where the Firm by the date of this Order has already commenced but not completed such an engagement, before the Firm's release of its report), to ensure training pursuant to the policy described in paragraph C(2) above on at least one occasion;

4. to provide a copy of this Order—

a. within (30) days from the date of this Order, to all audit personnel employed by, or associated with (as defined in PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i)), the Firm as of the date of this Order,

b. within (30) days from the date of this Order, to any client of the Firm as of the date of this Order for which the Firm has performed or has been engaged to perform an SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement,

c. before the commencement of any SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement, to any future client for which the Firm is engaged within three (3) years of the date of this Order to perform such an audit; and

5. to certify in writing to the Director of the Division of Enforcement and Investigations, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006, the Firm's compliance with paragraphs C(1) through C(4)(b) above. The certification shall identify the undertakings, provide written evidence of compliance in the form of a narrative, and be supported by exhibits sufficient to demonstrate compliance. The Firm shall submit such certification within one hundred twenty (120) days from the date of this Order. The Firm shall also submit such additional evidence of and information concerning

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Dean Dorton Allen Ford, PLLC, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-018 December 8, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is (1) censuring the registered public accounting firm Dean Dorton Allen Ford, PLLC ("DDAF," "Firm," or "Respondent"); (2) imposing upon the Firm a civil money penalty in the amount of $2,500; and (3) requiring the Firm to undertake certain remedial measures, including to establish policies and procedures, directed toward satisfying independence criteria applicable to audits of brokers and dealers. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that the Firm violated a rule of the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") as a result of having prepared financial statements that were filed with the Commission for a registered broker-dealer audit client and thus impairing its independence.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings,

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[1]

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds that:

A. Respondent

1. DDAF is a registered public accounting firm with offices in Lexington and Louisville, Kentucky. It is a member firm of the McGladrey Alliance. At all relevant times, the Firm was licensed by the Kentucky State Board of Accountancy (license nos. 56, B 56). The Firm, formed in 1982, is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Summary

2. DDAF prepared the financial statements for a broker-dealer audit client ("Broker-Dealer") for the year ended December 31, 2012. As a result, the Firm was not independent of the Broker-Dealer under auditor independence criteria established by the Commission and made applicable by Exchange Act Rule 17a-5(f)(3) to audits of brokers and dealers.[2] The Firm nevertheless audited the financial statements and issued an audit report that the Broker-Dealer included with the financial statements it filed with the Commission. In the audit report, the Firm represented that the audit had been performed in accordance with Generally Accepted Auditing Standards ("GAAS"). Because GAAS requires independence, however, that representation violated Rule 17a-5(i), which required the audit report to state whether the audit was made in accordance with GAAS.

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2] Exchange Act Rule 17a-5, referenced throughout this Order as "Rule 17a-5," is found at 17 C.F.R. § 240.17a-5. The rule provisions set out herein are those in effect during, and applicable to, the relevant conduct. On July 30, 2013, the Commission adopted certain amendments to Rule 17a-5. See Broker-Dealer Reports, SEC Exchange Act Release No. 34-70073 (July 30, 2013), 78 Fed. Reg. 51910 (Aug. 21, 2013). Among other things, the amendments to Rule 17a-5 require that audits of brokers and dealers be performed in accordance with PCAOB standards, effective for audits of fiscal years ending on or after June 1, 2014. In addition, Rule 17a-5 provides that the auditor must be independent in accordance with Rule 2-01 of Commission Regulation S-X. At the time of the relevant conduct, that requirement was set out in Rule 17a-5(f)(3). It is now set out in Rule 17a-5(f)(1).

ORDER

C. Respondent Violated a Commission Rule

3. Rule 17a-5(d)(1) requires, among other things, that "[e]very broker or dealer registered pursuant to section 15 of the [Securities Exchange] Act [of 1934] shall file annually, on a calendar or fiscal year basis, a report which shall be audited by an independent public accountant." Rule 17a-5(d)(2) states that "[t]he annual audited report" filed by a registered broker or dealer, among other things, "shall contain a Statement of Financial Condition . . . , a Statement of Income, a Statement of Cash Flows, a Statement of Changes in Stockholders' or Partners' or Sole Proprietor's Equity, and [a] Statement of Changes in Liabilities Subordinated to Claims of General Creditors."

4. Rule 17a-5(e)(1)(i) states: "An audit shall be conducted by a public accountant who shall be in fact independent as defined in paragraph (f)(3) of this section herein, and he shall give an opinion covering the statements filed pursuant to paragraph (d) . . . ." Rule 17a-5(f)(3) states: "An accountant shall be independent in accordance with the provisions of § 210.2-01(b) and (c) of this chapter."

5. Rule 17a-5(g) requires that "[t]he audit shall be made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards." Rule 17a-5(i) requires that "[t]he accountant's report shall . . . [s]tate whether the audit was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards."

6. GAAS requires auditors to maintain strict independence from their audit clients.[3] "[I]f an auditor's report states that its audit was in accordance with GAAS when the auditor was not independent, then it has violated Rule 17a-5(i)."[4]

7. Pursuant to Rule 17a-5(f)(3), certain of the Commission's auditor independence criteria described in Rules 2-01(b) and (c) of Regulation S-X apply to audits of brokers and dealers.[5] The applicable provisions include Rule 2-01(c)(4), which states in part:

> An accountant is not independent if, at any point during the audit and professional engagement period, the accountant provides the following non-audit services to an audit client:
>
> (i) Bookkeeping or other services related to the accounting records or financial statements of the audit client. Any service, unless it is reasonable to conclude that the results of these services will not be subject to audit procedures during an audit of the audit client's financial statements, including:
>
> . . .
> (B) Preparing the audit client's financial statements that are filed with the Commission or that form the basis of financial statements filed with the Commission . . . .

8. The Firm served as the auditor of the Broker-Dealer's December 31, 2012 financial statements. At all relevant times, the Broker-Dealer was a "broker" and "dealer," as defined in Section 110 of the Act and PCAOB Rules 1001(b)(iii) and 1001(d)(iii), and was not an "issuer," as defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

9. In February 2013, the Broker-Dealer filed with the Commission a Form X-17A-5 Part III for the year ended December 31, 2012. Included in that filing was an audit report signed by the Firm dated January 25, 2013. That report stated, among other things, that the Firm audited the Broker-Dealer's financial statements "in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America."

[5] Not all independence criteria described in Rule 2-01(c) apply to audits of brokers and dealers. As the Commission has explained, those audits "are not subject to the partner rotation requirements or the compensation requirements of the Commission's independence rules [Rules 2-01(c)(6) and (c)(8)] because the statute mandating those requirements is limited to issuers," and they "are not subject to the audit committee pre-approval requirements or the cooling-off period requirements for employment [Rules 2-01(c)(7) and (c)(2)(iii)(B)] because those requirements only reference issuers." See Exchange Act Release No. 34-70073 at II.E.

ORDER

10. The Firm's engagement letter with the Broker-Dealer for the audit of the Broker-Dealer's December 31, 2012 financial statements acknowledged that the Broker-Dealer might request that the Firm "perform accounting services necessary for the preparation of the financial statements," including "drafting the financial statements."

11. Firm staff prepared and included in the Firm's audit documentation an "MRAM [McGladrey Risk Assessment Model] Risk Assessment & Client Acceptance" form noting that the Broker-Dealer's management "prepares the entity's audited financial statements and related disclosures with significant assistance/revision necessary from the independent auditor" (emphasis added) and assigning a corresponding risk of "Medium" to this aspect of the engagement.

12. Firm staff also prepared and included in the Firm's audit documentation a form titled "0808 FSR Financial Statement Preparation." This form stated in pre-printed text that "[a]uditors of financial statements subject to SEC independence are prohibited from performing certain prohibited services, including bookkeeping and financial statement preparation services" and noted that the form was "used to document the engagement team's compliance with this prohibition." The text added to the form by Firm staff included: a list of items obtained from the Broker-Dealer, such as a trial balance, general ledger detail, and a FOCUS report, as well as schedules concerning cash flow, changes in members' equity, and changes in liabilities subordinated to claims of general creditors; a statement that Firm staff prepared the Broker-Dealer's financial statements based on this information and based on related inquiries to the Broker-Dealer, then provided those drafts to the Broker-Dealer, which the Broker-Dealer's management "review[ed] and approve[d]"; and the engagement team's conclusion that these activities by the Firm constituted only a "clerical task" and a "word processing function" that did "not impair our independence."

13. Firm staff used the trial balance obtained from the Broker-Dealer to prepare the Broker-Dealer's Statement of Financial Condition as of December 31, 2012 and Statement of Income for the year ended December 31, 2012 filed with the Commission. In preparing these two financial statements, Firm staff aggregated line items and changed line item descriptions as compared to corresponding information in the trial balance.

14. Firm staff used general ledger detail and information resulting from inquiries to the Broker-Dealer's management to prepare the Broker-Dealer's Statement of Changes in Stockholders' Equity and Statement of Cash Flows for the year ended December 31, 2012 filed with the Commission. In preparing these two financial statements, Firm staff aggregated line items, changed line item descriptions, and changed non-line-item text as compared to corresponding information in, and added text absent from, the general ledger detail and other documents obtained by the Firm from the Broker-Dealer.

15. Firm staff emailed the Broker-Dealer a set of draft financial statements on January 23, 2013 for management approval.

16. As a result of the Firm's conduct in preparing the financial statements, the Firm was not independent of the Broker-Dealer under the independence criteria established by the Commission in Rule 2-01(c)(4) of Regulation S-X, which Rule 17a-5 made applicable to the audit of the Broker-Dealer's financial statements. As the Commission explained in adopting Rule 2-01(c)(4), providing such services for an audit client "impairs the auditor's independence because the auditor will be placed in the position of auditing the firm's work when auditing the client's financial statements. . . . In addition, keeping the books is a management function, the performance of which leads to an inappropriate mutuality of interests between the auditor and the audit client."[6]

17. The Firm violated Rule 17a-5(i) by representing in its audit report that it had performed the audit of the Broker-Dealer's December 31, 2012 financial statements in accordance with GAAS when in fact, because of the independence impairment described above, the audit had not been performed in accordance with GAAS. That violation constituted a violation of the provisions of the securities laws relating to the preparation and issuance of audit reports and the obligations and liabilities of accountants with respect thereto.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer.

Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), the Firm is censured.

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty of $2,500 is imposed upon the Firm. All funds

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Goldman & Company CPAs P.C., Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-019 December 8, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is (1) censuring the registered public accounting firm Goldman & Company CPAs P.C. ("Goldman & Company," "Firm," or "Respondent"); (2) imposing upon the Firm a civil money penalty in the amount of $2,500; and (3) requiring the Firm to undertake certain remedial measures, including to establish policies and procedures, directed toward satisfying independence criteria applicable to audits of brokers and dealers. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that the Firm violated a rule of the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") as a result of having prepared financial statements that were filed with the Commission for a registered broker-dealer audit client and thus impairing its independence.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings,

PCAOB
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board

ORDER

Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[1]

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds that:

A. Respondent

1. Goldman & Company is a registered public accounting firm with offices in Marietta, Georgia. At all relevant times, the Firm was licensed by the Georgia Board of Accountancy (license no. ACF004707). The Firm, formed in 2002, is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Summary

2. Goldman & Company prepared the financial statements for a broker-dealer audit client ("Broker-Dealer") for the year ended December 31, 2012. As a result, the Firm was not independent of the Broker-Dealer under auditor independence criteria established by the Commission and made applicable by Exchange Act Rule 17a-5(f)(3) to audits of brokers and dealers.[2] The Firm nevertheless audited the financial statements and issued an audit report that the Broker-Dealer included with the financial statements it filed with the Commission. In the audit report, the Firm represented that the audit had been performed in accordance with Generally Accepted Auditing Standards ("GAAS"). Because GAAS requires independence, however, that representation violated Rule 17a-5(i), which required the audit report to state whether the audit was made in accordance with GAAS.

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2] Exchange Act Rule 17a-5, referenced throughout this Order as "Rule 17a-5," is found at 17 C.F.R. § 240.17a-5. The rule provisions set out herein are those in effect during, and applicable to, the relevant conduct. On July 30, 2013, the Commission adopted certain amendments to Rule 17a-5. See Broker-Dealer Reports, SEC Exchange Act Release No. 34-70073 (July 30, 2013), 78 Fed. Reg. 51910 (Aug. 21, 2013). Among other things, the amendments to Rule 17a-5 require that audits of brokers and dealers be performed in accordance with PCAOB standards, effective for audits of fiscal years ending on or after June 1, 2014. In addition, Rule 17a-5 provides that the auditor must be independent in accordance with Rule 2-01 of Commission Regulation S-X. At the time of the relevant conduct, that requirement was set out in Rule 17a-5(f)(3). It is now set out in Rule 17a-5(f)(1).

PCAOB

C. Respondent Violated a Commission Rule

3. Rule 17a-5(d)(1) requires, among other things, that "[e]very broker or dealer registered pursuant to section 15 of the [Securities Exchange] Act [of 1934] shall file annually, on a calendar or fiscal year basis, a report which shall be audited by an independent public accountant." Rule 17a-5(d)(2) states that "[t]he annual audited report" filed by a registered broker or dealer, among other things, "shall contain a Statement of Financial Condition . . . , a Statement of Income, a Statement of Cash Flows, a Statement of Changes in Stockholders' or Partners' or Sole Proprietor's Equity, and [a] Statement of Changes in Liabilities Subordinated to Claims of General Creditors."

4. Rule 17a-5(e)(1)(i) states: "An audit shall be conducted by a public accountant who shall be in fact independent as defined in paragraph (f)(3) of this section herein, and he shall give an opinion covering the statements filed pursuant to paragraph (d) . . . ." Rule 17a-5(f)(3) states: "An accountant shall be independent in accordance with the provisions of § 210.2-01(b) and (c) of this chapter."

5. Rule 17a-5(g) requires that "[t]he audit shall be made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards." Rule 17a-5(i) requires that "[t]he accountant's report shall . . . [s]tate whether the audit was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards."

6. GAAS requires auditors to maintain strict independence from their audit clients.[3] "[I]f an auditor's report states that its audit was in accordance with GAAS when the auditor was not independent, then it has violated Rule 17a-5(i)."[4]

audits of brokers and dealers.[5] The applicable provisions include Rule 2-01(c)(4), which states in part:

> An accountant is not independent if, at any point during the audit and professional engagement period, the accountant provides the following non-audit services to an audit client:
>
> (i) Bookkeeping or other services related to the accounting records or financial statements of the audit client. Any service, unless it is reasonable to conclude that the results of these services will not be subject to audit procedures during an audit of the audit client's financial statements, including:

> (B) Preparing the audit client's financial statements that are filed with the Commission or that form the basis of financial statements filed with the Commission . . . .

8. The Firm served as the auditor of the Broker-Dealer's December 31, 2012 financial statements. At all relevant times, the Broker-Dealer was a "broker" and "dealer," as defined in Section 110 of the Act and PCAOB Rules 1001(b)(iii) and 1001(d)(iii), and was not an "issuer," as defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

9. In February 2013, the Broker-Dealer filed with the Commission a Form X-17A-5 Part III for the year ended December 31, 2012. Included in that filing was an audit report signed by the Firm dated February 5, 2013. That report stated, among other things, that the Firm audited the Broker-Dealer's financial statements "in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America."

As the Commission has explained, those audits "are not subject to the partner rotation requirements or the compensation requirements of the Commission's independence rules [Rules 2-01(c)(6) and (c)(8)] because the statute mandating those requirements is limited to issuers," and they "are not subject to the audit committee pre-approval requirements or the cooling-off period requirements for employment [Rules 2-01(c)(7) and (c)(2)(iii)(B)] because those requirements only reference issuers." 10. Firm staff completed an "Engagement Acceptance and Continuance Form" in connection with the audit of the Broker-Dealer's December 31, 2012 financial statements ("Audit"). That form included a pre-printed item reading, "What services does the financial institution desire from our firm?" Firm staff added alongside that item the text, "We will prepare disclosures." This was a reference to the intention by Firm staff to prepare the notes to the Broker-Dealer's financial statements.

11. Firm staff obtained from the Broker-Dealer on January 2, 2013 various documents including a "Balance Sheet" and an "Income Statement." Firm staff also obtained from the Broker-Dealer on January 29, 2013 various documents including a Form X-17A-5 Part II that Firm staff understood had been filed by the Broker-Dealer with the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority ("FINRA") and that bore the header "FOCUS Report (Financial and Operational Combined Uniform Single Report)." That Form X-17A-5 Part II contained, among other things, two financial statements: a Statement of Financial Condition as of December 31, 2012 ("FOCUS Statement of Financial Condition") and a Statement of Income (Loss) for the period October 1, 2012 through December 31, 2012 ("FOCUS Statement of Income").

12. Firm staff used the above financial statements obtained from the Broker-Dealer—Balance Sheet, Income Statement, FOCUS Statement of Financial Condition, and FOCUS Statement of Income—to prepare the Statement of Financial Condition, Statement of Income, and Statement of Changes in Shareholder's Equity filed by the Broker-Dealer with the Commission in February 2013.

13. In preparing the Statement of Financial Condition and Statement of Income filed by the Broker-Dealer with the Commission, Firm staff aggregated line items and changed line item descriptions as compared to corresponding information in the financial statements obtained from the Broker-Dealer. Moreover, Firm staff included in the filed Statement of Financial Condition an additional asset line item contained in neither the Balance Sheet nor the FOCUS Statement of Financial Condition. Furthermore, Firm staff included in the filed Statement of Financial Condition amounts for three liability and equity line items that were different from those in the Balance Sheet, and amounts for two equity line items that were different from those in the FOCUS Statement of Financial Condition.

14. In preparing the Statement of Changes in Shareholder's Equity filed by the Broker-Dealer with the Commission, Firm staff added three columns of information not included in the FOCUS Statement of Financial Condition. Firm staff also changed a line item description, and included different amounts in all four line items, as compared to corresponding information in the FOCUS Statement of Financial Condition.

15. Firm staff obtained at various times from the Broker-Dealer four different documents purporting to reflect the Broker-Dealer's trial balance as of December 31, 2012. Firm staff used one of those trial balances to prepare the Broker-Dealer's Statement of Cash Flows, which was filed by the Broker-Dealer with the Commission.

16. Firm staff also drafted the notes to the financial statements filed by the Broker-Dealer with the Commission. Those notes included disclosures that the engagement partner described in a February 5, 2013 letter addressed to the Broker-Dealer's sole equity holder and president, and titled "Communication with Those Charged with Governance at or Near the Conclusion of the Audit," as "particularly sensitive because of their significance to financial statement users." Those notes also included a disclosure stating that the Broker-Dealer had few customers, that the departure of one or more of those customers would materially affect the Broker-Dealer's financial statements, and that the Broker-Dealer's management considered this risk "remote." The engagement partner, in a work paper titled "Going-concern Checklist," cited the inclusion and quality of that disclosure as the reason for the Firm's decision not to include a going concern paragraph in its audit opinion.

17. Firm staff emailed the Broker-Dealer a set of draft financial statements on February 3, 2013, and additional draft sets on February 5, 2013, for management approval.

18. As a result of the Firm's conduct in preparing the financial statements, including the notes thereto, the Firm was not independent of the Broker-Dealer under the independence criteria established by the Commission in Rule 2-01(c)(4) of Regulation S-X, which Rule 17a-5 made applicable to the audit of the Broker-Dealer's financial statements. As the Commission explained in adopting Rule 2-01(c)(4), providing such services for an audit client "impairs the auditor's independence because the auditor will be placed in the position of auditing the firm's work when auditing the client's financial statements. . . . In addition, keeping the books is a management function, the performance of which leads to an inappropriate mutuality of interests between the auditor and the audit client."[6]

19. The Firm violated Rule 17a-5(i) by representing in its audit report that it had performed the audit of the Broker-Dealer's December 31, 2012 financial statements in accordance with GAAS when in fact, because of the independence impairment described above, the audit had not been performed in accordance with GAAS. That violation constituted a violation of the provisions of the securities laws relating to the preparation and issuance of audit reports and the obligations and liabilities of accountants with respect thereto.

IV.

In view of the foregoing, and to protect the interests of investors and further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate, and independent audit reports, the Board determines it appropriate to impose the sanctions agreed to in Respondent's Offer.

Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that:

A. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(E) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(5), the Firm is censured.

B. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(D) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(4), a civil money penalty of $2,500 is imposed upon the Firm. All funds collected by the Board as a result of the assessment of this civil money penalty will be used in accordance with Section 109(c)(2) of the Act. The Firm shall pay this civil money penalty within 10 days of the issuance of this Order by (a) wire transfer pursuant to instructions provided by Board staff; or (b) United States postal money order; (c) made payable to the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board; (d) delivered to the Controller, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006; and (e) submitted under a cover letter, which identifies the Firm as a respondent in these proceedings, sets forth the title and PCAOB Release number of these proceedings, and states that payment is made pursuant to this Order, a copy of which cover letter and money order or check shall be sent to Office of the Secretary, Attention: Phoebe W. Brown, Secretary, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006.

C. Pursuant to Section 105(c)(4)(G) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 5300(a)(9), the Firm is required:

1. within ninety (90) days from the date of this Order, to establish policies and procedures, or revise and/or supplement existing policies and procedures, for the purpose of providing the Firm with reasonable assurance of compliance with applicable independence requirements, including those requirements of Rule 2-01 of Regulation S-X applicable to an SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement (defined to mean an engagement to provide a report—whether an audit report, an

2. within ninety (90) days from the date of this Order, to establish a policy of ensuring training, whether internal or external, on an annual or more frequent regular basis, concerning applicable independence requirements, including those requirements of Rule 2-01 of Regulation S-X applicable to an SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement, of any Firm audit personnel who participate in any way in the planning or performing of any SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement;

3. within ninety (90) days from the date of this Order and before the Firm's commencement of any SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement (or, where the Firm by the date of this Order has already commenced but not completed such an engagement, before the Firm's release of its report), to ensure training pursuant to the policy described in paragraph C(2) above on at least one occasion;

4. to provide a copy of this Order—

a. within (30) days from the date of this Order, to all audit personnel employed by, or associated with (as defined in PCAOB Rule 1001(p)(i)), the Firm as of the date of this Order,

b. within (30) days from the date of this Order, to any client of the Firm as of the date of this Order for which the Firm has performed or has been engaged to perform an SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement,

c. before the commencement of any SEC Registered Broker-Dealer Engagement, to any future client for which the Firm is engaged within three (3) years of the date of this Order to perform such an audit; and

5. to certify in writing to the Director of the Division of Enforcement and Investigations, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, 1666 K Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20006, the Firm's compliance with paragraphs C(1) through C(4)(b) above. The certification shall identify the undertakings, provide written evidence of compliance in the form of a narrative, and be supported by exhibits sufficient to demonstrate compliance. The Firm shall submit such certification within

ORDER INSTITUTING DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS, MAKING FINDINGS, AND IMPOSING SANCTIONS In the Matter of Lederman Zeidler Gray & Co., LLP, Respondent.	PCAOB Release No. 105-2014-020 December 8, 2014

By this Order, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("Board" or "PCAOB") is (1) censuring the registered public accounting firm Lederman Zeidler Gray & Co., LLP ("Lederman Zeidler Gray," "Firm," or "Respondent"); (2) imposing upon the Firm a civil money penalty in the amount of $2,500; and (3) requiring the Firm to undertake certain remedial measures, including to establish policies and procedures, directed toward satisfying independence criteria applicable to audits of brokers and dealers. The Board is imposing these sanctions on the basis of its findings that the Firm violated a rule of the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") as a result of having prepared financial statements that were filed with the Commission for a registered broker-dealer audit client and thus impairing its independence.

I.

The Board deems it necessary and appropriate, for the protection of investors and to further the public interest in the preparation of informative, accurate and independent audit reports, that disciplinary proceedings be, and hereby are, instituted pursuant to Section 105(c) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, as amended ("Act"), and PCAOB Rule 5200(a)(1) against Respondent.

II.

In anticipation of the institution of these proceedings and pursuant to PCAOB Rule 5205, Respondent submitted an Offer of Settlement ("Offer") that the Board has determined to accept. Solely for purposes of these proceedings and any other proceedings brought by or on behalf of the Board, or to which the Board is a party, and without admitting or denying the findings herein, except as to the Board's jurisdiction over Respondent and the subject matter of these proceedings, which is admitted, Respondent consents to the entry of this Order Instituting Disciplinary Proceedings,

PCAOB

ORDER

Making Findings, and Imposing Sanctions ("Order") as set forth below.[1]

III.

On the basis of Respondent's Offer, the Board finds that:

A. Respondent

1. Lederman Zeidler Gray is a registered public accounting firm with offices in Beverly Hills, California. At all relevant times, the Firm was licensed by the California Board of Accountancy (license no. 5364). The Firm, formed in 1989, is registered with the Board pursuant to Section 102 of the Act and Board rules.

B. Summary

2. Lederman Zeidler Gray prepared the financial statements for a broker-dealer audit client ("Broker-Dealer") for the year ended September 30, 2012. As a result, the Firm was not independent of the Broker-Dealer under auditor independence criteria established by the Commission and made applicable by Exchange Act Rule 17a-5(f)(3) to audits of brokers and dealers.[2] The Firm nevertheless audited the financial statements and issued an audit report that the Broker-Dealer included with the financial statements it filed with the Commission. In the audit report, the Firm represented that the audit had been performed in accordance with Generally Accepted Auditing Standards ("GAAS"). Because GAAS requires independence, however, that representation violated Rule 17a-5(i), which required the audit report to state whether the audit was made in accordance with GAAS.

[1] The findings herein are made pursuant to Respondent's Offer and are not binding on any other person or entity in this or any other proceeding.

[2] Exchange Act Rule 17a-5, referenced throughout this Order as "Rule 17a-5," is found at 17 C.F.R. § 240.17a-5. The rule provisions set out herein are those in effect during, and applicable to, the relevant conduct. On July 30, 2013, the Commission adopted certain amendments to Rule 17a-5. See Broker-Dealer Reports, SEC Exchange Act Release No. 34-70073 (July 30, 2013), 78 Fed. Reg. 51910 (Aug. 21, 2013). Among other things, the amendments to Rule 17a-5 require that audits of brokers and dealers be performed in accordance with PCAOB standards, effective for audits of fiscal years ending on or after June 1, 2014. In addition, Rule 17a-5 provides that the auditor must be independent in accordance with Rule 2-01 of Commission Regulation S-X. At the time of the relevant conduct, that requirement was set out in Rule 17a-5(f)(3). It is now set out in Rule 17a-5(f)(1).

C. Respondent Violated a Commission Rule

3. Rule 17a-5(d)(1) requires, among other things, that "[e]very broker or dealer registered pursuant to section 15 of the [Securities Exchange] Act [of 1934] shall file annually, on a calendar or fiscal year basis, a report which shall be audited by an independent public accountant." Rule 17a-5(d)(2) states that "[t]he annual audited report" filed by a registered broker or dealer, among other things, "shall contain a Statement of Financial Condition . . . , a Statement of Income, a Statement of Cash Flows, a Statement of Changes in Stockholders' or Partners' or Sole Proprietor's Equity, and [a] Statement of Changes in Liabilities Subordinated to Claims of General Creditors."

4. Rule 17a-5(e)(1)(i) states: "An audit shall be conducted by a public accountant who shall be in fact independent as defined in paragraph (f)(3) of this section herein, and he shall give an opinion covering the statements filed pursuant to paragraph (d) . . . ." Rule 17a-5(f)(3) states: "An accountant shall be independent in accordance with the provisions of § 210.2-01(b) and (c) of this chapter."

5. Rule 17a-5(g) requires that "[t]he audit shall be made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards." Rule 17a-5(i) requires that "[t]he accountant's report shall . . . [s]tate whether the audit was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards."

6. GAAS requires auditors to maintain strict independence from their audit clients.[3] "[I]f an auditor's report states that its audit was in accordance with GAAS when the auditor was not independent, then it has violated Rule 17a-5(i)."[4]

7. Pursuant to Rule 17a-5(f)(3), certain of the Commission's auditor independence criteria described in Rules 2-01(b) and (c) of Regulation S-X apply to audits of brokers and dealers.[5] The applicable provisions include Rule 2-01(c)(4), which states in part:

At all relevant times, the Broker-Dealer was a "broker" and "dealer," as defined in Section 110 of the Act and PCAOB Rules 1001(b)(iii) and 1001(d)(iii), and was not an "issuer," as defined in Section 2(a)(7) of the Act and PCAOB Rule 1001(i)(iii).

9. In November 2012, the Broker-Dealer filed with the Commission a Form X-17A-5 Part III for the year ended September 30, 2012. That report stated, among other things, that the Firm audited the Broker-Dealer's financial statements "in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America."
